ASKS PEACE TO FOIL REDS

WILSON LAYS ERIN'S FATE TO IRISH ENVOYS

Had Parley Fixed Till You 2 Meddled, Dunne Told.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C. Sept. 6.—[Special.]—President Wilson's views on the Irish question were set forth today in a memorandum submitted to the foreign relations committee by Frank P. Walsh and ex-Gov. Dunne of Illinois, purporting to give the substance of an interview they had with Mr. Wilson in Paris on June 11.

The memorandum shows that when Mr. Walsh urged the president to go personally into Ireland in an effort to get a better understanding of the Irish situation, the president showed signs of irritation. According to the memorandum, he replied:

"Now, Walsh, if it is your intention to go back to America and try to put me in bad, I am going to say when I go back that we were well on the way of getting Mr. De Valera and his associates over here; we were well on the way when you made it so difficult by your speeches in Ireland that we could not do it; that it was you gentlemen who kicked over the apple cart."

Told Plea Is Futile.

Mr. Walsh and Mr. Dunne, according to the memorandum, told the president they wanted him to secure a hearing for Ireland before the "big four." They said they had made a formal request to Secretary of State Lansing for safe conducts for De Valera, Griffith, and Plunkett, and had received a reply from him to the effect that it would be futile to make the reques.t

The president interrupted Mr. Walsh and said, "That is an official request, Mr. Walsh."

Mr. Walsh stated that he had not been able to disentangle official and unofficial business. He said, "What I am talking about is the denial of our request that Americans should intervene to get the safe couducts for these men."

The president said, "Well, of course since that time, gentlemen, you know the senate has passed a resolution upon the subject."

Recites Conditions in Erin.

Mr. Walsh said, "Well, the point of our request today is that if we are to assume that these men are not going to be allowed to come here, then we want to advise you that the people of Ireland are in actual physical captivity; that those who would speak for them are not allowed to come here, and are restrained by the force of an army of occupation."

Mr. Walsh informed the president that Ireland was "the most lawabiding country on the face of the earth," but that "unless some relief was given that the workers in self-defense would have to set up soviet governments."

The president said, "Of course, you should understand that no small nation of any kind has yet appeared before the committee of four, and there is an agreement among the committee of four that none can come unless unanimous consent is given by the whole committee."

Dunne Asks Question.

Mr. Dunne said: "Has no small nation complaining of injustice on the part of any of the victor nations ever appeared as yet?"

The president said, "There is no nation that has had its right considered by the peace conference except those that were actually concerned in the war. We have not attempted to inquire into ancient wrongs."

Mr. Walsh then said, "Mr. President, it is the present injustice and the guerrilla warfare that exists that we think should receive consideration. Suppose we present a case of this kind, a country in which a state of war actually exists. Do you mean to say, Mr. President, that you would just close the matter and let the war go on?"

"Why Pick On Me?" Wilson Asks.

The president replied, "I am only one of this conference, why should this whole thing be left to me?"

Mr. Walsh said, "We are leaving it to you, Mr. President, because you are the commanding figure in the peace conference, and because it was you who raised the hopes in the hearts of these people that they could come to you. We come to you because we are

CARPENTERS O.K. REFERENDUM ON WAGE UMPIRE

Make Condition That Material Men Must First Resume.

In spite of a plea from the mayor and arguments from a delegation of five members of the Carpenter Contractors' association, delegates to the Carpenters' District council refused last night to accept the proposal of the employers that the men should at once go back to work and let an umpire decide whether they shall be paid more than 92½ cents an hour.

They voted to stand pat on their demand for $1 an hour, but they also voted to let a referendum vote of the membership be taken, on condition that the material dealers first resume sales of material to anybody who desired it.

First Break in Line.

This is the first time the carpenters have made even a conditional agreement to resume work and let an umpire pass on their demands. However, the contractors pointed out that if material should be released the independent dealers, who have been paying $1 an hour, would then start out to gobble up all the work in sight.

Then again, according to Simon O'Donnell, president of the Chicago Building Trades council, the referendum may show the carpenters wish to hold out. He said on Friday:

"I am somewhat afraid of the vote, for I have an idea they may turn the proposition down.

Explains Employers' Plan.

At the meeting of the carpenters the delegation of the employers was headed by Henry J. Cohlgraff, Frank Streseurenter, Sumner Sollitt, William Illsley, and E. W. Sproul, who took seats at the front of the room near the chair of President William Brims of the union.

Mr. Brims said they were present to explain the offer of the contractors, so there would be no misunderstanding.

Mr. Cohlgraff, the first to be introduced, said:

"We are here to explain to the members of this council the plan suggested by the federal mediators, with which you are all more or less familiar.

"We agreed to pay wages of 92½ cents an hour from the time the men started back to work and let an umpire decide whether we are to pay $1 an hour."

Employer Voices Hope.

Mr. Sproul was next introduced. He aroused smiles when he said: "If the umpire should say you men are not worth even the 92½ cents an hour and that we should pay you only 80 cents, I for one will see that you get the 92½ cents an hour."

After the rest of the delegation had been heard and a number of questions asked the employers left the building. As they came out Mr. Cohlgraff was stopped by a TRIBUNE reporter, to whom he said:

"We just cleared up the proposition we offered, so they would understand it. I think that they are going to let an umpire be appointed and will vote tonight to go back to work on the terms."

Letter from the Mayor.

When they had gone President Brims started out by reading letters from P. F. Gill and Freeman J. Rhode, fed-

SEIZE BROKERS AS AIDS TO BIG ROBBERY RING

Confession Opens a Nation-Wide Inquiry.

Two arrests, both of Chicago business men, followed by a confession yesterday, brought to light the existence of a national ring of clearing houses for stolen securities through which hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of negotiable paper had passed.

The confession and the arrests also resulted in the recovery of some of the stolen securities—part of $104,000 loot taken from the State Bank of Middleton, Wis.

The two business men who were arrested are:

Henry B. Smith, an insurance broker, with an office in the Insurance Exchange building at 175 West Jackson boulevard.

Oscar L. Halberg, a diamond broker, with an office in room 736 of the Stewart building at 108 North State street.

Halberg is still being held where he can be questioned by State's Attorney Hoyne and his aids.

Smith Freed on Bonds.

Smith was a prisoner in the county jail until late in the afternoon. Then he was released on bonds of $50,000 by Judge Hugo Pam. These were furnished by E. J. Healey, a druggist at North Clark street and Austin avenue, and John and William McGovern, north side saloon keepers and professional bondsmen.

It was the efforts which had been made by outsiders for the release of Smith which led to disclosures of his arrest.

He had been arrested Thursday night as he was leaving his offices by detectives from the state's attorney's office, but his capture was kept secret while he was confronted with Halberg and told of his confession.

Friends Force Hoyne's Hand.

It had been the intention of the state's attorney's office to continue to kep the arrest secret until further secrets of the ring were learned and other arrests made. This plan was foiled, however, when friends of Smith hired lawyers who appeared before Judge Pam and sought to obtain a writ of habeas corpus for his release. This forced the state's attorney's hand and formal charges had to be preferred against the insurance broker.

He was charged with conspiracy, it being set forth that he had shared in the proceeds of the $104,000 Middleton robbery. Judge Pam then set his bonds for $50,000 and when he was unable to furnish bail for that amount, he was taken to the county jail, where he was held until the bondsmen came to his relief.

Even then the state's attorney and his aids tried to keep the identity of Halberg and the details of his confession a secret.

They admitted that a confession had been made, and also that other arrests of members of the bank robbers' clearing house ring had been named, and that their arrest would be sought.

$8,700 Reported Found.

They endeavored, however, to make it appear that the principal evidence they had against Smith was that when he was arrested $3,400 worth of Liberty bonds, war savings stamps, municipal bonds, and other securities taken from the Middleton bank had been found on him. They also charged that $5,300 more of the Middleton bank robbery booty had been found in bank vaults where it had been placed by Smith.

Smith himself revealed the identity of the man who had accused him. He did it when denying that the stolen property had been found in his possession.

"All I had when I was arrested were two insurance policies, a receipt for a payment on one of the policies, and two canceled checks upon a local bank," he said. "I had no Liberty bonds upon me and any one who says I did tells an untruth."

Names Alleged Aid.

Then he was asked if he had not been confronted with a man who had accused him of being the leader of a ring which operated a ring of clearing houses for robbers.

"You mean this fellow Halberg?" he asked. Then Halbreg was further identified by him.

He insisted, however, that he did

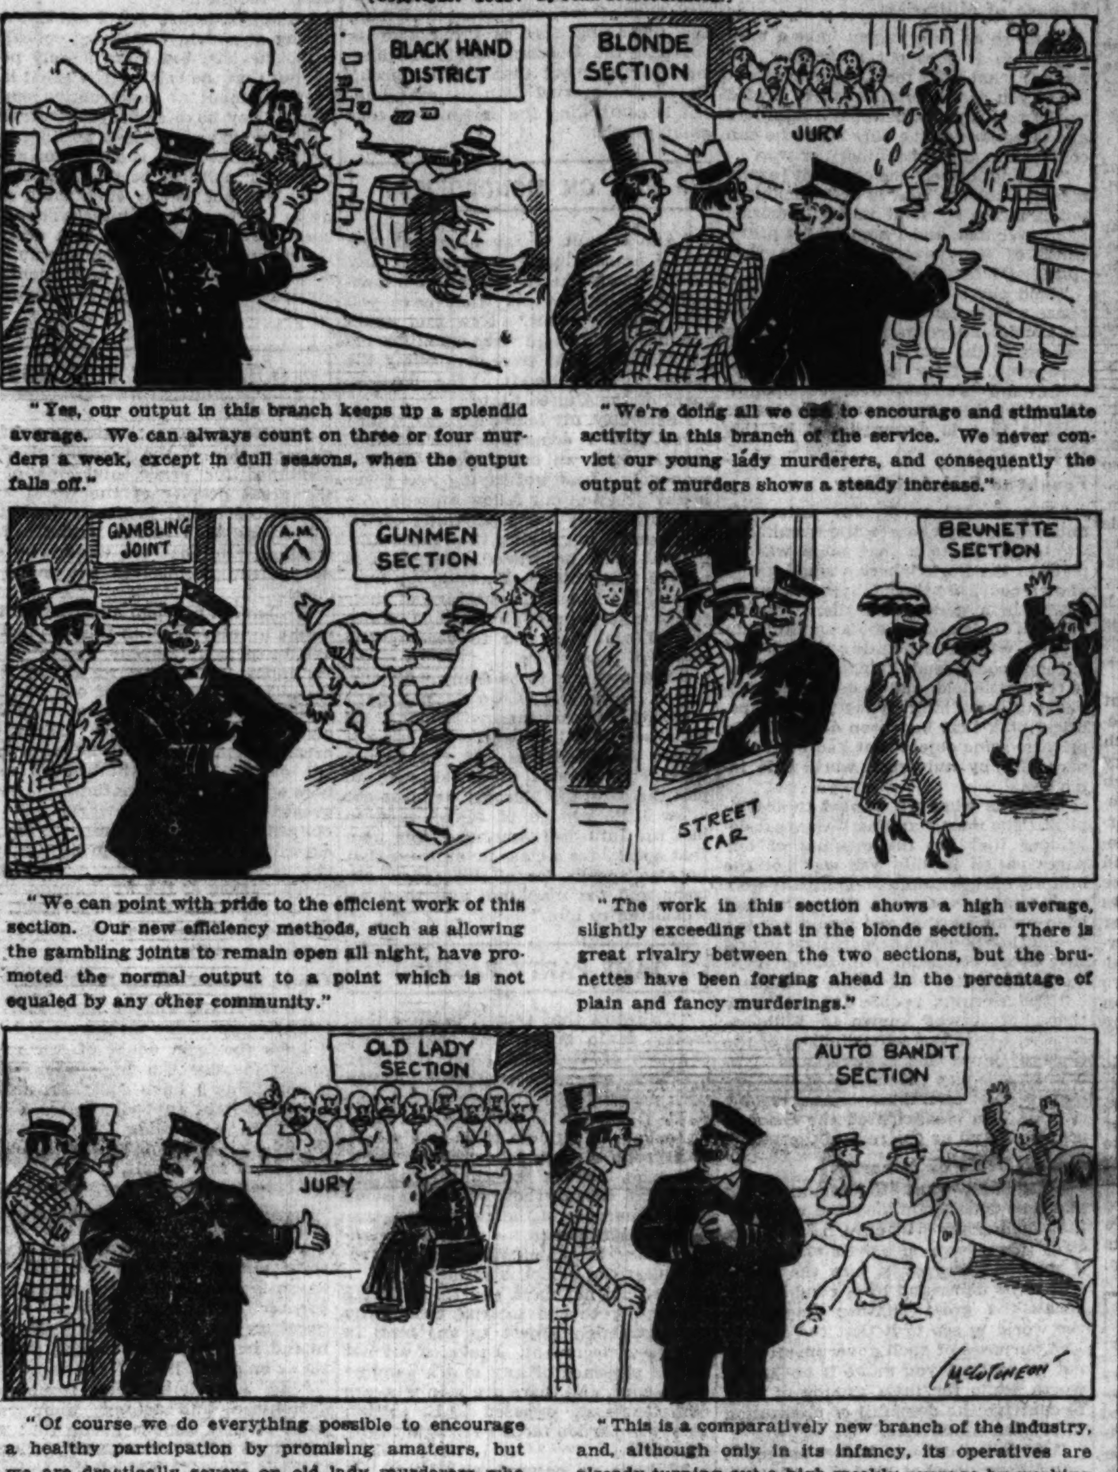
A THRIVING INDUSTRY

[Copyright: 1919: By John T. McCutcheon.]



"Yes, our output in this branch keeps up a splendid average. We can always count on three or four murders a week, except in dull seasons, when the output falls off."

"We're doing all we can to encourage and stimulate activity in this branch of the service. We never convict our young lady murderers, and consequently the output of murders shows a steady increase."

"We can point with pride to the efficient work of this section. Our new efficiency methods, such as allowing the gambling joints to remain open all night, have promoted the normal output to a point which is not equaled by any other community."

"The work in this section shows a high average, slightly exceeding that in the blonde section. There is great rivalry between the two sections, but the brunettes have been forging ahead in the percentage of plain and fancy murderings."

"Of course we do everything possible to encourage a healthy participation by promising amateurs, but we are drastically severe on old lady murderers who have lost their looks and figures."

"This is a comparatively new branch of the industry, and, although only in its infancy, its operatives are already turning out a high weekly average by working in eight hour shifts with overtime. They are among our most dependable murderers."

PEARL WHITE BARELY ESCAPES IN AUTO CRASH

Pearl White, motion picture star, narrowly escaped severe injury last night while making an appeal for the benefit for the Tanner orphans. Miss White was telling a crowd about the benefit at the Auditorium this afternoon from the running board of her automobile at Ashland avenue and Sixty-third street.

A small truck raced into the crowd and crashed into Miss White's machine. The star escaped injury by vaulting to safety almost as the crash came.

Miss White made a tour of the motion picture houses to aid the sale of the lower priced tickets for the benefit, which will be played in the Auditorium theater at 2:30 this afternoon. There are many choice seats at $1.50 and $1. No 50 cent seats have been sold so far.

The bill will have all star acts—the greatest collection of stars ever on a single bill.

The actors of the Equity association have sent out an appeal to the public to buy the lower priced seats, promising "the best show ever staged in Chicago," at their performance for the Tanner orphans.

Less Than 40,000 Yanks in Europe, Official Report

Washington, D. C., Sept. 6.—Less than 40,000 American soldiers remained in Europe on Sept. 2, according to the weekly demobilization figures issued by the war department today. The exact total was 38,794. The strength of the army on that date was 431,988, officers and men, of whom 823,798 were in this country. Soldiers en route home from Europe numbered 21,531. Enlistments now total 110,047, but the weekly rate had decreased from the high record established in July and August.

CANADIAN HAULS DOWN U. S. FLAG

London (Ont.) Official to Explain His Action to Higher Authorities.

LONDON, Ont., Sept. 6.—[Special.]—The action of a civic official in removing the American flag from the Canadian hero triumphal arch today has resulted in a storm of protest and a threatened withdrawal of American exhibits from Canada's national western fair; also the departure of fifteen tourist parties to Detroit, Mich., who prior to the incident had booked for the week-end here, en route from New York, Buffalo, Syracuse, Detroit, Chicago, and other western cities.

Officious Civic Employé.

The flag, with all other allied national flags, flew from the top of the triumphal arch. It has flown there for many months.

Today a civic officer, whose name has been withheld, ordered the removal of Old Glory. With its removal, American soldiers who had served in the Canadian army, American visitors summering here, and exhibitors at Canada's national fair asked the city officials for an explanation.

Will Make Inquiry.

All interested claim it is an insult to the flag and friendship and good feeling between the two countries has been jeopardized. A public meeting will be held by the fair and city officials to investigate who was responsible for the act.

American exhibitors give until Monday night for the flag to be again placed on the arch, failing which they will take all exhibits out of the country.

DROPS DEAD AT EXMOOR COUNTRY CLUB'S DANCE

Alonzo Tyner of Highland Park, a retired member of the clothing house of Edward V. Price & Co., dropped dead in the ballroom of the Exmoor Country club at 11 o'clock last night. He had just finished a dance with his wife.

His death, occurring as it did in the presence of from 300 to 400 members of the club and their friends, brought a sudden end to the festivities.

Mr. Tyner had gone to the club early in the day and had spent the afternoon playing golf. Later he attended a movie with his wife and then participated in the dance.

He was 50 years old and leaves, besides the widow, one son and two daughters.

C. W. FAIRBANKS' DAUGHTER SUES TO BREAK WILL

Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 6.—Alleging that Charles Warren Fairbanks was of unsound mind at the time a "pretended" will, disposing of property valued at more than $8,000,000, was attempted to be executed, Mrs. Adelaide Timmons, daughter of the former vice president of the United States, has filed suit here to break the will. Her brothers, several beneficiary institutions and Robert Fairbanks are named in the suit.

PERSHING'S SON CLIMBS ON BED TO TELL DAD OF RANK

BY EDWARD KNEASS.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Special Wireless Dispatch to The Tribune.]

ON BOARD THE LEVIATHAN AT SEA, Via Boston, Mass., Sept. 6.—The unofficial news that Gen. Pershing had been made a full general was first told to him by Warren, his 10 year old son.

Gen. Pershing was awakened in his quarters in the former kaiser's suite by the lad jumping on top of his dad, kissing, and congratulating him.

On the deck, after lunch, Gen. Pershing received the congratulations of the composite regiment officers and the officers of the Leviathan, while the army band played "Over There."

Gen. Pershing feels no different from what he did before the new grade was awarded him. He is proud of the honor, which he considers a compliment to the work of the officers and men of the A. E. F.

The weather is calm and warm. The Leviathan is making about twenty knots since leaving Brest.

Great Welcome Planned.

New York, Sept. 6.—Official plans for the reception and entertainment of Gen. Pershing from his arrival here Monday morning until his departure for Washington Thursday, as announced tonight by the mayor's committee of welcome to distinguished guests, leave the commander-in-chief of the American expeditionary forces scarcely a minute to himself, except for the few hours allotted for sleep.

Hundreds of peace and war water craft, including submarines and scores of airplanes, will go down the harbor to greet the general upon his arrival on the transport Leviathan, and will escort the vessel to her berth at Hoboken.

Officials to Greet General.

Vice President and Mrs. Thomas R. Marshall, Secretary of War and Mrs. Newton D. Baker, and a score of high military officers, headed by Gen. Peyton C. March, chief of staff, will be on board the welcoming ships.

From Hoboken Gen. Pershing will be brought to the battery on a police boat and escorted to the city hall, where he will be welcomed officially by Gov. Smith and Mayor Hylan.

From that moment the mayor's welcome committee will pilot Gen. Pershing from reception to luncheon to dinner to theater to supper, waiting only for morning to begin operations again—until he leaves on Thursday for Washington.

Millions to See Parade.

Millions of people, including hundreds of thousands of school children, will join in the welcome here to the general.

Every available policeman on the active and reserve lists, will be called to duty to keep the great crowds under control on Wednesday—"Pershing day"—when the general will ride down Fifth avenue at the head of a spectacular military pageant.

Plans have been made to have members of Gen. Pershing's family greet him at the steamship pier and accompany him to Manhattan on the day he arrives. Federal, state, city, military, and naval officials will join in the welcome.

"WINE FLOWING LIKE WATER" IS YUCATAN TRUTH

Monterey, Mex., Sept. 6.—More than $6,000,000 worth of liquor, including quantities of imported wines and whisky, were poured into the streets of Progreso and Merida, Yucatan, by order of the governor a few days ago, acting under the state prohibition law. There was a wild celebration during the pouring. Whether the owners will be reimbursed is not known.

BATTLEFIELDS AS THEY ARE TODAY

Philip Gibbs, the famous war correspondent, is revisiting the battle areas of Europe in order to describe the changes wrought by war and peace.

He will seek chiefly the human note and interest that underlie surface impressions.

The battlefields and districts which he saw laid in ruins will be pictured by Mr. Gibbs as they are today, contrasting these areas with what he knew them to be before and during the world conflict.

The first of Mr. Gibbs' dispatches will be published in The Tribune tomorrow.

WILSON CLAIMS TREATY DELAY PERILS WORLD

Says Monroe Creed Is Made Secure by Covenant.

Des Moines, Ia., Sept. 6.—A possibility that bolshevism may spread in threatening proportions to the United States, unless the peace treaty is ratified promptly, was suggested by President Wilson in an address in the Coliseum here tonight.

The whole world was waiting uneasily, he said, while the poison which had wrecked Russia was spreading among peoples who did not yet know what guarantees there were to be for liberty in the new world.

Labor and capital in the United States, he asserted, could not proceed intelligently with their settlements nor could great problems like the railroad situation be solved while the suspense continued.

Monroe Doctrine Safe.

Mr. Wilson defended the Shantung provision of the treaty and said the league covenant section referring to the Monroe doctrine had been inserted to "give the Monroe doctrine right of way in the western hemisphere." He declared it would do so.

The Monroe doctrine provision, he said, had been objected to as vague because it referred to "such regional understandings as the Monroe doctrine." This language was used, he said, because the other delegates thought it wise to make a specific reference to a policy of one country without leaving the way open for other nations to develop similar policies in their own localities.

Severe Blow at Critics.

The president tonight, as in Kansas City today, severely arraigned those who oppose the treaty. He said he had the greatest respect for the United States senate, but that there were some members of that body who were opposing the treaty for private reasons. The others who were conscientious he described as "ignorant."

Mr. Wilson declared that the issue "was greater than the senate" and that he was "prepared to fight it out in office or out of office, to the end."

TEXT OF HIS SPEECH

President Wilson's address followed an invocation by Bishop Longley, who prayed that the senate "might see the light." The president's address follows:

"You make my heart very warm with your generous welcome. The world is inflamed and profoundly disturbed, and we are met to discuss the measures by which its spirit can be quieted and its affairs turned to the right courses of human life.

"My fellow countrymen, the world is desperately in need of the settled conditions of peace; it cannot wait much longer, and it is waiting upon us. That is the thought that is burdensome upon my heart tonight—that the world is waiting for the verdict of the nation to which it looked for leadership, which it thought would be the last that would ask the world to wait.

Age Old Passions Aroused.

"My fellow citizens, the world is not at peace. I suppose that it is difficult for one who has not had some touch of the hot passion of the other side of the sea to realize how all the passions that have been slumbering for ages have been uncovered and released by the tragedy of this war.

"We speak of the tragedy of this, but the tragedy that lay back of it was greater than the war itself, because back of it lay long ages in which the legitimate freedom of men was suppressed. Back of it lay long ages of recurrent war in which little groups of men closeted in capitols determined whether the sons of the land over which they ruled should go upon the field and shed their blood for what?

"For liberty? No. Not for liberty, but for the aggrandizement of those who ruled them. And this had been slumbering in the hearts of men. They had felt the suppression of it. They had felt the mastery of those whom they had not chosen as their master. They had felt the oppression of laws—the laws which did not admit them to the equal exercises of human right.

"Now all of this is released and un-

PRESIDENT SAYS OPPONENTS OF LEAGUE MISLEAD PEOPLE

Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 6.—The text of President Wilson's address made at Convention hall here today follows:

"I came back from Paris, bringing one of the greatest documents of human history. One of the things that made it great was that it was penetrated throughout with the principles to which America has devoted her life.

"Let me hasten to say that one of the most delightful circumstances of the work on the other side of the water was that I discovered that what we called American principles had penetrated to the heart and to the understanding, not only of the great peoples of Europe, but to the hearts and understandings of the great men who were representing the peoples of Europe.

"I think that I can say that one of the things that America has had most at heart throughout her existence has been that there should be substituted for the brutal processes of war the friendly processes of consultation and arbitration, and that is done in the covenant of the league of nations. I am very anxious that my fellow citizens should realize that that is the chief topic of the covenant of the league of nations, the greater part of its provisions.

Discussions Before War.

"The whole intent and purpose of the document are expressed in provisions by which all the member states agree that they will never go to war without first having done one or other of two things, either submitted the matter in controversy to arbitration, in which case they agree to abide by the verdict, or submitting it to discussion in the counsel of the league of nations, and for that purpose they consent to allow six months for the discussion, and, whether theyl like the opinion expressed or not, that they will not go to war for three months after that opinion has been expressed, so that you have, whether you get arbitration or not, nine months' discussion, and I want to remind you that that is the central principle of some thirty treaties entered into between the United States of America and some thirty other sovereign nations, all of which are confirmed by the senate of the United States.

Like Treaties of Present.

"We have such an agreement with France; we have such an agreement with Great Britain; we have such an agreement with practically every great nation except Germany, which refused to enter into such an arrangement because, my fellow citizens, Germany knew that she intended something that didn't bear discussion and that if she had submitted the purpose which led to this war to so much as one month's discussion she never would have dared go into the enterprise against mankind which she finally did go into (applause), and therefore I say that this principle of discussion is the principle already adopted by America.

"And what is the compulsion to do this? The compulsion is this, that if any member state violates that promise to submit either to arbitration or discussion, it is thereby ipso facto deemed to have committed an act of war against all the rest.

"Then you will ask, do we at once take up arms and fight them? No. We do something very much more terrible than that. We absolutely boycott them.

WORLD WILL DISARM

"There was another thing that we needed to accomplish, that is accomplished in this document. We wanted disarmament and this document provides in the only possible way for disarmament by common agreement. Observe, my fellow citizens, that just now the world is a member of this partnership except Germany, and inasmuch as Germany has accepted a limitation of her army to 100,000 men, I don't think for the time being she may be regarded as a great fighting nation.

"And you know, my fellow citizens, that armaments mean great standing armies, and great stores of war material. They do not mean burdensome taxation merely, they do not mean merely compulsory military service, which saps the economic strength of the nation, but they mean the building up of a military class. Again and again my fellow citizens, in the conference at Paris, we were face to face with this situation:

"That in dealing with a particular civil government we found that they would not dare to promise what their general staff was not willing that they should promise; and that they were dominated by the military machine which they had created, nominally for their own defense, but really whether they willed it or not—for the provocation of war.

Menace of Militarism.

"And so as long as you have a military class it does not make any difference what your form of government is. If you are determined to be armed to the teeth, you must obey the orders and directions of the only men who can control the great machinery of war.

"It is not merely the cost of it [armament], although that is overwhelming, but it is the spirit of it, and America has never had, and I hope in the providence of God never will have that spirit. [Great applause.]

"And there is no other way to dispense with great armaments except by the common agreement of the fighting nations of the world. And here is the agreement. They promise disarmament, and promise to agree upon a plan. But there was something else we wanted that is accomplished by this treaty.

Fought to End Autocracy.

"We wanted to destroy autocratic authority everywhere in the world. We wanted to see to it that there was no place in the world where a small group of men could use their fellow citizens as pawns in a game; that there was no place in the world where a small group of men, without consulting their fellow citizens, could send their fellow citizens to the battlefield, and to deal in accomplishing something dynastic, some political plan that had been conceived in private, some object that had been prepared for by universal, world-wide intrigue.

"That is what we wanted to accomplish. The most startling thing that developed itself at the opening of our participation in this war was not the military preparation of Germany—we were familiar with that, though we had been dreaming that she would not use it—but her political preparation; to find that every community in the civilized world was penetrated by her intrigue.

"The German people did not know that, but it was known in Wilhelmstrasse, where the central offices of the German government were, and Wilhelmstrasse was the master of the German people; and this war, my fellow citizens, has emancipated the German people as well as the rest of the world.

Oppose Rule of Minority.

"We don't want to see anything like that done again, because we know that democracy will only have to destroy that form of government; and if we don't destroy it now the job is still to be done, and by a combination of all the great fighting peoples of the world to see to it that the aggressive purposes of such government cannot be realized you make it no longer worth while for little groups of men to contrive the downfall of civilization in private conference.

"My fellow citizens, it does not make any difference what kind of a minority governs you, if it is a minority. And the thing we must see to is that no minority anywhere masters the majority. That is at the heart, my fellow citizens, of the tragical things that are happening in that great country which we long to help and can find no way that is effective to help—I mean the great realm of Russia.

TRAGEDY OF RUSSIA

"The men who are now measurably in control of the affairs of Russia represent nobody but themselves. They have again and again been challenged to call a constitutional convention. They have again again and again been challenged to prove that they are some kind of a mandate even from a single class of their fellow citizens. And they dared not attempt it; they have no mandate from anybody.

"There are only thirty-four of them, I am told, and there were more than thirty-four men who used to control the destinies of Europe from Wilhelmstrasse. There is a closer monopoly of power in Petrograd and Moscow than there ever was in Berlin, and the thing that is intolerable is not that the Russian people are having their way but that another group of men more cruel than the czar himself is contrplling the destinies of that great people.

WAR ON MONOPOLIES

"And I want to say here and now that I am against the control of any minority anywhere. Search your own economic history and what have you been uneasy about? Now and again you have said there were small groups of capitalists who were controlling the industry and therefore the development of the United States.

"Seriously, my fellow citizens, if that is so (and I sometimes have feared that it was), we must break up that monopoly. I am not saying that there is any group of our fellow citizens who are consciously doing anything of the kind, and I am saying that these allegations must be proved. But, if it is proved that any class, any group anywhere, is without the suffrage of their fellow citizens in control of our affairs then I am with you to destroy the power of that group.

"We have got to be frank with ourselves, however. If we do not want minority government in Germany, we must see to it that we do not have it in the United States. If you do not want little groups of selfish men to plot the future of Europe, we must not allow little groups of selfish men to plot the future of America. Any man that speaks for a class must prove that he also speaks for all his fellow citizens and for mankind; and then we will listen to him."

TAME PARTY PASSIONS

"To reject that treaty, to alter that treaty, is to impair one of the first charters of mankind. And yet there are men who approach the question with passion, with private passion and party passion; who think only of some immediate advantage to themselves or to a group of their fellow countrymen, and who look at the thing with the jaundiced eyes of those who have some private purpose of their own.

"When at last in the annals of mankind they are gibbetted they will regret that the gibbet is so high.

"I would not have you think that I am trying to characterize those who conscientiously object to anything in this great document. I take off my hat in the presence of any man's genuine conscience, and there are men who are conscientiously opposed to it, though they will pardon me if I say ignorantly opposed.

"I have no qaurrel with them. It has been a great pleasure to confer with some of them and to tell them as frankly as I would have told my most intimate friend the whole inside of my mind and every other mind that I knew anything about that had been concerned with the conduct of affairs at Paris, in order that they might understand this thing and go with the rest of us in the confirmation of what is necessary for the peace of the world.

"I have no intolerant spirit in the matter; but I also assure you that, from the bottom of my feet to the top of my head, I have got a fighting spirit about it.

Must Offer a Better.

"And if anybody dares to defeat this great experiment, then they must gather together the counselors of the world and do something better.

"If there is a better scheme, I for one will subscribe to it; but I want to say now, as I said the other night, that it is a case of put up or shut up. Negation will not save the world. Opposition constructs nothing. Opposition is the specialty of those who are bolshevistically inclined.

"Again I assure you I am not comparing any of my respected colleagues to bolshevists, but I am merely pointing out that the bolshevistic spirit lacks every element of constructive opposition. They have destroyed everything and they have proposed nothing.

"And while there is a common abhorrence for political bolshevism, I hope there will not be any such thing grow up in our country as international bolshevism, the bolshevism that destroys the constructive work of men who have conscientiously striven to cement the good feeling of the great peoples of the world.

QUESTION OF FILIPINOS

"Is it not a great vision, my fellow citizens, this of the thoughtful world combined for peace, and this of all the great peoples of the world associated to see that justice is done, that the strong who intend wrong are restrained, and that the weak who cannot defend themselves are made secure.

We have a problem ahead of us that ought to interest us in this connection. We have promised the people of the Philippine islands that we will set them free. It has been one of our perplexities how we should make them safe after we set them free. Under this arrangement they will be safe from the outset. They will become members of the league of nations and every great nation in the world will be obliged to respect and preserve against external aggression from any quarter the territorial integrity and political independence of the Philippines.

"It simplifies one of the most perplexing problems that has faced the American public.

Cause Greater Than Senate.

"If anything that I have said has left the impression on your mind that I have the least doubt of the result, please dismiss the impression. And if you think I have come out on this errand to fight anybody, please dismiss that from your mind. I have not come to fight or antagonize any individual or body of individuals.

"I have, let me say, without the slightest affectation, the greatest respect for the senate of the United States, but, my fellow citizens, I have come out to fight for a cause. That cause is greater than the senate; it is greater than the government. It is as great as the cause of mankind, and I intend, in office or out, to fight that battle as long as I live.

"My ancestors were troublesome Scotchmen, and among them were some of that famous group that were known as the Covenanters. Very well, there is the covenant of the league of nations. I am a covenanter."

covered and men glare at one another and say, 'now we are free, and what shall we do with our freedom?'

Bolsheviks in America.

"Men look you calmly in the face in America and say they are for revolution, when that sort of revolution means government by terror, government by force, not government by vote. It is the negative of everything that is American, but it is spreading, and as long as disorder continues, as long as the world is kept waiting for the answer to the question, 'What kind of a peace are we going to have?'

"What kind of guarantees are there to be behind that peace, that poison will not constantly spread, more and more rapidly spread, until it may even be that this beloved land of ours will be distracted by it? That is what is concerning me, my fellow countrymen. I know the splendid steadiness of the American people, but, my fellow citizens, the whole world needs that steadiness, and the American people are the make-weight in the fortunes of mankind.

"How long are we going to debate into which school we will throw that magnificent equipoise that belongs to us? How long shall we be kept waiting for the answer whether the world may trust us or despise us? They have looked to us for leadership; they have looked to us for example; they have built their peace upon the basis of our suggestion; that great volume that contains the treaty of peace is drawn along the specifications laid down by the American government.

World Stands Amazed.

"And now the world stands amazed because an authority in America hesitates whether it will indorse an American document or not.

"You know what the necessity of peace is. Why, my fellow countrymen, political liberty can exist only when there is peace; social reform can take place only when there is peace. The settlement of every question that concerns our daily life waits for peace.

"I have been receiving delegations in Washington of men engaged in the service of the government temporarily in the administration of the railways, and I have had to say to them: 'My friends, I cannot tell what the railways can earn until commerce is restored to its normal course. Until I can tell what the railroads can earn I cannot suggest what the increase of rates, of freight rates and of passenger rates, should be to meet the increased wages, if the rates must be increased. I cannot yet tell whether it will be necessary to increase the rates or not, and I must ask you to wait.'

Many Adjustments Needed.

"But they are not the only people that have come to see me. There are all sorts of adjustments necessary in this country. I have asked representatives of capital and labor to come to Washington next month to confer, confer about the fundamental things of our life at the present time—that is to say, the conditions of labor.

LABOR WORLD PROBLEM

"Do you realize, my fellow citizens, that all through the world the one central question of civilization is what shall be the conditions of labor? The profoundest unrest in Europe is due to the doubt what shall be the conditions of labor. And I need not tell you that the unrest is spreading to America.

"In the midst of the document, in the midst of the treaty of peace, is a Magna Charta, a great guarantee for labor and all labor shall have the councils of the world devoted to the discussion of its conditions and of its betterment, and labor all over the world is waiting as to whether America is going to take part in these conferences or not.

"The conference of the men who sat at Paris was such that they put it in the document that the first meeting of the labor conference under that part of the treaty should take place in Washington upon the invitation of the president of the United States.

"I am going to issue that invitation whether we can attend the conference or not. But think of the mortification, think of standing by in Washington itself and seeing the world take counsel upon the fundamental matter of civilization without taking part. The thing is inconceivable, but it is true.

Whole World Waiting.

"The world is waiting, waiting to see—not whether we will take part, but whether we will serve and lead, for it has expected us to lead.

"I want to testify that the most touching and thrilling thing that has ever happened to me was what happened almost every day when I was in Paris. Delegations from all over the world came to me to solicit the friendship of America. They frankly told us that they were not sure of anybody else that they could trust, but that they did absolutely trust us to do them justice and to see that justice was done.

"Why, some of them came from countries which I have, to my shame, to admit I never heard of before, and I had to ask as privately as possible what language they spoke. Fortunately they always had an interpreter, but I always wanted to know at least what family of languages they were speaking.

"But the touching thing was that from the ends of the earth, from little pocketed valleys where I did not know that a separate people lived, there came men—men of dignity, men of intellectual parts, men entertaining in their thoughts and in their memories of a great tradition, some of the oldest people of the world came and sat at the feet of the youngest nation in the world and said 'teach us the way to liberty.'

"That is the attitude of the world. And reflect, my fellow countrymen, upon the reaction, the reaction of despair, that would come if America said 'We do not want to lead you. You must do without our advice. You must shift without it.'

AMUSED BY FOES

"Now how are we going to bring about peace, peace for which everything waits? We cannot bring it about by doing nothing. I have been very much amazed and very much amused, if I could be amused in such critical circumstances, to see that the statesmanship of some gentlemen consists in the very interesting proposition that 'we do nothing at all.' I had heard of 'stand pat' before, but I never before heard of standpatism going to the length of saying, 'It is none of our business and we don't care what happens to the rest of the world.'

"The isolation of the United States is at an end, not because we chose to go into the politics of the world, but because of the sheer genuius of this people and the growth of our power we have become a determining factor in the history of mankind and, after you have become a determining factor, you cannot remain isolated whether you want to or not.

"Isolation ended by the processes of history not by the processes of our independent choice. And the processes of history merely fulfill the prediction of the men who founded our republic.

HOME OF LIBERTY

"Go back and read some of the immortal sentences of the men who assisted to frame this government and see how they set up a standard to which they intended that the nations of the world should rally and said to the people of the world: 'Come to us. This is the home of liberty. This is the place where mankind can learn how to govern their own affairs and straighten out their own difficulties.' And the world did come to us.

"Look at your neighbor; look at the statistics of your states and those of the United States, how they have come, their hearts full of hope and confidence from practically every nation in the world to constitute a portion of our strength and of our hope, and a contribution to our achievement.

"Sometimes I feel like taking off my hat to some of those immigrants. I was born in America, and I could not help it, but they chose to be Americans. They were not born Americans. They saw this star in the west rising over the rest of the world.

Vision of Liberty.

"They said, 'That is the star of hope and the star of salvation, we will set our footsteps towards the west and join that great body of men whom God has blessed with the vision of liberty.'

"I honor those men. I say they made a deliberate choice, which showed that they saw what the drift and history of America was. I am very grateful, I might add, in parenthesis, that I did not have to make the choice.

"I am grateful that ever since I can remember I have breathed this blessed air of freedom. I am grateful every instinct in me, every drop of blood in my person, stands up and shouts for all the traditions of the United States.

"But some gentlemen are shouting now about that. They are saying: 'Yes, we made a great promise to mankind, but it will cost too much to redeem it.'

Not Spirit of America.

"My fellow citizens, that is not the spirit of America. You can't have peace, you can't have even your legitimate part in the business of the world unless you are partners with the world.

"You are going to say to the world, 'We will stand off and see what we get out of this,' and they will say to us: 'You don't get anything out of it.' If you tell them this, instead of being friends; you will be rivals and antagonists, then you are going to get just exactly what rivals and antagonists always get, just as little as can be grudgingly passed to you.

AMERICA WORLD HOPE

"Is any business man here willing to say that the world is going bankrupt and that the business of the world will stop? Is there any man here who does not know that America is the only nation left by the war in a position to see that the world does go on with its business?

"I don't like to argue this thing on this basis, but if you want to talk business I am ready to talk business. If it is a matter of how much you are going to get from your money, you won't get half a much as antagonists as you will get as partners.

"Have you known of that thing which is so lightly spoken of, altruism? Believe me, my fellow Americans, the only people in the world who are going to represent the harvests of the people, are the people who can entertain ideals and can follow ideals to the death.

GAVE NEW MORALE

"I was saying to another audience today that one of the most beautiful stories I knew is the story I heard in France about the first effect of the American soldiers when they got over there. The French did not believe at first; the British did not believe that we could get finally 2,000,000 men over there. The most they hoped at first was for a few American soldiers to restore their morale, for, let me say, their morale was gone.

"The beautiful story to which I refer is this, the testimony that all of them gave, that they got their morale back the minute they saw the eyes of those boys.

"There was no curtain in front of the retina of those eyes, they were American eyes, they were eyes that had seen visions. They were eyes which brought with them a great ardor for a supreme cause and the reason those boys never stopped was that their eyes were lifted to the horizon, they saw a city not built with hands, they saw a citadel, towards which their steps were turned, the oracles of God himself.

Germans Knew Americans.

"On the battlefield were found German orders to commanders here and there to see to it that the Americans did not get lodgment in particular spots because, if they did they never could get them out. They had come to go the whole way towards their realization of the teachings which their fathers had handed down to them.

"There never were crusaders that went to the Holy Land in old days we read about that were more thoroughly dedicated to a loyal cause than these gallant sons of America.

"And so, my fellow citizens, you have got to make up your mind because, after all, it is you who are going to make up the minds of this country. I don't owe a report or the slightest responsibility to anybody but you.

"I don't mean only you in this hall, though I am free to admit this is just about as good a sample of America as I could find anywhere and the sample looks mighty good to me. (Applause) But you and the millions besides you thoughtful, responsible American men and women all over this country, they are my bosses and I am mighty glad to be their servant.

"I did not come out on this journey to fight anybody, but to report to you. And I am free to predict that if you credit the report there wont be any fighting. It is not only necessary that we should make peace with Germany and make peace with Austria and see that peace is made with Turkey and Bulgaria, that is not all of it, but it is a very dangerous beginning if you don't do something to it.

Treaty Is American.

"It has been said that the peace with Germany, and the same is true of the pending peace with Austria, that it was made upon American specifications, not unwillingly. Don't let me leave the impression on your mind that the representatives of America in Paris had to insist and force their principles upon the rest, that is not true.

"Those principles were accepted before we got over there and the men we dealt with carried them out in absolute good faith."

"But they were our principles and out of them will come this, that there must be a free Poland, for example. I wonder if you realize what that means. We had to collect the pieces of Poland. For a long time one piece had belonged to Russia, and we can't get a clear title to that yet. Another part belonged to Austria. We have the title to that. Another part belonged to Germany, and we have settled the title to that. But we found Germany also in other pieces of territory occupied predominately or exclusively by patriotic Poles.

Creation of Poland.

"We said to Germany, you will have to give that up. That belongs to Poland, not because it is ground, but these people are Poles and want to be members of Poland, and it is not our business to force any sovereignty upon anybody who does not want to live under it. And when we had determined the boundaries of Poland, we set them up and recognized them as an independent republic. There is a minister, a diplomatic representative of the United States at Prague right now by virtue of our formal recognition of the republic of Poland."

Discussing the Shantung settlement. Mr. Wilson said he did not like that settlement "any better than you did," but that England and France had bound themselves without any qualifications to see to it that Japan got the German rights there and that the "most that could be got out of it was the Japanese promise that she would give up every item of sovereignty which Germany would otherwise have enjoyed in Shantung province, and that they would retain in the province only the economic concessions such as other nations already had elsewhere in China, though you do not hear anything about that, concessions in the railway and the mines which had become attached to the railway for operative purposes."

"But suppose that you say that is not enough," he continued, "very well, then, stay out of the treaty and how will that accomplish anything? England and France are bound and cannot escape their obligation. Are you going to institute a war against Japan and France and England to get Shantung back for China?"

SLAP AT OPPONENTS

Kansas City, Mo.; Sept. 6.—[Special.]—In his address on the league of nations in Convention hall today President Wilson took up the subject from a new angle. He characterized the opposition as bolshevistic in effect, as having the tendency to tear down instead of building up. He said he had the greatest respect for the United States senate, but that there were some members of that body who were opposing the treaty for private reasons. The others who were conscientious he described as "ignorant."

The president takes on more fire, more simple, direct, fighting talk as he goes westward and comes into closer contact with the people. There is less of the academic counsel. He spoke of his Scotch ancestors this morning as covenantors, and said, dramatically, lifting his right hand:

"I, too, am a covenantor."

Will Keep Up Battle.

He declared that he had not come out to fight anybody, but to fight for a cause as great as mankind. "And I intend," he said, "in office or out, to fight that battle as long as I live."

To reject or impair the treaty, he said, would be to "impair the first great charter of mankind."

The league paves the way to disarmament, Mr. Wilson said today. He held up again the picture of the military machine that would be necessary in this country if America decided to stay out of the union. America never had the spirit of armament, he said, and was applauded.

KEWANEE VOTES FOR PARK.

Wewanee, Ill., Sept. 6.—By a majority of 196 Kewanee voted today at a special election to establish a park district. This is the first step in acceptance of the offer of $50,000 from E. E. Baker of this city for the purchase and equipment of public parks.

WILSON CERTAIN LEAGUE VICTORY HAS BEEN GAINED

President Says That His Opponents Can Only Delay.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Des Moines, Ia., Sept. 6.—[Special.]—President Wilson is confident that his campaign for the peace treaty and league of nations covenant is a success.

The receptions given him here tonight and in the other cities he has visited in the last three days led him to tell newspaper men that he was sure the people would back the league as soon as they learned from him the whole truth about it.

No Hint of Compromise.

Mr. Wilson has not given an inkling that he is willing to compromise on the issue. He told his audience tonight, as he has told all others, that the safest thing to do is not to qualify it but to accept it as it is. He assured them that there is not a single ambiguous sentence in the document. Applause followed this point and came on every other occasion when he predicted that the league would be ratified.

The president thinks the trip has shown plainly that the people want peace and want it quickly, and that they are for some kind of a league to make that peace permanent.

Mr. Wilson has sensed the burning interest in other subjects besides the league of nations. The people want to hear about labor problems and about the high cost of living. He intends from now on to dwell more on these things.

Blames Foes of Treaty.

He said that until peace came he could not dispose of many problems. All sorts of adjustments were waiting, he said, and he placed the burden of the delay on the opposition to the treaty.

Taking the railroad situation as an example, he said he could not tell what the railroads could earn until peace was restored. If he could not tell what the roads would earn he could not tell what wages he could pay, what increases to grant, what rates, if any, to raise to meet these increased expenses.

The president said that he considered it the crowning achievement of his life to put his name to the peace treaty. He said some wanted to amend or defeat the treaty, but that they cannot do it.

"Can't do it," came from the audience.

There were several other demonstrations of approval of what Mr. Wilson said during his address tonight. When he declared that the only way to keep peace was to guarantee it, the crowds in the Coliseum rose to their feet and applauded.

Oppose War With Japan.

"Would you go to war to hand back Shantung to China?" he asked.

"No, no," came from the crowd.

Another outbreak came when Mr. Wilson said that he had no doubt regarding the ultimate outcome.

"The only thing that can be accomplished by the opposition," he said, "is delay. The ultimate outcome will be the triumphant acceptance of the treaty and the league."

Only "a handful of men," he said, were opposing the treaty.

As the president gets farther away from Washington he is meeting greater crowds. He addressed more than 15,000 persons in Convention hall in Kansas City this morning and many of his remarks were met with demonstrations by the huge gathering.

The Kansas City streets were deeply lined with people. The banking and retail district, through which he passed with his escort, was solidly packed and brimming with noise and color.

Hundreds Greet President.

Several hundred persons met the president's special at St. Joseph, Mo., where the train stopped for three minutes on its way from Kansas City to Des Moines. The crowd swarmed around the observation platform of the president's car and called for a speech, but, acting on the advice of Dr. Cary T. Grayson, his personal physician, Mr. Wilson refrained from making one and exchanged friendly greetings.

All along the route decorations were in evidence. On the slope of a railway out near St. Joseph a family of country people had taken a vantage point to catch a glimpse of the president, the men struggling to hold an eight foot American flag in a stiff breeze and others waving smaller flags.

At Des Moines last night Mr. Wilson found the streets near the station blocked with people, kept back by a line of soldiers as straight as an arrow.

Cheered by Big Crowds.

Every street was filled with cheering spectators and there was an enthusiastic demonstration when he entered the hall.

After the meeting the president was driven to the Hotel Fort Des Moines, where he will remain the night and Sunday. He was glad of the rest. He said today that it was a "long time between baths." This is his first night off the train.

FESS COMPARES WILSON TRIP WITH JOHNSON'S TOUR

Washington, D. C., Sept. 6.—[Special.]—President Wilson's speaking tour was compared with one made by Andrew Johnson by Representative Fess of Ohio, chariman of the Republican congressional committee, today.

"President Wilson's swing around the circle is not the first of its kind," Mr. Fess said. "Andrew Johnson's contest with congress was the first instance where the executive undertook to compel legislative subordination to executive decree.

"After a contest which was marked by some bitterness, as displayed in public utterances on both sides and the exercise of the veto power quite freely, President Johnson publicly declared he would carry the contest to the country. In September, 1867, he started on his famous trip, making speeches to great crowds on the way.

"Since President Wilson left Washington I have reread the reported utterances of President Johson. He referred to congress as actuated by personal pique, sectional bitterness, and ignorant prejudice. His language was caustic and his statement dogmatic. He spoke with the air of assurance of his ground that at times approached egotism, if not arrogance. He assured the country that his position must win because he was right. At Chicago he minimized the opposition and referred to opponents, some as ignorant of the real issue and others as disloyal to the best interests of their country.

"Thus far the two famous 'swings around the circle' are not unlike except Johnson's contest was with the house of representatives on the question of that body's authority over the qualifications over elections of its own members, which the house claimed belonged to it."

ARREST CHICAGO MAN FOR MAKING FACES AT WILSON

Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 6.—John Lewis Poley, 27 years old, who said his home is in Chicago, was arrested during the parade this morning by Fred Tate, superintendent of the secret service office here, for making faces at President Wilson.

Poley was standing on a corner when he was arrested by Tate and turned over to A. M. Brown, a soldier, and taken to the police station. His sanity will be investigated.

When arrested Poley was holding a drinking cup in his hand and was first laughing and then crying. He was wearing a bathing suit beneath his clothing.

TREATY LOSES MORE BALLAST IN SENATE SEA

Simmons Goes Over to Reservationists; Others Waver.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 6.—[Special.]—The administration forces in the senate, supporting President Wilson in his demand for the ratification of the peace treaty without the dotting of an "i" or the crossing of a "t," seemed on the verge of collapse today.

The president's progress westward has been marked day by day by the defection of at least one of his supporters. Senator Simmons of North Carolina, following the example of Senator Shieds of Tennessee and Senator Hoke Smith of Georgia, let it be known today that he would vote for reservations to protect American interests in the league of nations.

The situation was so satisfactory from the opposition standpoint that Senator Lodge, the Republican leader, departing from his practice of indulging in no predictions, declared: "The fight for reservations is won."

Long Dissatisfied.

The wavering of the solid south was extremely disconcerting to the administration leaders, who have been holding out against any qualification whatever in the ratification resolution. But it has been known for months that the southern senators were far from enthusiastic about the treaty. In private conversation they have repeatedly emphasized their objections. They viewed its terms as opposed to every principle of local sovereignty, the keystone of Dixie creed for a century and a half.

Senator Simmons has made a canvass of sentiment and has come to the conclusion that he must support reservations. He believes the treaty cannot be ratified without reservations.

It is regarded as inevitable that Senator Overman of North Carolina will follow the course of Senator Simmons, and prediction was made that several other conservative southerners, such as Senator Smith of South Carolina, Senator Smith of Maryland, and Senator Martin of Virginia would go in the same direction.

Sure of Three Amendments.

With the exception of Senator Hitchcock, the president's spokesman, all the leaders on both sides agreed today, either publicly or privately, that the Lodge reservation program adopted by the foreign relations committee, would be accepted by the senate, probably with a modification as to the reservation dealing with article X.

Five of the "mild reservationists" object to the form of the article X reservation, but five Democrats, sufficient to offset this loss, are expected to support the Lodge program. Nevertheless, in the interest of harmony, negotiations were afoot today to bring about an entire agreement on the article X reservation.

Close Fight on Textual Changes.

A close fight is apparent with regard to the textual amendments adopted by the committee. Administration leaders were confident of their ability to defeat the Shantung amendment, but they were not so sure about the Johnson amendment equalizing the representation of the United States and Great Britain.

President Wilson's sharp attacks on the treaty foes in the senate were not answered by any speeches today. Not a word of reply oratory was provoked by the president's characterization of the league opponents as "contemptible quitters."

BROADWAY GAY AGAIN AS PEACE RULES IN DRAMA

Managers' Capitulation Is Complete; Means Gompers Czar.

BY PERCY HAMMOND.

New York, Sept. 6.—[Special.]—The evil raven that has wrapped Broadway in his black wings for a fortnight or so perches elsewhere now, and there is life, light, and laughter in the street that yesterday reminded you of the knell, the shroud, the mattock, and the grave.

The stage hands are once more shifting their sceneries, and from the orchestra pits come the pleasing noises of the xylophone and the clarinet. Incidentally the actors are resuming their didoes, performing again the opera of our master dramatists, and a wounded art, recuperant from hurts administered by its frenzied friends, sits up and tries to forget its abrasions.

It is, like the battle of Blenheim, a famous victory. Louis Mann, an ardent nonunion advocate, will tell you that genius and talent are victorious, while Mr. Shay, of the stage hands, will let you know that labor put horny hands upon the white throat of the drama and choked it into submission.

No More Impecunious Actors.

One thing is sure, and that is this, the managers bent their knees in servile supplication, giving the players more than they ever dared to demand. There will be hereafter no needy actors, beseeching your pity in the Knickerbocker or the College Inn, and the dolorous Shubert coryphee hitherto driving a mere Saxon, will get what her hips deserve, a Maxwell or a Willys-Overland.

William Collier, eminent as a first aid to authors, engaged me today in conversation. Mr. Collier is for organized labor. He thinks that the overworked conductor and brakeman on the Twentieth Century Limited, for instance, are underpaid for their arduous responsibilities, and he feels that the man who tells you that Syracuse is the next stop is more valuable to civilization than George Sodom, who plays the piano in a Shubert show, or William Gomorrah who sings to his accompaniment.

Gompers to Be Stage Czar.

Mr. Collier's apprehension, as he intimated to me, is that some night in a humorous play he will spring an inadvertent nonunion wheeze and organized labor will ring down the curtain upon him.

"You can take this from me, that Gompers today is a bigger man in the theater than Ibsen, and that Nockels of Chicago cuts more ice in the drama than Pinero or Henry Arthur Jones. Shakespeare and Al Jolson are jokes compared to Shea and Weber and the Drama League of Evanston, Illinois, will stand no chance in its belief that all endings should be unhappy.

Open to Packed Houses.

The five theaters which were able to get casts together for tonight's reopening were the Selwyn, with "The Challenge"; Gaiety, with "Lightning"; Liberty, with "Scandals of 1919"; Republic, with "A Voice in the Dark," and the Century, with "Chu Chin Chow." All these theaters reported packed houses.

The terms of the armistice include the reëmployment of striking actors. This season, and so far as contracts go, the actors will resume their rôles, and all will be merry and gay. But you can put a bet down on this proposition, that next year Mr. Cohan will be cold to the possibility of Mr. Grant Mitchell, for example, and that the Shuberts will try to find a way not to hire Ed Wynn. The audience, which hasn't been much considered in the fracas, has this triumph: Francis Wilson will never again revive "Erminie."

Here Are Peace Terms.

Here are the terms as outlined in a joint statement tonight by Arthur Hopkins for the managers and Frank Gillmore for the actors:

An open shop agreement is made for five years, to terminate at the end of the theatrical season in June.

The Actors' Equity association is recognized as official spokesman of the actors.

There is to be no blacklist.

The actors, stagehands, and musicians agree not to strike or go out on sympathetic strikes during the life of the contract.

A board of arbitration of three, one representative of the actors, one of the managers, and the third to be chosen jointly, to judge all disputes.

Existing contracts will be lived up to by both parties.

All members displaced from casts through the strike will be taken back, but in cases where their places have been taken by other actors the striking actor is to be placed in another production or a cash settlement shall be made to be agreed on by both parties, or the matter may be referred to arbitration.

All lawsuits shall be discontinued.

All members of the chorus shall receive $30 a week as minimum in New York and $35 out of town.

Full salaries shall be paid to actors after four weeks of rehearsal in legitimate dramas and after five weeks' rehearsals in musical plays.

Eight performances shall comprise a week's work. All extra performances to be paid for at the rate of one-eighth of the actor's salary.

Some Rivalries Left.

Statements by all concerned in the strike indicated they were glad that the hostilities were over, but it was felt that the victories in each case were somewhat tempered by the conditions. The Equity members realized that they were not alone in the field and would have to contend with a rival organization in the Fidelity. The latter organization, fathered by George M. Cohan, began making plans to extend its work and to gain membership, indicating that the stage will, in the immediate future, become the scene of a scramble for membership by the two organizations.

The managers were satisfied with the guarantee of five years without a strike, but the cost was the recognition of the Equity which some of them had sworn never to do.

Baby Show Proves Such a Success It's a Riot

1,500 Infants Clamor for Prizes Where 150 Were Expected by Celtic Societies, and There's Quite a Tumult.

TAKE 1,500 jealous mammas, proud papas, and their precious infants. Stir them up well. Add only 150 prizes for the most perfect specimens of babyhood. Let them stand under a hot sun all afternoon.

What have you? A baby show? No. A near riot? Yes, that's it, a near riot. That's what they had at White City yesterday afternoon.

The United Celtic American Societies had announced a baby show to take place in the terrace garden at the south side amusement place. Fifty cents a head was the charge. Lots of prizes, etc.

They expected about 150 babies. At 2 p. m. there were 1,000. A half hour later there were another 500. They poured in large, small, and middlin' sizes, blue eyed, brown eyed, black eyed, gray eyed, blonde, dark haired, and bald. They squalled and they cooed, they slept and they scolded. They burdened the patient arms of fond parents.

The managers of the baby show had made arrangements for one-tenth of the number. But bravely, not reckoning the genus parentis, they decided to go on with the show.

A table was placed on the garden stage. Four physicians and a nurse were seated. The parents were allowed to file by and their babies, one by one, were bounced, pinched, and examined, each receiving a number.

When 800 had run the gantlet a stop was called. It was getting near 6 p. m. The managers wanted to close the show. After a hasty consultation about 450 of the numbered children were called for from the stage. The parents marched up, proud, happy.

But the thousand odd remaining set up a tumult.

"Frame up!" "Crooks!" "Throw them out!" "Give us our money back!" they shouted.

Thinking to quiet things, the managers called fifteen of those on the platform behind the scenes to ask them to entreat patience from the crowd.

As they did so the hundreds on the stage decided something was wrong and they joined the tumult. Hastily the committee gave out 150 prizes. Still the gardens were a bedlam. Hundreds shouted for their money.

"We gave those whose babies hadn't been examined their money back," said Herbert A. Byfield last night. "The trouble was that we were not prepared for the crowd. It was only supposed to have been for infants from 6 months to 3 years. But they came with children of all ages. We couldn't handle the people. They thought something was wrong."

The show will be continued today for children between 2 and 5 years.

Actors Again Act; Managers Again Manage; Plays Open

The rialto resumed last night, its union frays forgotten.

Miss Hazel Dawn again amused in the "Up in Mabel's Room" farce at the Woods, while Manager J. J. Rosenthal rejoiced. At the Cort William Courtenay again played "Cappy Ricks" with all the ardor he but recently gave his labor plaint at the Auditorium Equity show. The show, too, found Walter Jones and Tom Wise again employed.

"On the Hiring Line," continued at the Blackstone, this time unmolested by pickets and with union label musicians and stagehands.

The nonunion production that had so gratified the managers was the only obstacle that menaced last night's opening, Business Agents Dick Green and Joseph Weinkler of the stage hands and musicians declining to order their men back until the Blackstone dismissed its nonunion crew.

Two Plays Gone; Two New Ones.

Last night's reopenings served merely as a preface for the amusement seekers.

Tonight "Three Wise Fools" at Powers'; "Take It From Me" at the Studebaker, and "The Passing Show" at the Garrick are added.

"Three Wise Fools" is an "opening." The others resume, though "The Passing Show" has been thrust from the Palace. The delayed openings were deemed wise in view of time necessary for rehearsals.

Thus the end of the strike finds Chicago supplied with two new plays; "Scandal," "Angel Face," which was being presented at the Colonial, and "A Prince There Was," at Cohan's Grand, alone having departed.

The week will see other ventures, also. "The Acquittal," at the Grand, "Seven Miles to Arden," at the Olympic, and "Listen, Lester," at the Illinois, are scheduled.

The end of the strike not only gave employment again to hundreds of actors, stagehands and musicians, but also brought hundreds of bill posters back to their duties.

Equity Benefit Concluded.

The Actors' Equity association benefit performance at the Auditorium concluded last night with rejoicing; even the quips directed at last week's cruel managers were stifled.

The actors have not yet received details of the New York settlement of the strike, but declare their victory is complete.

Yesterday was a busy day for the managers, for the greater part of it was devoted to the business of rounding up the actors, stage hands, electricians, musicians, scrub women, etc., in readiness for last night's plays. Even those managers whose openings, by reason of various circumstances, were to be somewhat delayed, were anxious to get their people in line.

Even after the actors were notified of the ending of the strike the stage hands and musicians were up in the air as to their status.

Musicians Delayed.

They declared they could not return to work until they had received orders direct from their international headquarters.

The striking actors, actresses, musicians, stage hands, and electricians expect to divide up a pot of $10,000 in the next few days, according to Edward N. Nockels, secretary of the Chicago Federation of Labor. Nockels said yesterday that the receipts of the show put on by the strikers at the Auditorium probably will amount to this much after all expenses are paid.

Edward Mordant, Chicago secretary of the Equity; Joseph Winkler, president of the Musicians' union; Dick Green, business agent of the stage hands, and Edward N. Nockels, secretary of the Chicago Federation of Labor, held a meeting behind closed doors at the musicians' headquarters to discuss the situation. This meeting was still in progress when word was received from the international headquarters of the stage hands' and musicians' unions sending them back to work.

Details Uncertain.

"We don't know ourselves yet what the details of the settlement are," said Mordant, "but we do know we're to get extra pay for extra performances and rehearsals and recognition of the union. These are the main things and everything is rosy."

Al H. Woods called up J. J. Rosenthal, manager of Woods theater, and asked him when he could open. Rosenthal said he could give a performance right away. Members of the "Up in Mabel's Room" company were hastily assembled and a rehearsal was held in the morning while scrubwomen cleaned up the playhouse. A band played for two hours in front of the theater in the afternoon to apprise the public of the reopening.

Just a few hours before the strike settlement was reached, Charles S. Shay, international president of the stage employés and moving picture operators, issued a strike order against all Shubert houses and there is considerable discussion as to how this string of theaters will be affected.

The lawyer declared that his client's health has been so weakened as to cause anxiety.

British Sentence German Leader of Mob to Die

COLOGNE, Sept. 6.—[By the Associated Press.]—Serious disturbances between Germans and British troops at Euskirchen, twenty miles southwest of this city, resulted in a soldier being badly injured. The leader of the German mob, named Kupper, was courtmartialed and sentenced to death and the town was fined 100,000 marks (nominally $25,000).

BERLIN SAD THAT U. S. FROWNS ON GERMAN ENVOY

BERLIN, Sept. 6.—[By the Associated Press.]—The German press and foreign office are upset by the American comment cabled here criticizing the appointment of Dr. Haniel von Haimhausen as German embassador to the United States.

Although Germany has named her new ambassador to Great Britain, China, and Japan, it is not considered likely that these countries will appoint ambassadors to Germany. It is asserted that the British government will appoint a charge d'affaires, who will have no social intercourse, but merely attend to business matters.

Dr. Haniel von Haimhausen is said to be disappointed that his name has created criticism in the United States, it is reported, and has definitely decided not to go to Washington.

Dr. W. S. Solf, secretary for the colonies, who is the selection for the ambassadroship to Great Britain, was originally slated for Washington, but it is understood that he was transferred to London so that Dr. Haniel could have the post.

HOOVER STARTS VOYAGE TO HOME

LONDON, Sept. 6.—Herbert Hoover, director general of the interallied relief organization, accompanied by Commander Baker, Lieut. Robert Taft, and other members of that body, sailed today aboard the Aquitania for the United States.

Before his departure, Premier Lloyd George sent a message to Mr. Hoover, as follows:

"At the moment you are relinquishing your official duties and returning to the United States I wish to express to you, in behalf of the British government, warm thanks and great appreciation for the work you have done for the allied and associated powers. The fidelity and energy you have shown in directing the economic relief of the populations stricken by the war has been of inestimable value and has earned for you the lasting gratitude of the peoples of Europe."

MILAN, Sept. 6.—Gen. Diaz has gone to Venice to receive a magnificent sword of victory, the gift of the Venetian people.

Incidentally, his train was two hours late, and the only explanation seemed to be that some unfortunate tourist lost all his clothes and could not leave the train in his pajamas.

Why this quandary of some touring merchant of Venice should have held up a whole train for two hours was not adequately explained.

WASHINGTON NEWS IN BRIEF

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Washington Bureau of The Tribune.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 6.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS covenant and peace treaty opponents in the senate appear to be making further inroads into the Democratic administration forces, the latest recruit to the forces which will not submit to ratification "without the crossing of a 't' or the dotting of an 'i'" being Senator Simmons, Democrat, of North Carolina, who says the treaty cannot be accepted without some reservations.

PRESIDENT WILSON has replied to Samuel Gompers' telegram urging him to arrange a conference between steel workers and the United States Steel corporation in order to avert a disastrous strike, but the reply has not been made public.

REPRESENTATIVE FESS of Ohio, chairman of the Republican congressional committee, compared President Wilson's tour of the country with a "swing around the circle made by Andrew Johnson while discussing an issue on which he differed with congress.

REPRESENTATIVE SCHALL, the blind member of the house from Minnesota, criticized Gen. Pershing in a speech in the house. Mr. Schall was one of the four members voting against the bill recently which authorized the appointment of Gen. Pershing as a full general for life.

IN a memorandum filed with the senate foreign relations committee today of the conference Frank P. Walsh and Edward F. Dunne had with President Wilson in Paris over the Irish question, it is shown that the president was urged by Mr. Walsh to go to Ireland to get a better understanding of the Irish situation.

It is also brought out that the president told Walsh and Dunne after the Irish delegation had been denied a hearing at Paris, that if they intended to try to "put me (the president) in bad in America, I am going to say that we were well on the way of getting De Valera and his associates over here when you made it so difficult by your speeches in Ireland that we could not do it; it was you gentlemen who kicked over the apple cart."

RESIGNING today from the civil service commission, Charles M. Galloway of South Carolina, Democrat, says he was forced out by Postmaster General Burleson, and that he refused to coöperate with the postmaster general in debauching the civil service and making a sham of the civil service system. He declared that Burleson sought to ride over the merit system applied to postmasters, in order to favor undeserving Democrats and personal friends.

Shah Visits Switzerland; He's Traveling Incognito

GENEVA, Sept. 6.—[By the Associated Press.]—Ahmed Mirza, shah of Persia, arrived at Montreux, Switzerland, last night traveling incognito from Italy by the Simplon route.

The shah's grandfather visited Switzerland forty-six years ago and astonished the Swiss with his magnificent jeweled costumes and splendid horses.

The former shah climbed Saleve mountain, near Geneva, on horse back, causing great surprise among the inhabitants.

COBLENZ, Sept. 7.—American headquarters in Germany is finding it difficult to comply with the demands for room made by attachés of the interallied Rhineland commission, two sections of which are beginning to appear with numerous women clerks. The German Rhineland commission, with a large force, also has come to town. If the others have staffs as extensive as the part of the Rhineland commission now in Coblenz, there will be need of a suburban annex.

FIGHT ON LEAGUE TO BE DIRECTED FROM CHICAGO

Senators Borah and Johnson Speak Here Wednesday.

Chicago will become the headquarters, immediately, of the forces that are opposed to the league of nations in its present form. The campaign in opposition to the policy demanded by President Wilson in his western speeches is to be opened Wednesday night with a massmeeting in the auditorium.

United States Senators Hiram Johnson of California and William E. Borah of Idaho will be the speakers. Senator Medill McCormick of Illinois will be present, and probably will be the chairman of the meeting.

Plan Western Tour.

The following day Senators Borah and Johnson will start through the west to carry direct to the people the views of senators who are demanding vital changes in the covenant as it stands. Complete plans and itineraries will be worked out tomorrow and Tuesday, and announcement will be made probably on Wednesday of the speaking tours of other senators who are to participate in the campaign.

Ickes Heads Committee.

Arrangements for the Chicago meeting are being made by a committee headed by Harold L. Ickes, George F. Porter, and Senator McCormick.

"I cannot understand President Wilson's decision not to make a speech in Chicago on the league of nations covenant," said Mr. Ickes. "This is the second largest city in the country, and, from a publicity standpoint, the sounding board of the entire west. Chicago is as anxious to be informed on the covenant as any other part of the country. We are glad that Senators Johnson and Borah have realized the importance of coming here. Perhaps after these two senators have spoken in Chicago, Mr. Wilson may decide that he made a mistake in leaving this city off of his intinerary."

DUTCH OFFICIAL DENIES BREACH WITH BELGIUM

THE HAGUE, Sept. 6.—In spite of rumors to the contrary, Jonkheer van Swinderen, the Dutch minister to London and first delegate to the Dutch negotiations at Paris, who is now at The Hague conferring with The Netherlands government, said he was most optimistic about the final settlement of the dispute now before the commission in Paris.

"Things are going as well as they possibly could," he said, adding emphatically, "there has never been any question of a rupture in the negotiations that the Belgian and French papers report and the Dutch delegates who are now in Holland are returning to Paris Friday."

Kaiser Prisoner of His Generals, by Czernin Book

VIENNA, Sept. 6.—Count Czernin's new book on the world war pictures the kaiser as the prisoner of his generals, who absolutely controlled his movements.

In the chapter called "Wilson," Count Czernin says negotiations with prospects of a peace of understanding were broken off as the result of his (Czernin's) retirement.

Czernin was foreign minister of Austria-Hungary during the latter part of the world war.

BRITAIN PLACES BAR ON YANKEE "DRY" WORKERS

Has Woes Enough and So Refuses to Issue Passports.

PARIS, Sept. 6.—"Are you interested in prohibition?" is one question that the British passpost control officers ask before viséing American passports for the British Isles.

"Yes, I am interested," replied a well known Chicagoan, who wished to proceed from Paris to London yesterday.

"Then I am sorry, but cannot visé your passport," replied the Britisher. "Things are so upset in England now that the foreign office advised us not to let any more pussyfooters get into England to stir up the people about prohibition."

"O, you misunderstood me," replied the Chicagoan. "I am very much interested in prohibition—I am very much against it. I am going to England on business, not to try to make England dry."

Then his passport was viséd.

Two well known American prohibition agents who were unable to obtain passports for England direct from America came to France, expecting to get visés here. But the British passport office was on the lookout for them and refused a visé. The two said they intended to take the matter up with Assistant Secretary of State Frank Polk, but Mr. Polk already has announced that he is following the same tactics as Mr. Lansing did when here—that now he is a member of the peace commission and will have nothing to do with the routine state department matters.

ROUMANIANS FIND ORGY OF DEATH IN SOVIET BUDAPEST,

GENEVA, Sept. 6.—The Roumania bureau at Berne states that the Roumanian troops after their entry into Budapest discovered 270 bodies of victims of the communists under the parliament building. Among champagne bottles in a factory sixty more bodies were discovered, while in a Catholic monastery the bodies of eighty priests, imprisoned and starved, were found.

The worst case of communist brutality, the bureau adds, was that of a celebrated Magyar priest and orator, named Hoch, found crucified before his church.

All these crimes were committed on written orders of Tibor Szamuely, a leader of the communist commissaries and a member of the former governing triumvirate in Budapest, and possibly with the consent of Bela Kun, the bureau asserts.

GERMANS PLAN AS VICTORS ON EASTERN FRONT

Seize Powers, Then Enter Plots with Both Sides.

BY RICHARD HENRY LITTLE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[By Special Cable.]

[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

RIGA, via LONDON, Sept. 6.—Who won the war? That is the question which is still perplexing the Lettish officials, the anti-bolshevik Russians in Betvia, and I imagine some of the allied and American officials and semi-official persons here.

The German answer to the question of the opening paragraph was given by a German private to a British officer. It was during the German occupation of Riga. The British officer, a member of the British Baltic mission, was starting afoot over a bridge when the German sentry halted him and asked for his German pass. The British officer drew himself up and asked: "Who won the war?"

The German sentry replied:

"The allies won the war in the west, but we won it in the east."

German Troops Pour In.

That answer sums up and explains the attitude of the German military authorities in the Balitc regions since the signing of the armistice and the peace treaty. Although, under the latter document, the Germans agreed to withdraw from the former Russian Baltic provinces and despite repeated "ultimatums" from the allies at Paris, the Germans are still in the Baltic.

Today the Germans under Gen. Von Der Goltz occupy Mitau, only twenty-five miles from Riga, with 40,000 troops, while in the surrounding territory he is reported to have nearly 100,000.

Disarm Lettish Troops.

When the Germans entered Mitau on Aug. 25 they took from the Lettish headquarters thousands of rubles, disarmed several hundred Lettish solders, and now rule the city under German martial law. The allies and American officers wishing to pass through the zone of occupation must obtain and carry a German pass, or they would be arrested by the first German sentry they meet.

After the Germans occupied Mitau one of their officers, Maj. Bishop, addressed the troops, telling them that, even though their actions might not be authorized by the Berlin government, they need not fear punishment. In this speech he attacked the allies, especially the British. The allies, he told the troops and the native population listening to the speech, have done nothing for the Baltic people. Germany, he said, will save them from the bolsheviki.

Flirt with Both Sides.

The German game in the Baltic is a deep one. They continue their flirtation and secret intrigues with the bolsheviki. At Mitau there are, on the other hand, 6,000 to 8,000 so-called Russian anti-bolshevik troops, made up of Russian prisoners of war and Germans who have obtained Russian citizenship of some sort under the command of Col. Bermond—"Bermond's corps," it is called locally.

While professedly anti-bolshevik, Bermond has refused any recognition of Admiral Kolchak, anti-bolshevik commander in Siberia, Gen. Denikin, the anti-bolshevik general in the Caucasus and Gen. Judenitch, commander of the anti-bolshevik Russian northwestern army along the Esthonian front. He is working with the Germans for a purpose somewhat obscure. His troops are clothed, fed, paid and munitioned by Germans.

Real Policy in Doubt.

In addition the Germans in the Baltic region are playing on the fears of some of the anti-bolshevik Russians that the independent Baltic republics of Esthonia and Livonia, with the control of the former Russian ports of Reval, Riga and Libau, would throttle the trade of the future Russian state. And so the Germans are playing with both the bolsheviki and most of the reactionary or conservative Russian politicians and military leaders.

HOSTESS

Woman Who Says She Will Pay Jail Board of Detective Sergeant.

Mrs. Marion Hauser

Detective Sergeant Lawrence McCarthy of the Central detail was still at liberty last night, but he expected momentarily to be served with a warrant of arrest by a deputy sheriff.

On the grounds of false arrest and assault, Mrs. Marion Hauser of 1160 East Fifty-fourth place on July 19 was awarded a judgment of $125 against McCarthy. He refused to pay the judgment, declaring he merely questioned Mrs. Hauser in the performance of his duties as a police officer, and did not molest her in any way.

Mrs. Hauser says she is prepared to pay McCarthy's subsistence at the county jail for a long period. McCarthy declares he will be satisfied to be her guest there.

CAPITAL CREDITS REPORT U. S. IS BEHIND BELGIUM

Washington, D. C., Sept. 6.—[Special.]—The report from abroad that Belgium's security is to be guaranteed against German aggression by the United States and Great Britain, although unconfirmed by the state department here, is believed in diplomatic quarters to be true.

Knowledge of such an arrangement or projected guarantee is not in the possession of the state department, according to Acting Secretary Phillips.

Mr. Phillips, when asked today concerning the report, replied:

"I never heard of it."

Diplomatic circles here, however, are understood generally to accept the report at its face value, recalling that some weeks ago a ministerial utterance in the Belgian parliament carried an intimation to the same practical effect, it being then indicated, however, that France, also, would be a party to the agreement.

President Wilson, so far as is known, has not informed the foreign relations committee of the senate of any such prospective pact. It has been intimated that its drafting was a part of the duties of Col. E. M. House in London.

FRENCH DEDICATE SHAFT TO HONOR YANKS' ARRIVAL

Poincare, Foch and Envoy of U. S. at Laying of Corner Stone.

POINTE DE GRAVE, France, Sept. 6.—[By the Associated Press.]—France paid lasting tribute today to America's active entry into the great war by laying the corner stone of a monument here commemorating the landing on the spot of the first contingent of American troops in 1917.

Speeches by President Poincare and Hugh C. Wallace, American ambassador, were the chief features of the exercises, appropriately held on the birthday of Lafayette, who sailed for America from this same spot in 1777.

Foch Sees Dedication.

The scene was a brilliant one, numerous detachments of French and American soldiers, sailors and marines assembled among the sand dunes of the Pointe, giving color to the picture.

The guard of honor was composed of American marines, many of them veterans of the fighting on the Marne in 1918.

In addition to Premier Clemenceau, Marshal Foch and other distinguished Frenchmen, numbers of prominent Americans assisted in the ceremony, among them Frank L. Polk, undersecretary of state; Gen. Tasker H. Bliss, and Brig. Gen. W. D. Connor, now commander of the American forces in France.

The French representation included also the Marquis de Chambrun, a descendant of Lafayette, and a member of the Joffre mission to the United States in 1917, Andre Tardieu and Deputy Maurice Damour, chairman of the committee in charge of the exercises.

Poincare Pleads for Unity.

President Poincare in his speech called to America to continue that close relationship which caused the United States to come to the aid of France.

"In the plains of Picardy, Lorraine, and Champagne, by the side of 1,400,000 which the war has mown down," said he, "sleep your Americans, whose mothers do not know their tombs. They all sacrificed to the same ideal the French died for."

Amercian Ambassador Wallace said the monument would be to "victory and liberty."

CITY TO EXCEED ITS $150,000 IRISH FREEDOM QUOTA

Those who are in charge of the Irish freedom fund were confident last night that the quota which had been assigned for Chicago, $150,000, would be exceeded when all the returns are in. At least $50,000 was then in a bank to the credit of the fund and the counting was unfinished. Only a few of the more than 150 parish committees that are getting subscriptions had reported. Collections are expected to range from $500 to more than $2,000 in each parish. In addition, collections are to be taken up at a number of churches today, following the services. A house to house canvass is being made in more than 100 parishes and this is incomplete. It is considered doubtful if final figures can be given for several days.

WILSON BLAMES IRELAND'S FATE ON U. S. ENVOYS

Had Parley Fixed Till You Meddled, Dunne and Walsh Told.

asking you to use your powerful influence with the other members of the committee to get us a hearing."

Mr. Walsh further said, "In my conversations with the representatives of the Irish republic, De Valera asked me to ask you a question. I will read from your statements at the time we entered the war."

Here Mr. Walsh quoted various statements by President Wilson asserting the principle of self-determination.

Mean Some Other Time.

The president said, "Mr. Walsh, do you think that any considerable number of people, when they read my declarations, thought that those settlements were to be made at some particular place, automatically, immediately?"

Mr. Walsh replied, "Mr. President, I can speak first for myself. When I read it, I believed you meant Ireland. I believe that practically all the people in Ireland believed that, and all that I have met of our own people believed it. I am afraid you do not understand the Irish situation."

The president replied: "If you think I do not understand the Irish question, what did you come to me about it for?"

"Your Speeches Offended Britain."

Mr. Walsh then referred to discussions in the British parliament of the efforts to secure safe conducts to Paris for Eamonn De Valera and other Irish Nationalists, and the president was represented as responding:

"Now, Walsh, I am not going to discuss anything that was said in the British house of commons or house of lords, except to say this: that I was making an effort and Col. House was making an effort and we thought we were well on the way to getting De Valera and his associates over here; but the speeches of you gentlemen gave such offense that the whole thing had to be abandoned."

The president, the memorandum declared, said he had not discussed with Lloyd George the question of aiding the De Valera mission and Mr. Walsh asked the president to give his aid.

Said All He Can Say.

The president, according to the document, replied:

"There is no use in discussing that, I don't know what the British government would say, and I have said all I can say on the subject."

The president continued: "I want you gentlemen to understand that our position is this: That we are dealing officially with these governments. You would not want us to make representations or engage in an effort that might involve the sending of troops into Europe, and I know that our people would not want that.

"What I am saying to you is that we cannot, and under no circumstances could we have at any time since we have been here do anything in this matter of an official nature, but I want to say to you that I have the deepest sympathy for Ireland and her people and her cause. I know I speak for the others when I say that all we could do unofficially we have been doing and will do."

Explains His Utterances.

Referring again to the self-determination principle, the president said:

"When I gave utterance to those words, I said them without the knowledge that nationalities existed which are coming to us day after day.

"Of course, Ireland's case, from the point of view of population, from the point of view of the struggle it has made, from the point of interest that it has excited in the world, and especially among our own people, whom I am anxious to serve, is the outstanding case of a small nationality.

"You do not know and can not appreciate the anxieties that I have experienced as the result of these many millions of people having their hopes raised by what I have said.

Foiled by Secret Treaties.

"For instance, time after time I raise a question here in accordance with these principles, and I am met with the statement that Great Britain or France or some of the other countries have entered into a solemn treaty obligation.

"I tell them but it was not in accord with justice and humanity; and then they tell me that the breaking of treaties is what has brought on the greater part of the wars that have been waged in the world.

"No one knows the feelings that are inside of me while I am meeting with these people and discussing these things.

In Hands of Providence.

"But I believe, as you gentlemen do, in divine providence, and I am in His hands, and I don't care what happens to me individually. I believe these things, and I know that countless millions of other people believe them."

Toward the close of the interview the president said, "I wish that you would bear in mind that I came here with very high hopes of carrying out the principles as they were laid down. I did not succeed in getting all I came after.

"I should say—I should say that there was a great deal—no, I will put it this way—there were a lot of things that I hoped for but did not get."

NEW YORK WAITS AS STARS GIVE AID TO ORPHANS

Tanner Benefit Players Resist Wired Pleas to "Name Own Terms."

New York will wait for some of its theatrical stars until after the benefit performance for the Tanner children this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the Auditorium theater.

Blanche Ring, Joseph Santley, Ivy Sawyer, W. C. Fields, Chic Sale and the Duncan Sisters broke the news to the New York managers yesterday afternoon, when they received urgent calls to "take the first train out of Chicago, to open in New York Sunday night." All had been playing in New York and had come to Chicago to play in the benefit performance of the Actors' Equity association.

Orphans First, Their Cry.

Miss Ring was called on the long distance telephone.

"Come right away—we must open Sunday night," the voice over the wire said.

"Can't," said Miss Ring, "Got to play benefit for three little orphans."

"But we must get the theater open—we're losing money every minute. We'll make any financial arrangements to suit you."

"Can't do it. Wouldn't miss playing for those children for all the theaters you've got. Good-by."

The others were summoned by wire. Mr. Santley was delegated to wire refusals for all.

Later other messages came, ending with, "Name your terms."

"We might as well name 'em," said Mr. Sale.

"Sure," Mr. Field agreed. "Tell 'em to donate $15,000 to those children and we'll light right out for New York."

Managers Agree to Wait.

The message, including a detailed explanation of the Tanner case, was sent. The managers didn't donate the $15,000, but did agree to wait for their stars.

The boy had hardly left Mr. Santley's dressing room after delivering the final message when Tom Wise and Major Wallace McCutcheon burst in—Mr. Wise waving a check.

"George Griffin just bought every box in the house from the major," he explained, "and then told us to sell 'em again."

Mr. Griffin's check was for $957.

Sam Hardy came rushing in to protest—"One of those boxes has been reserved for Edward Morris of Morris & Co.," he explained. "You can't sell that."

"Well, we got it back, didn't we?" Mr. Wise explained. "Mr. Morris wouldn't mind our borrowing it for a few minutes, would he? It's all right to sell it if we get it right back, isn't it?"

Mr. Hardy thought maybe it was.

Miss Pearl White made the rounds of the motion picture houses and Miss Hazel Dawn, her sister Eleanor, Miss Gilda Leary, and other stars were among the street sellers.

Ask Aid for Miller.

Donations for the auction and cash for the children were received both at the office of THE TRIBUNE, which has been chosen by the actors to nominate a trustee for the fund, and at the Auditorium theater.

At the same time many appeals came in on behalf of the flagman, John Miller, who was severely injured trying to save Mr. and Mrs. William Fitch Tanner when they stood, Mrs. Tanner's foot caught between a rail and a board, in the path of the speeding train.

Among those who paid tribute to Miller was Louis Manheimer, who sent a check for $100 to THE TRIBUNE with the request it be distributed $50 to the Tanner children, $25 to Miller, and $25 to the mother of Mrs. Tanner.

"I trust," write Mr. Manheimer, "that this will lead to a great many contributions from kind hearted citizens toward raising a respectable fund for these unfortunates."

List of Day's Gifts.

Here are contributions sent to THE TRIBUNE yesterday:

For the Tanner children:
A. F. Gerak	$ 2.00
Louis Manheimer	50.00
Detmer Woolen Co., W. F. Groene, sales manager	10.00
For John Miller:
Miss Holly Halverson	5.00
Louis Manheimer	25.00
H. H. Kingsbury	2.00
For the aged mother of Mrs. Tanner:
Louis Manheimer	25.00

The following additional gifts were received for the auction: Huyler's—candy; Strayhorn, the Tailor—Order for custom made overcoat; Martin & Martin—ladies' shoe buckles; Le Schin—lingerie; Kalo shop—bracelet; Mrs. wood—candy; Plow's—candy.

Inasmuch as many appeals have been received for aid for the flagman, the actors decided to ask the audience whether it wished the proceeds of the auction to be given Miller. If the audience favors the plan, he will receive the proceeds of the auction.

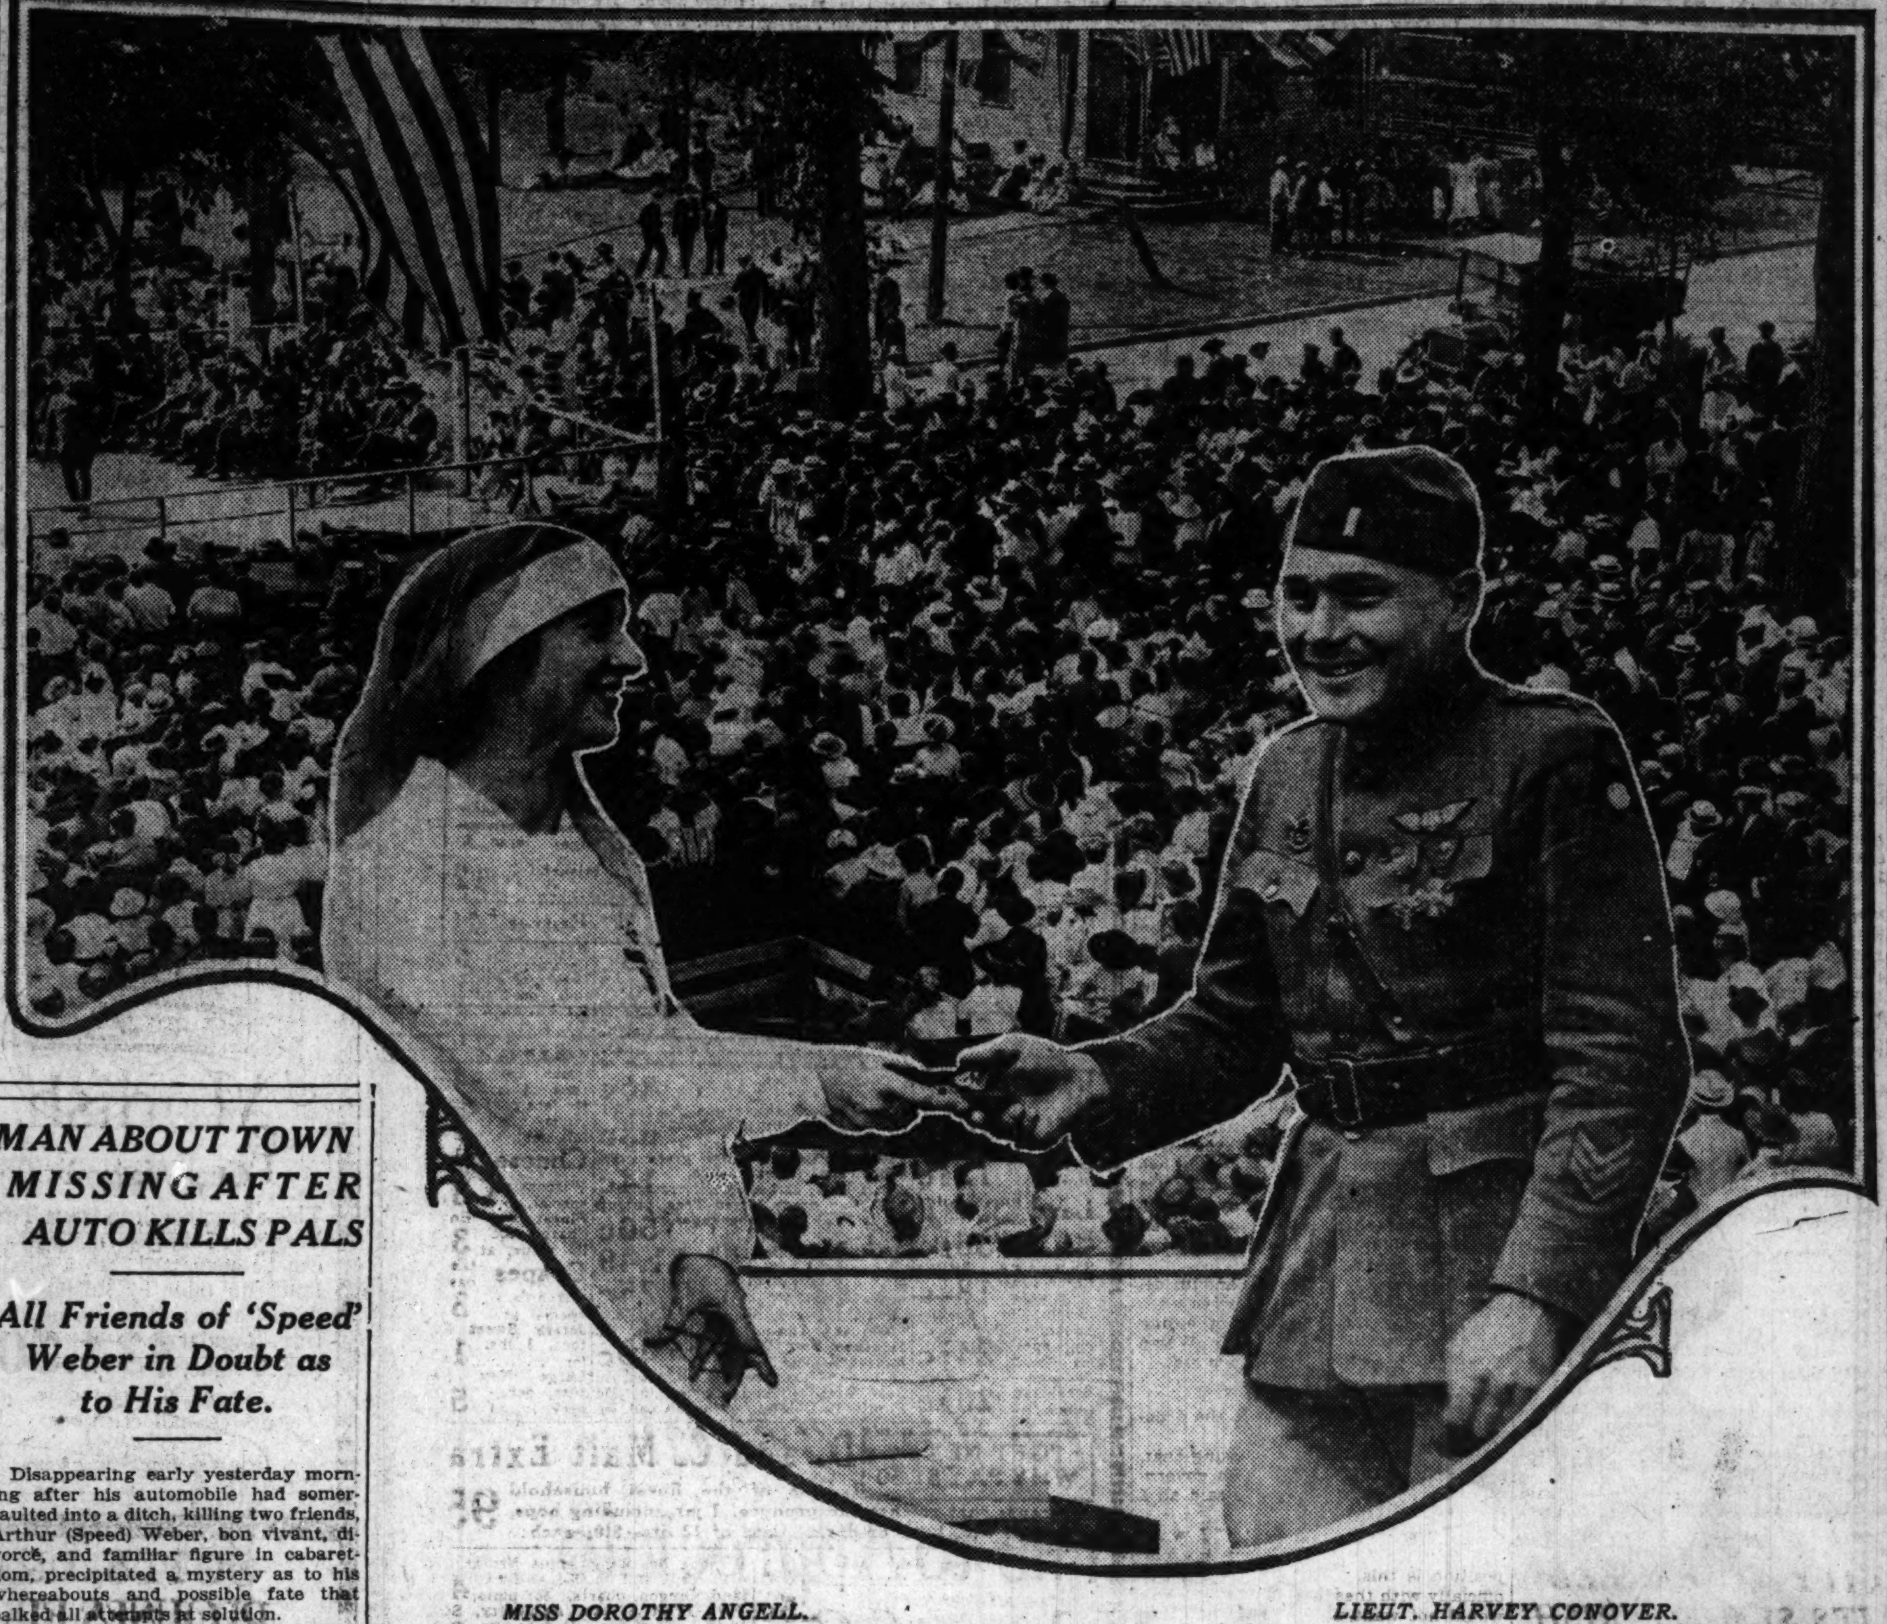
N. Y. TANNER FUND $521.

New York, Sept. 6.—[Special.]—The Sun today received $321 for the children of William and Mary Tanner, crushed to death by a train last Tuesday while clasped in each other's arms on a grade crossing at Hubbard Woods, Ill. The fund now totals $521. One contribution came from Maj. Edward G. Murray, who writes:

"I feel the Tanner fund is a very worthy cause. I am inclosing herewith my check for $200."

DU PAGE COUNTY HONORS ITS HEROES

Parade, Fireworks, Music, Speeches and Dancing Welcome 1,500 Warriors.



MISS DOROTHY ANGELL. LIEUT. HARVEY CONOVER.

WELCOME HOME

Du Page county welcomed home its war heroes yesterday at Wheaton.

In addition to a parade of 1,500 soldiers, sailors, and marines, there were daylight fireworks, speeches, band music, singing, athletic contests, and dancing. More than 10,000 persons attended.

One of the features was the presentation of a Du Page county medal to Lieut. Harvey Conover of the United States aviation corps, who was twice reported killed in action. The presentation speech was made by Miss Dorothy Angell of Wheaton.

Among other women participating in the day's program were Mrs. Cecilia Mack, Miss Bernice Brownell, Claire Norris, Alice M. Gregory, Myrtle Kautz, and Irene Marshall.

The committee in charge of the affair was composed of George Boger, C. W. Hadley, and C. B. Bowman.

MAN ABOUT TOWN MISSING AFTER AUTO KILLS PALS

All Friends of 'Speed' Weber in Doubt as to His Fate.

Disappearing early yesterday morning after his automobile had somersaulted into a ditch, killing two friends, Arthur (Speed) Weber, bon vivant, divorcé, and familiar figure in cabaretdom, precipitated a mystery as to his whereabouts and possible fate that balked all attempts at solution.

John Healy, 2224 Clifton avenue, and Larry A. Burns, cigar store proprietor at 343 South Wabash avenue, who were returning with Weber from Morton Grove resorts, were the men killed. The accident happened in Lincoln avenue, near Tessville, a mile and a half northwest of the city limits, about 2 a. m.

Threatens Suicide.

Weber was seen once after the accident. Emerging from the bushes that fringe the road, he called to a passing motorist

"My car just jumped into a ditch. My pals are dead. I might as well kill myself."

He ran back into the bushes before they could question him, and though police and citizen posses searched the surrounding countryside all day and night, and descriptions were sent to all adjacent towns, no trace of him was found.

Four theories have been advanced by the police:

1. That grief caused him to commit suicide.
2. That he received injuries that caused his death.
3. That he feared the coroner's jury's action at the inquest and fled.
4. That friends brought him to Chicago and have him secreted under a physician's care.

Friends in the Dark.

However, if he is in Chicago, few of his acquaintance know it, judging from an inquiry conducted last night by reporters of THE TRIBUNE. All asked insisted they were without information as to Weber's whereabouts or fate.

At the home of his friend and physician, Dr. Seth Wicks, 1207 Wilson avenue, it was stated that nothing had been heard from him; that until the newspapers were received it was not known Weber was in an accident. Mrs. Wicks supplied this information. Dr. Wicks was not at home during the evening.

Likewise Mrs. Anne T. Weber of 1249 Wilson avenue, who obtained a divorce from Weber in January of 1915 on the grounds of infidelity, professed to be without knowledge concerning him.

Mrs. Weber said her husband was at the flat last Saturday a week to visit with their two children, and that he telephoned Wednesday night, as was his custom, to inquire if they were all right. Since then she has not heard from him, she said.

"No Reconciliation."

Asked if there was a possibility of reconciliation, Mrs. Weber uttered an emphatic "No." She was interested in the accident merely for the sake of the children, she said. She did not know where Weber lived.

One of Weber's intimate friends was said to be Tom Chamales of the Green Mill, Broadway and Lawrence, but Chamales could not be reached last night. The head waiter at the café said he was sick. No one answered the telephone at Chamales' home.

Hugh Goetz of 5346 Sheridan road, also named as a close friend and a former business partner of Weber, had seen little of him in the last two years, he said. They dissolved partnership some time ago.

Weber was a salesman for the Carlisle Tire and Rubber company. The car in the accident had been purchased by him only a few weeks ago. It was a racing model Stutz.

Dinner in Wayside Inn.

Acquaintances say Weber on Friday invited Healy and Burns to accompany him to the White Sox baseball park. After the game the three drove to Morton Grove, where they had dinner at the Wayside inn, of which Justice of the Peace Charles Kramp is proprietor.

They remained there until about midnight. Mr. Kramp said Weber was not drinking. As the accident did not occur until 2 o'clock it is thought they visited other roadhouses. Mr. Kramp, who helped direct the search for Weber yesterday, gave the following as his version of the accident:

"I believe some farm wagon, probably with a lantern so dim it could not be seen at a distance, suddenly loomed in the path of Weber's car, and that he swerved to avoid it. The tracks show he turned sharply, also that the wheels clung to the road for eighty feet before the car overturned. Weber was an excellent driver."

Friends believe Weber is either unconscious or wandering about dazed. They learned that the steering wheel, which was shattered, was covered with congealed blood.

Dr. Wicks returned home soon after midnight. He said he knew nothing about the case; that he had not seen Weber for two months. He did not know where he had been living.

FRIENDS GET COLLEGE FUNDS.

Oskaloosa, Ia., Sept. 6.—The Iowa yearly meeting of Friends here today contributed $40,000 toward the support of Penn college of Oskaloosa. Iowa Friends have subscribed about $250,000.

TWO KILLED BY RUNAWAY.

Philo, Ill., Sept. 6.—[Special.]—Thomas Consoer and Harry Allman, employed on a farm near here, were killed today when a team of horses ran away and overturned the water tank they were driving.

The Same Thing Over, Over, and Over Again

They did it again last night, those doggone, comical auto borrowers.

This time it was R. F. Crego who contributed to the gayety of the autoless autoists.

Mr. Crego had just bought himself a bran new car, and had run it down to his home, 6128 Dorchester avenue, where he parked it in the li'l ol' garage, and prepared for early bed that he might be early to rise for a big Sunday.

Three gents, lit up with autointoxication, loomed in the offing.

"Stick 'em up," they said. Crego did.

"Climb in the car and run her out." Crego did.

"Drive." Crego did.

At Seventy-ninth street and South Chicago avenue they said:

"Get out." Crego did.

"Give us your phone number." Crego did.

"Your car will be returned to you—we just want it for a few hours. At 3 in the morning we'll phone you where to find it."

D'ESPEREY AT SALONIKI.

SALONIKI, Sept. 6.—Gen. Louis Franchet D'Esperey, who commanded the allied forces in the near east, arrived here last night from Constantinople and received an enthusiastic welcome from the authorities and population.

SHOT THROUGH HEAD, VICTIM PLANS REVENGE

Bullet Drills Skull, but Fails to Cause Unconsciousness.

With a hole drilled completely through his head by a .38 caliber bullet, Antone Gary, 1120 South Desplaines street, perfectly conscious, lay on a bed last night in the bridewell hospital and refused to talk for publication.

Joseph Dominick, 562 Forker street, is being held at the Maxwell street station charged by the police with firing the shot.

According to the police, Gary, who is 45 years old, was passing 516 Forker street when he saw Dominick having an argument with some men. Gary attempted to act as peacemaker. Dominick, so the police say, slipped behind him, drew his revolver and fired. The bullet entered the back of Gary's head and passed out through the top of his skull. The impact of the bullet knocked him down, but he did not lose consciousness.

At the hospital he gesticulated and shrugged his shoulders when detectives questioned him as to the cause of the quarrel.

"No mind," he said. "I fix him when I get well."

VISITORS STUDY CHICAGO METHODS.

F. E. Varley, a publisher of Melbourne, Australia, and Prof. Albert Tourpain of the University de Porteins, France, were arrivals at the Hotel La Salle last night. The former is making a study of publishing plants and the latter is looking into educational systems here.

Galloway Quits Civil Service Board and Gives Reasons.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 6.—[Special.]—Charles M. Galloway of South Carolina, who resigned today as civil service commissioner, charged Postmaster General Burleson with debauching the civil service and making a sham of the merit system, and blamed him for his forced retirement from his membership on the commission.

Mr. Galloway's retirement was demanded by Burleson some months ago at the time Hermon W. Craven, a fellow commissioner, resigned at the request of the president. Mr. Galloway's retirement was requested at the same time, but, being a Democratic appointee with influential friends, the president was induced not to accept his resignation at the time.

Since the commission was reorganized, it has repeatedly been reported that the postmaster general was insistent upon Galloway's geting out, and he retired today, admitting that he could hold up against the opposition of Mr. Burleson no longer.

Made Sham of Merit System.

"My resignation," Mr. Galloway said tonight, "was forced because I would not coöperate with Postmaster General Burleson in debauching the civil service and making a sham of the merit system.

"Hermon W. Craven, the Republican member, and I, a Democrat, were ousted from the commission because we were not willing that the commission should be a mere adjunct of the postoffice department, and subservient to it, especially with reference to examinations for presidential postmasters under the executive order of March 31, 1917.

"A very recent example of Mr. Burleson's conduct is furnished by his proposed amendment to this order, which now awaits the signature of the president. The existing order provides that the eligible with the highest standing shall be nominated.

Wants Even Greater Power.

"A large number of nominations have been held up, many of them for a long time, evidently in anticipation of this amendment, which will enable Mr. Burleson, in many cases, to deprive those standing highest in these examinations of the nominations to which they are already entitled. Among the postoffices affected by the amendment are those in Boston, Mass., and Newark, N. J.

"Furthermore, a short time ago the commission unanimously recommended that the president appoint as chief examiner an employé of the commission, who is far better qualified for this position than any other person of whom the commission has knowledge. But the postmaster general desires that the position be filled by another person of his own selection."

Asked Favor for Relative.

It has been repeatedly charged since the postmasters were put under civil service that the postmaster general, in instances where Republican aspirants for office obtained the highest rating, had insisted that the commission hold up the appointments in the interest of Democratic aspirants. In one case it was declared Mr. Burleson sought to have the merit system set aside so that a relative could be appointed postmaster in a Texas town.

URGES CITIZENS TO VOTE IN BASIC LAW PRIMARY

Almon W. Bulkley of the law firm of Bulkley, More & Tallmadge brings attention to the apparent apathy in the constitutional convention question in the following letter to THE TRIBUNE:

"It has been estimated by persons in a position to best know that probably not more than 25 per cent of the voters will attend the primary next Wednesday for the purpose of registering their selection for the nomination of delegates to the constitutional convention, to be held on Jan. 6, 1919. Why this apathy on the part of the public? Every citizen of Illinois is vitally interested, whether he knows it or not, in the organic law of the state, which protects him in his inalienable rights as an individual to life, liberty, and property, so necessary to his happiness and welfare.

"The importance of this subject suggests that only those in all respects qualified to frame such a document should be selected, and that every voter should attend the primary election and register his choice for the two candidates he thinks best qualified to represent him.

"No citizen of Illinois having the right to vote at this primary who stays away from the polls and permits others interested to choose his representatives for him will have any license to complain if the representatives chosen do not frame such a document as meets his approval; nor will he have any license to go to the polls and vote against the document submitted for approval and ratification, which document was framed by representatives that perhaps would not have been chosen but for his neglect of duty."

SEIZE BROKERS AS AIDS TO BIG ROBBERY RING

Confession Opens Wide Inquiry; Part of Bank Loot Found.

not know the man and that he had never had any dealings with him. Then he resumed the silence which he had maintained until the opportunity given him for a denial of the charges against him had trapped him into an admission.

It was learned that the arrest of Halberg had taken place before that of Smith, but why he was arrested and how was kept a secret by the state's attorney. It was admitted, however, that a confession of 100 pages was in the hands of Assistant State's Attorney John M. Lowery, who is handling the case.

Accuses Smith as Chief.

In this confession Smith is said to be named as the head and the brains of the ring, which has handled stolen securities throughout the country. Other men are also said to be named in the confession, among them men prominent in Chicago business and the affairs of other cities. These are the men the state's attorney and his aids still hope to trap, although they admit that their efforts in this direction have been rather hampered by what they consider the premature disclosure of the arrests of Smith and Halberg.

Although the confession made by Halberg undoubtedly explains the method of operations of the ring and probably throws light upon the whereabouts of stolen securities, Assistant State's Attorney Lowery is willing to talk only of the Middleton bank robbery and its relation to Smith's arrest.

Robbers in Joliet.

"In the Smith case, the securities were stolen originally by a band of safeblowers, several of whom are serving sentences in Joliet penitentiary," Mr. Lowery explained. "Their chief was Stephen Jordan, a cracksman of national notoriety.

"Smith was extradited earlier in the year to Concord, Ga., and Elsenora, Mo., on charges of receiving stolen government bonds, but the complaints fell through.

"We have been following clews to robberies of banks outside Chicago for several months, our attention having been directed to the Jordan band through information received from two young women, companions of the members."

Second Batch Recovered.

Dr. C. F. Allen, president of the Middleton institution, stated by long distance telephone that the securities, said to have been recovered from Smith, comprised the second batch that the bank has received back. Twelve thousand dollars' worth, he declared, were retrieved last May through the instrumentality of Ald. John Powers.

Fifty safety deposit boxes in the bank vaults were looted shortly before midnight of Jan. 9.

The robbery was evidently the work of experts or of some one who knew the combination of the vault. It was not blown, but skilfully opened and the $104,000 loot removed.

The funds, though, were the property principally of clients, the bank losing only $70.05.

In a roundup of thieves here in May the police arrested Walter French, who confessed to being one of the thieves. He said he was assisting Jordan in the Middleton robbery by acting as lookout while Jordan did the real work.

The master cracksman was out on parole from Joliet penitentiary, but was taken in custody and is now serving the balance of his term.

Bessie Jordan, his wife, has been indicted by the grand jury as having had possession of the stolen bonds and securities which Ald. Powers is said to have assisted the bank in locating.

Arrest Not Observed.

Smith has offices with an insurance brokerage firm on the sixteenth floor of the Insurance Exchange building, but according to clerks receives merely his mail and telephone messages there. They said his arrest had been unobserved by them.

The prisoner is 42 years old. He resides at 1432 Lunt avenue in Rogers park with his wife and young daughter.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 6.—[Special.]—Kei Shidehara, Japanese vice minister for foreign affairs, has been appointed ambassador to the United States. Formal announcement will be made soon. He will succeed Viscount Ishii, who negotiated the Ishii-Lansing agreement on Japan's special interests in China.

Mr. Shidehara was counseler of the Japanese embassy in Washington in 1912 and 1913, being transferred from America to London.

In 1915 he was advanced to the office of vice minister for foreign affairs. He is married and has several children. He is 47 years old.

ALEXANDER HAD EMPIRE DREAMS, BUT WAS A PIKER

Map Shows How Chicago Can Outdo All His Conquest Plans.

BY EYE WITNESS.

I: The Romance of a Map—and of an Editorial.

On board yacht Ranger, Hennepin canal, Illinois: It started thus:

One day last month when I was poking along the Hudson river I read in our paper an editorial headlined: "A Middlewest Program." It laid special emphasis on waterways development that should make Lake Michigan economically and socially as significant as the Baltic or the Black sea, and it seemed to me big and statesmanlike.

It contained these words:

"Let us hark back to the spirit of our forefathers and by constructive work hew out the salvation which awaits a courageous and purposeful people."

So, having mused away a quiet hour at sunset by Washington Irving's grave in Sleepy Hollow, and peered through the gates of Sunnyside, and penetrated to the Rip Van Winkle haunts up Kaaterskill Clove way, and otherwise having refreshed my soul with such mild sentimental debaucheries, I moseyed home and took down a big map.

The Story of a Big Map.

For I thought it might develop something certainly interesting and perhaps instructive, to study certain facts and faults and possibilities of empire in an intimate way; not to rush by them in a railroad train or accumulate them readymade by means of a fifteen minute interview with a local notable, but to go among the facts where they grew and garner what I could at first hand, and in my own way, before they had been thrashed into dry statistics.

So I spread on the floor a map you could dance a quadrille on and crawled over it like a tentative fly, getting smaller every minute and the idea getting bigger.

Nobody who does not love maps—the most absorbing and illuminating kind of markings mankind has made to record his occupancy of the globe—can understand what visions and splendors a good, spacious map holds. With a big map you can think big, and with my map I began thinking in the terms of 10 degrees of longitude and 15 degrees of latitude, and at that I had not gone beyond the boundaries of the region in which that TRIBUNE editorial said was to be hewn out by constructive work "the salvation which awaits a courageous and purposeful people."

Mapping an Empire.

To visualize such things, and to get the feel of them, you have to resort to all kinds of expedients—the simpler the better—because then you don't learn the things one day only to forget them the next.

Therefore I drew a blue line from where longitude 85 crosses latitude 45—which, very roughly, would be about where Traverse City, Mich., is—and ran it west to the point where longitude 95 crosses latitude 45, and that brought me into western Minnesota, say half way between Minneapolis and Watertown, S. D.

Then I ran the line south along the line of the 95th degree, and brought up in the region of Houston and Galveston, well below the 30th degree of latitude; then, working straight across the gulf a bit below New Orleans, so as to get back to longitude 85, where latitude 30 crosses it, you wind up a good bit west and south of Tallahassee—but Tallahassee serves well enough as an identifying point.

Then, running the blue line north along longitude 85 to where latitude 45 crosses it, you were round about Traverse City again, and the result was a tremendous, spreading oblong that matched up very creditably with any visions of empire to which wine and vaulting genius may have impelled Alexander.

And Through It Runs a Great River.

If you draw an X across the oblong you could spell out St. Louis near and below the point where the arms of the X crossed each other.

Following the 90th degree of longitude downward from the southwestern corner of the state of Wisconsin, I observed that it was crossed three or four times by a vast river emptying into the sea at about the point where longitude 90 reaches the sea, and that right above that outlet, intersected by 90, was a place called New Orleans. The vast river never got very many miles away from 90.

And up north in Iowa and Illinois, just below where the river begins to cotton close to 90, I saw the markings of a system of canals leading straight east from the vast river to a vast lake some 350 miles long, and a hundred miles wide, or more, and nearly a thousand feet deep at its deepest, and connected with four other lakes—one of them vaster still—which ultimately found their way to the North Atlantic.

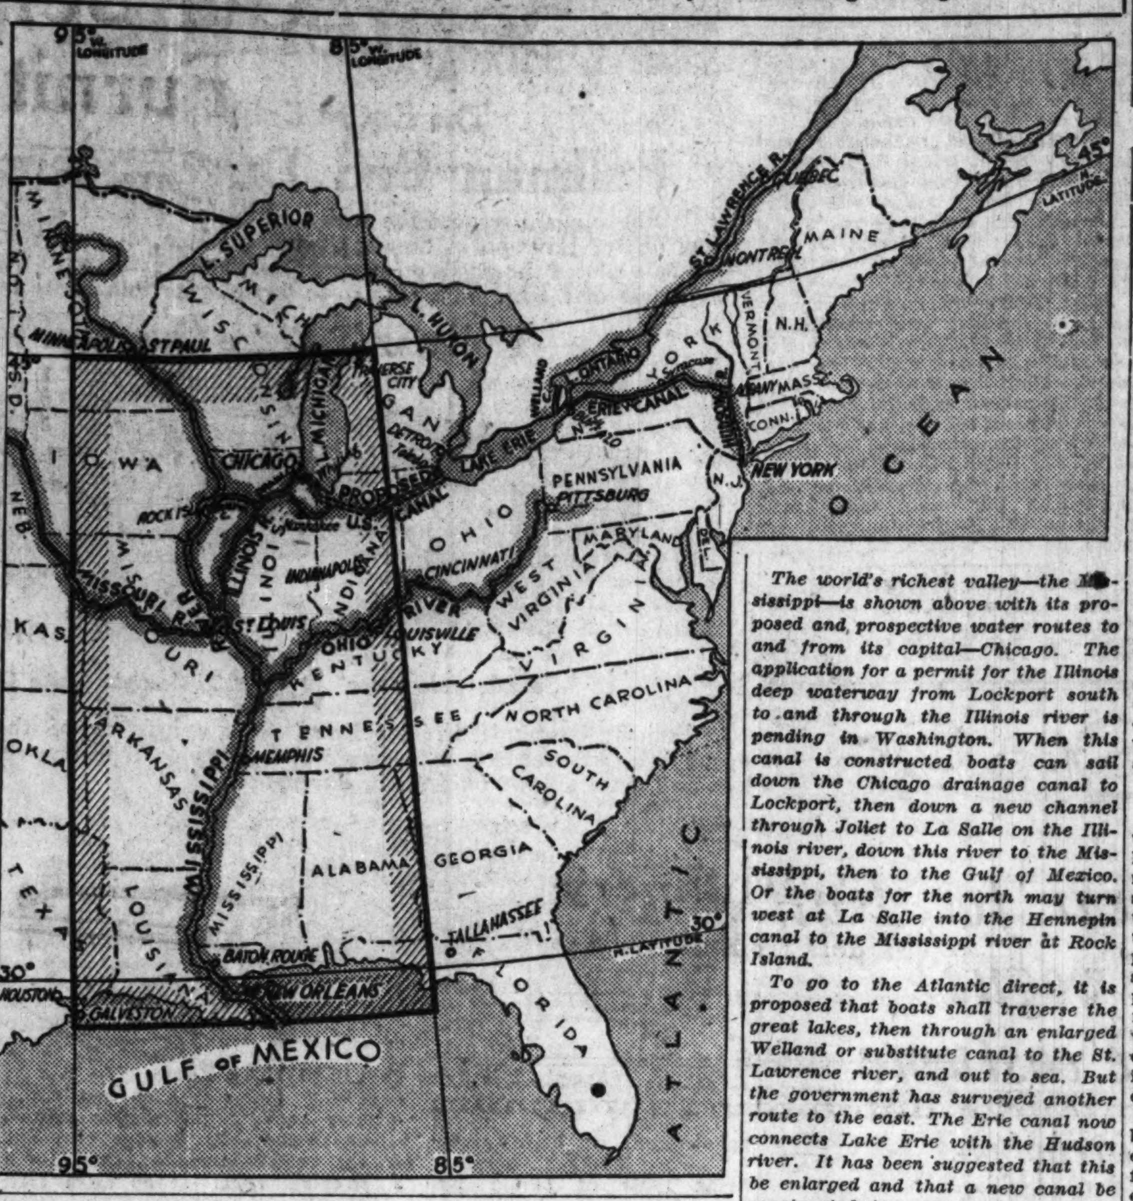
And at the foot of the first lake, and at the head of the system of waterways leading west to 90 and then south along 90 to the Gulf of Mexico, was a city of nearly three millions called Chicago.

A people singularly blessed, these Chicagoans, thought I, whose ships can fare northward to arctic waters and south to tropic seas with the treasures of this inland empire of lake coasts and river banks.

Rich and puissant must they be, thought I; like Venetians of old, but in a mightier way.

"The Mightiest Empire"—A Map's Story

How Water Routes May Tap Rich Territory Surrounding Chicago.



The world's richest valley—the Mississippi—is shown above with its proposed and prospective water routes to and from its capital—Chicago. The application for a permit for the Illinois deep waterway from Lockport south to and through the Illinois river is pending in Washington. When this canal is constructed boats can sail down the Chicago drainage canal to Lockport, then down a new channel through Joliet to La Salle on the Illinois river, down this river to the Mississippi, then to the Gulf of Mexico. Or the boats for the north may turn west at La Salle into the Hennepin canal to the Mississippi river at Rock Island.

To go to the Atlantic direct, it is proposed that boats shall traverse the great lakes, then through an enlarged Welland or substitute canal to the St. Lawrence river, and out to sea. But the government has surveyed another route to the east. The Erie canal now connects Lake Erie with the Hudson river. It has been suggested that this be enlarged and that a new canal be constructed from the western end of Lake Erie to the Illinois deep waterway.

One route surveyed for this brings this proposed new channel through the northern end of Indiana and empties into Lake Calumet in Chicago. The other route is farther south, skirting the vicinity of Kankakee before it lands in the Illinois river.

Miss Borden Bride of J. C. Moench of Chicago

NAVY TO ASSIST ALL AMERICAN SHOW THIS WEEK

The navy is to be well represented at the All-American exposition held at the Coliseum this week. Men from the naval radio school and the naval aviation school at Great Lakes are to be present beginning today, and will give demonstrations of the apparatus used in these two branches of our first line of defense.

Duplicates of the wireless telephones used by the N C-4 and its sister ships in their famous trans-Atlantic flight will be installed and the public will have an opportunity to see just how conversations may be carried on between persons far separated without the use of wires.

In the afternoon American citizens of Italian birth will have the Coliseum for their day. Judge Bernard Barasa will open with an address. Rocco De Stefano will speak on "Education." "La Tarantella," an Italian native dance, will also be given. There will be a speech by Francis Borelli and a number of songs and dances will also be given. There will be public dancing in the court of honor.

In the evening, beginning at 8 o'clock, American citizens of Polish birth will have their program.

At 9 o'clock Finnish descendants will render their program. Lydia Kangas is chairman. The Waukegan Finnish band will render selections.

Prisoner Hangs Self to Bar but May Recover

Lockup Keeper Dave Carroll in the Desplaines street police station found a prisoner yesterday hanging from a suspender around his throat, affixed to a cell window bar. Carroll released the man and he was taken to the bridewell hospital, where his condition is said to be serious. He is Walter Wernick, 215 South Halsted street, a tailor. He had been arrested as intoxicated.

WANT CHICAGO TO DO ITS OWN DAYLIGHT SAVING

May Ask Council to Order Clocks Advanced an Hour in Summer.

The city council is likely to be asked to pass an ordinance which will direct that all clocks in Chicago shall be advanced one hour ahead of standard time during the summer months, if this plan is favored by the delegates who are to assemble at the conference that has been called by the Illinois Manufacturers' association.

This plan, according to John M. Glenn, secretary of the Illinois Manufacturers' association, appears to be one of the most practical that has been proposed.

"We cannot tell what plan the conference will favor," said Mr. Glenn, "but one idea is that if Chicago wants the extra hour of daylight in the evening we can have it if the council will take action.

Would Readjust Rail Hours.

"It will be necessary for us to ask the railroads to advance their rush hour schedules one hour, for the railroads will, of course, be operating on standard time, but it has always been their practice to put on trains at the times when the greatest number of passengers were ready, so it does not seem likely that there will be any opposition. Some other changes will be necessary. We want to get all these various interests together so that any difficulties in the way of early working hours will be disclosed and discussed.

"In Detroit the early time has been adopted through action by the city council, so that it remains in effect there, regardless of the repeal of the daylight saving act by congress.

Similar Action in Cleveland.

"It is probable that eastern time, as it is called, was adopted by Detroit because that is the time used in Canada, just across the river, but Detroit gets the benefit of the daylight saving plan just the same. Similar action has been taken by Cleveland and in other cities.

"There is another point to be taken up—whether we want early hours all the year around or only from April to October, as is the plan in force under the daylight saving act adopted by congress during wartimes. We know that some plans are to be presented by men who are much interested in this matter, but we have not been informed of all details. We are confiden that if Chicago wants the daylight saving plan to be continued it can be done.

CARPENTERS O. K. REFERENDUM ON WAGE UMPIRE

Make Condition Material Dealers Must First Resume Sales.

eral mediators, urging acceptance of the proposition, and the following letter from Mayor Thompson:

"William Brims, President, Carpenters District Council—My Dear Mr. Brims: The approaching end of the building season in Chicago and the prospect that we face of an indefinite continuation of the present deadlock impels me to take up again with you the difficulty between the members of your organization and the members of the employing organizations.

"In my judgment, and I have endeavored to remain in close touch with the situation, I feel the proposed plan of mediation suggested by the government conciliators, as approved by the Building Trades council, is one that if thoroughly understood, should be acceptable."

Urges Referendum Vote.

Mayor Thompson's letter then quoted the proposition just as set forth by Mr. Cohlgraff. Then the mayor's letter continued:

"I would urge upon you the submission of this plan to your organization for approval, and, in the event that your district council is not empowered to accept it, I would urge that the question of accepting it be made the subject of a referendum by your membership.

"We are all agreed that something must be done to alleviate the present conditions. To my mind the plan outlined above is one that will work out better than any that has been suggested, and its acceptance assures the resumption of activities.

"I hope that you will recommend not only that a referendum be given on the acceptance of the plan, if such referendum is necessary, but also that you will recommend its acceptance by the members of your organization."

O. K. Conditional Plank.

After other communications were read from carpenter locals in other cities, a delegate made a motion that if the material men would raise the lid and sell material to anybody who would buy it, a referendum vote would be taken of the entire membership on the question of submitting the proposition offered to an umpire.

The delegates unanimously voted for this.

After the meeting Daniel Galvin, secretary of the council, was interviewed.

"We understood everything had been settled and the carpenters were to go back to work and let an umpire decide the $1 an hour proposition," said newspaper men.

"Nothing of the kind," responded Galvin. "The only real news is the fact we passed a motion to the effect if the material men would release the material, we would take a referendum vote on the proposition of accepting an umpire to decide whether we should be paid $1 an hour or 92½ cents."

Craig Voices Surprise.

Edward M. Craig, secretary of the Building Construction Employers association, said he was surprised at the attitude the carpenters had taken.

"I had heard they would accept the proposal," he said. "I am sure the whole matter will be settled in the next few days and the carpenters will agree to arbitration of their differences. It may take place about Monday."

ECHOES

The Seventeenth Engineers' club of Chicago was organized at a banquet in the Great Northern hotel last night by members of the old command of Brig. Gen. Charles Gates Dawes. The regiment was recruited from the ranks of railroad men and men with engineering experience, Illinois contributing 158 volunteers from Chicago, Joliet, De Kalb, Danville, Springfield, Waukegan, Evanston, and Oak Park. The commanders of the original regiment will be made honorary members of the club. W. A. Wade, former sergeant major of the regiment, was elected president of the club.

Members of the "Prairie Lyres" of the 129th infantry, 33d division, U. S. A., had a banquet last night in the Fort Dearborn hotel to commemorate the first anniversary of their entrance into the fighting sector at Verdun. The banquet was a prelude to the first annual meeting of men of the division at Aurora this week.

The 311th engineers' auxiliary will hold a special meeting Tuesday evening in room 1014 county building, to make definite arrangements for the Victory banquet to be given in honor of the regiment in the Hotel La Salle, Sept. 20.

Spies His Stolen Auto in Loop; Pursues It; Gets It

R. E. Nicholas, 123 Marion street, Oak Park, and two friends drove out to the White Sox baseball game yesterday, leaving their car in front of the park. When they came out it was gone and they took a taxicab down down.

At Michigan boulevard and East Washington street Nicholas saw his car with three men in it, just ahead of them. He called to Mounted Policeman Thomas Clark, who gave chase, and at Wabash avenue and Monroe he overhauled the car, but not until two of the men had escaped.

The driver, who gave his name as Elroy Dunne, 19 years old, 3751 South Union avenue, was booked at the central station.

SCULPTOR FELON LEAVES DUMMY TO SPOOF SCIENCE

Jackson, Mich., Sept. 6.—Twenty or twenty-five years ago when Jackson prison's industries were not so numerous, Jimmie Leathers spent a few years within its walls and, finding time hanging heavily on his hands, modeled human images for pastime. At the end of his sentence he had quite a collection of "dummies," and these disappeared with him. One of them, Jimmie's "Prehistoric Man," was unearthed Friday in Patrolman Oscar Nieman's back yard.

This was the explanation put forward today as to the origin of Nieman's find, which several physicians after a hasty examination, declared was the petrified body of a man, 12 feet 7 inches in height.

News of the find brought many scientists to Jackson today, a dozen of them from the University of Michigan, and one look at the "giant" constituted their investigation. They sought not to learn more of the ancient race it represented but how it came to be planted in Nieman's yard.

DOCK STRIKERS HOLD OUT.

TALK OF LIMITED RECEIVER FOR NEW HAVEN ROAD

New York, Sept. 6.—An order to show cause next Thursday why a limited receiver should not be appointed for the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Co., was granted here today by Federal Judge Mack.

The appointment of a receiver was asked so that he might bring to an immediate hearing the suit heretofore brought by Edwin Adams and other minority stockholders to recover $150,000,000 from former directors of the company who are charged with having dissipated its assets.

Judge Mack at the same time signed an order directing the defendants, William Rockefeller, Charles M. Pratt, Lewis Cass Ledyard, and J. Pierpont Morgan, Herbert L. Satterlee and William P. Hamilton, as executors of the late J. Pierpont Morgan, and Florence A. V. Twombly, executrix of the estate of the late Hamilton Mck. Twombley, to show cause why Harold Norris and more than 1,300 other stockholders should not be allowed to intervene and prosecute the Adams restitution suit.

INVENTOR LIFTS FOG'S TERRORS FROM HARBORS

Subsea Cables at 'In' and 'Out' Lanes to Lead Ships by Ears.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 6.—[Special.]—Ocean fog has been tamed by the navy, so that it will no longer be necessary for battleships and liners to lie outside harbors waiting a chance to creep in when the weather lightens.

In a contract signed today with Earl C. Hanson, a young inventor of Los Angeles, the navy department took the first step to make practical a new device to control vessels in a fog outside harbors.

Tests will be made at once at the naval base at New London and later a greater test with some of the biggest liners of the world, like the Leviathan, will be made in Ambrose channel in New York harbor.

Ready to Make Tests.

Material has been shipped to New London for the first test and men have already been detailed for this work.

By the use of the invention in connection with the radio compass which the navy has now perfected, delay in ocean travel due to weather is to be eliminated. The radio compass brings all shipping "in sight of land" and the new device, like a friendly hand, reaches out and takes the biggest of ships through the most tortuous channels safely and quickly to its pier.

The new device is a simple one. A cable is laid in the center of the ship channel. Through it is sent an electric current of low frequency, which through the listening devices on board ship gives off a sound of certain pitch that cannot be mistaken for any other sound.

Ship Just Follows Cable.

The ship hugs the cable from harbor line to the dock. On the bridge and in the captain's cabin listening devices like telephone receivers are placed and attached by wires to the hull of the ship. The ship follows the course of the cable.

Any variation away from the cable is indicated by visible indicators, which show in feet the distance away from the cable, and the ship is then put back over the cable by the rudder, in the usual way. By the ear receivers the indicators may be confirmed at all times. Vessels going into port will use one cable; those coming out another. The sound on each is different and there can be no confusion, and therefore, no collision.

Chart Supplements Cable.

Along the cable at mile intervals a section is insulated with lead. Through this no sound can come, and therefore the man on listening duty can tell instantly how far the ship has progressed and by the cable chart in front of him can tell where the cable turns and where the ship must be steered to follow the curve of the cable and the center of the channel.

The device, according to the experts of the navy who have tested it and recommended its use, is said to be as reliable as the telephone.

WED QUIETLY

Rainbow Officer and Chicago Girl Whose Wedding Is Just Revealed.

Lieut. and Mrs. Alfred J. Roth

The flu epidemic and army orders prevented Miss Ruth Lundy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Lundy of 4410 Fullerton avenue, from seeing service overseas, but she knows everything that went on over there. She has annexed a human story book of the war for life. Her Chicago friends were surprised yesterday when they learned she is no longer Miss Ruth Lundy, late of the A. N. C., but Mrs. Alfred J. Roth, bride of Lieut. Roth, late of the Rainbow division. They were married quietly by Father Burns, a K. C. chaplain, at Camp Merritt, N. J., on July 14, and kept their secret until both were discharged from the service and could go honeymooning without interference of army orders.

Mr. Roth enlisted in the Rainbow division at Cincinnati and fought his way from private to a lieutenancy in all the engagements in which that famous division participated.

The couple will make their home in Louisville, Ky., where Mr. Roth is sales manager for a flour concern. The bride is a sister of George Lundy, a member of THE TRIBUNE art staff.

STEEL WORKERS WAIT FOR WORD TO KILL STRIKE

Gompers Gets Wilson Message, but Will Not Discuss It.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 6.—[Special.]—Executive officers of the iron and steel unions who are in Washington awaiting the conference of international union officials next Tuesday declared today that a strike of workers against the United States Steel corporation will be almost impossible to avert unless officials of the corporation agree to negotiations for recognition of the unions next week.

Whether President Wilson ,who was appealed to by the American Federation of Labor to bring about a conference, has accomplished anything in that direction is not made known here. Responding to Mr. Gompers' telegram of Friday uriging him to get some reply from the steel corporation by Tuesday, the president sent a telegram to the American Federation president which was received today, but its contents were not made public.

"I cannot make the message public nor comment on it," said Mr. Gompers, "inasmuch as the president did not make it public."

Await Word from Gary.

In some quarters here the belief was expressed that the president has made strong overtures to E. H. Gary, chairman of the board of the steel corporation, who refused to meet a committee of the union men, to change his attitude, and that a reply from Mr. Gary is being awaited. But unless something affirmative is done by Tuesday, labor leaders say, the industrial volcano is likely to erupt with a bang.

Union officials fear, if strikes of such a vital nature get started in this critical time, that it will be humanly impossible to restrain other dissatisfied workers and that industrial conditions will be deplorable within a few weeks.

Such a consummation, it is admitted here, would make the proposed economic conference at the White House Oct. 6 of greater importance than ever, and probably would force the calling of such a conference at an earlier date.

So far as known, none of the organizations asked by the president to name delegates to this conference has taken action yet. Plans for the meeting are going forward, however, under direction of Secretary of Labor Wilson.

Wilson's Labor Unrest Panacea.

There is a prevalent opinion here that the president will propose at the conference a concrete recommendation for the new status between capital and labor, and that it will contain these main features:

Representation of labor in the board of directors of all big corporations.

Assignment to labor of a share in the profits of such corporations.

Employers and capitalists who have been studying industrial and wage problems say that this is all well enough, but with capital conceding such important changes they ask what is labor going to concede. And in return for these concessions by the corporation, the employers are proposing to recommend that labor, granted representation in the directorate of corporations, give up its right to strike; that labor, given a share in profits, accept the principle of compulsory arbitration of industrial disputes.

With such a program forecast for the president's conference, some individuals here who are interested predict that there will be a long, hard pull before any agreement can be reached.

LOVE STORIES IN CURCI CASE MUST BE ATTESTED

Depositions of witnesses made at Fleischmann, N. Y., concerning the behavior of Luigi Curci, husband of the noted opera singer, Amelita Galli-Curci, who is suing for divorce, will be sent back to New York for signatures, according to a ruling made yesterday by Judge Joseph Sabath in the Superior court. The jurist's decision was made on a motion by Attorney Weymouth Kirkland, counsel for Mme. Galli-Curci, who insisted that the depositions be attested by Commissioner J. L. Keator, before whom they were made, when Attorney Roy D. Keehn, counsel for Luigi Curci, moved that the depositions be suppressed as incompetent. The signature of Morris Muskovitz, another witness, is also to be obtained.

The motion to throw out the depositions of Melissa Brown and Mary Rinaldi, two young women with whom Curci is accused of participating in amorous meetings, will be heard Sept. 16.

ARRESTS IN TWO DRY MONTHS EBB 36-51 PER CENT

Gemmill Cites Totals as Argument Against More Policemen.

Judge W. N. Gemmill yesterday supplied THE TRIBUNE with the following figures, compiled after a personal examination of the court records, showing the effect of war time prohibition on Chicago crime during July and August, the first two "dry" months, and pointing out a new argument against the addition of 1,000 policemen to the present force:

"July and August, 1919, are the first two months of prohibition, and a few figures are now available to show the effect on crime in Chicago.

"July was not a fair test, as much liquor was stored in homes after the beginning of the month. Then the race riots occurred during the month.

Huge Drop in Arrests.

"Yet the total number of arrests in July for all causes was 36 per cent less than the arrests of any previous July for five years.

"In August the total number of arrests decreased 51 per cent over August, 1918, and 73 per cent over August, 1916.

"The total number of arrests in Chicago in August, 1919, was 7,768; in August, 1918, 11,761, and in August, 1916, 13,441.

"At the present rate there will be a decrease of more than 40,000 arrests in Chicago in the coming year.

Forty Thousand Days Saved.

"An arrest means a day lost to a policeman. Oftentimes he spends many days in attendance upon court in a single arrest.

"This means 40,000 days saved for one officer, or 400 days for 1,000 officers. Certainly we do not need 1,000 extra policemen with this showing.

"In South Chicago, where I have held court, there has been hardly a case of wife beating since July 1, although such cases were frequent before that.

"The only crimes now on the increase are robberies and murders. These are committed by a tough school of young criminals, who are encouraged by the lax enforcement of the law.

How to Help Chicago.

"With 1,000 policemen released from petty police duty and assigned to the job of catching and punishing these dangerous crooks Chicago will be much safer and the evil reputation recently given her will not be justified."

DR. F. O. TONNEY FREED FROM WIFE ON CRUELTY CHARGE

DR. F. O. TONNEY

Dr. Frederick O. Tonney, superintendent of the municipal laboratories, was granted a decree of divorce from his wife Clara by Judge Robert E. Crowe in the Superior court Sept. 3.

Dr. Tonney testified that his wife had treated him cruelly and had threatened his life. He was afraid of physical violence at night and had to sleep in another part of the house with the door locked. On two occasions when his wife was in violent temper he had sat up with her all night to pacify her.

After being attacked with a bird cage and a can of peas which he had purchased, Dr. Tonney testified he was forced to leave home and live at hotels.

MATRIMONIAL TIE HERE IS TWICE AS BINDING AS USUAL

Consider Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Berbuicker—two and one-half times married!

They hustled in from Calvin, N. D., yesterday—Berbuicker and Miss Hattie Staeger—and sought the office of Justice of Peace Samuel Harrison in Evanston to have a hitch tied for better or for worse.

The j. p. wedded them.

"Bless you, my children, may you always—wait a minute." He gazed at her hand. "You've got the ring on the right finger but the wrong hand."

They tried it again.

In the middle of the ceremony the justice again looked down on Miss Staeger's ring. It was on the left hand, according to the rules, but it graced the thumb!

"Now," instructed the justice, "put the ring on this finger. No, here. Ah, that's right." Once more he went through with the ceremony.

"Bless you, my children, you are two and one-half times married," quoth the justice.

"G-g-gosh!" said the bridegroom.

STEWART FREES 3 MEN AND 52 CASES OF LIQUOR

Judicial Action Seen as a Blow to Search and Seizure.

The "wets" are jubilant and the "drys" are up in arms over a decision given yesterday by Judge Hugh R. Stewart which makes the search and seizure law practically inoperative in Chicago in its most drastic interpretation. Judge Stewart released three employes of the Hotel Sherman and ordered fifty-two cases of whisky returned to the hotel owners.

The arrests had been brought about by striking waiters picketing the hotel. They had seen the defendants, they said, moving the whisky from the hotel to its liquor salesrooms at 175 North Clark street. The court held the police exceeded their authority; that they had no right to make the arrests without first obtaining a warrant. As the hotel owned both the place the liquor was taken from and the place to which it was carried, he said, it was just like "taking a thing from one pocket and putting it in another." It was not subject, therefore, he declared, to seizure on a public highway.

Draws Personal Illustration.

"If I were walking along the street with a bottle of whisky in my hand," the judge explained to a policeman, "you would have no right to arrest me, even though you were certain it was whisky, unless you had absolute proof and a warrant properly signed."

"If the judge were right every criminal law in the state would be crippled," said Frank B. Ebbert, attorney for the Anti-Saloon league.

Assistant Attorney General Mills also said he believed the judge's decision was wrong, but said he did not care to make a statement in the absence of Attorney General Brundage.

Assistant Corporation Counsel James W. Breen gave an oral opinion several days ago supporting Judge Stewart's decision. A written copy of this opinion will be sent to Chief Garrity for the guidance of policemen in making arrests.

Judge Explains Views.

"I have not rushed into print about the search and seizure act," said Judge Stewart, "but there has been a lot of sloppy comment made by Farwell, Ebbert et al., regarding my decision under this act, so that I am impelled to make a brief answer.

"Sections 16 and 17 of the act sets forth how a seizure suit must be started by a sworn complaint to a judge, setting forth facts to justify the issuing of a search warrant to seize intoxicating liquors. The search warrant must be signed by a judge before a seizure will be authorized.

"Without a complaint and search warrant in due form no person can make a legal seizure of intoxicating liquors under the search and seizure act. Let Farwell, Ebbert, and other so-called reformers read the law and they will know that my decisions under this act are right. I did not make the law; I only apply it. Let them abide by it, as it is the law of the land."

DEATHS FROM "FLU" SPEED ROBERTSON'S ANTI-SMOKE FIGHT

FOUR deaths from "flu" in the last week of August and another yesterday, together with seven new cases in the last ten days, caused Health Commissioner Robertson yesterday to combine his campaign against smoke with a fight to prevent the recurrence of a "flu" epidemic this fall.

Dr. Robertson's first step was a conference with Acting Corporation Counsel Smejkal on the commissioner's power to close smoking industrial plants. After the conference Dr. Robertson dictated a letter to Armour & Co., giving them until next Wednesday morning to abate their smoke nuisance or be closed.

"A few cases of influenza are already being reported in Chicago and it is believed that there will be a recurrence of the epidemic and of pneumonia this fall," wrote the commissioner to Armour & Co. "Knowing this as I do, it is my plain duty to notify you that it will be necessary for this department to proceed not later than Wednesday morning to summarily abate this nuisance by stopping the fires under your boilers unless you have abated the nuisance prior to that time."

Since 1917 more than fifty suits have been brought against Armour & Co. and 111 violations have been reported.

Dr. Robertson advised that persons with "summer colds" should see their physicians immediately.

EAST CHICAGO POLICE DISPLAY TALENT FOR JOB

Find the Owner of Stolen Auto After Three Weeks.

The East Chicago police know what to do when they recover a stolen automobile and, by gosh, they don't want any interference by smart alecky Chicago detectives.

Glenn E. Holmes, a garage owner, had a new car stolen at State and Lake streets on Aug. 13. That same night it was found abandoned, by the East Chicago sleuths. Yesterday Holmes received a tip where his car was and passed it along to Detectives Revere and Sweeney who went to East Chicago.

Detectives on Trail.

"Hear you've got a car out here belonging to Glenn E. Holmes of Chicago," said Revere.

"Dunno," replied the only policeman on the premises. "Got a car. Dunno who owns it. The chief's out."

"Where is the car?"

"It's out, too. Dunno when it'll be back."

The detectives hardly had started back to Chicago when Mr. Holmes received a telephone call.

Holmes Is Advised.

"Mr. Holmes? This is the East Chicago police station. We've got your car out here. If you come out you can get it."

Holmes went out and got it.

"Looks like it's been used considerably," mused Holmes.

"Yes," said the East Chicago chief. "We'll miss it. You know, if it hadn't been for a certain clew we followed up you might never have got it back."

LAFAYETTE AND MARNE BATTLE DAY OBSERVED

New York, Sept. 6.—Ambassador Jusserand of France was the principal speaker at the Franco-American exercises held today in New York's historic city hall in commemoration of the 162d anniversary of the birth of Lafayette and the fifth anniversary of the first battle of the Marne.

Messages of felicitation and congratulation upon the victory of allied arms, which had been brought to pass since the last celebration of Lafayette day, were read from President Poincare of France, Gen. Pershing, Maj. Gen. Wood, and Secretary of State Lansing.

Representatives of a number of foreign governments were present at the ceremonies, which were held in the aldermanic chamber.

Guards Save Girl from Lake at Wilson Beach

Life guards rescued Miss Winifred Lane, 15 years old, 4547 Clifton avenue, from the lake at Wilson beach yesterday. The young woman, an expert swimmer, was seen to sink where the water is twenty feet deep. After working over the girl twenty minutes the guards were able to revive her. The life guards were Charles Finn and Charles Hedberg.

A Home Recipe for Wrinkled, Saggy Skin

The famous Saxolite lotion recommended by beauty specialists for removing wrinkles and for reducing distended pores, can easily be made at home. Ask your druggist for Saxolite in powdered form, one ounce, and a half pint of witch hazel. Dissolve the powder in the witch hazel and bathe the face, neck and hands in the solution. Results are remarkable, and instantaneous. The skin tightens, and this naturally reduces the wrinkles, as well as creases or folds about the neck, cheeks or hands. The tissue beneath the skin also becomes firmer and more solid.

One feels much refreshed and exhilarated after using this truly wonderful preparation. Many women look five or ten years younger after using this only a short time.

It's a big, broad statement to say the Knabe is the world's best piano. But Godowsky, Ornstein and many other great pianists believe it's so—so do we. We don't ask you to purchase the Knabe—all we ask is that you hear its beautiful tone. Then you will know why most artists prefer this piano. A visit of inspection will not obligate you to purchase.

MEMBERS' WING AT SOUTH SHORE ACCUSES BROWN

President Misrepresents Their Stand on Club Election, Claim.

Electioneering is brisk at the South Shore Country club.

The balloting this fall for officers and members of the board of governors—made sprightly by the placing of a "members' ticket" in the field in opposition to that of the regular nominating committee—has been given added zest by an exchange of letters.

The last of these, signed by the members' campaign committee, accuses President Everett C. Brown of having misrepresented their position. The communication, dated Aug. 20, further requested that Mr. Brown cause it to be circulated. But, a fortnight later, a supplemental communication asserts that President Brown had refused, hence the committee decided to make it public in his stead.

Reply to Brown's Letter.

The missive purports to answer a letter from the president directed to all the members. In part, it says:

"You state that disciplined members of the club and some of their friends have held meetings and have selected us as officers and directors upon a Members' ticket. We do not believe that after calm deliberation you feel that this is stating the fact accurately.

"We trust that our standing in the clug is such that members attending the club with their families will be assured that any violation of any bylaw or rule would not be tolerated by any of us.

"Regret" His Refusal.

"We regret that you have refused to permit the secretary to give us at this time the membership list of the club with the addresses of the members or to permit the announcement in our monthly magazine that a Members' ticket is in the field."

Mr. Brown last night denied having received the campaign committee's letter or any request from it to make use of the columns of the club magazine.

The Members' ticket follows:

PRESIDENT—John G. Campbell, member of Union League, Chicago Golf, Law, Legal, and American clubs, of the Illinois and Chicago Bar associations; member of board of governors of South Shore Country club.

VICE PRESIDENT—Henry Paulman, president H. Paulman & Co. Director of Olympia Fields Country club; member of board of governors of South Shore Country club 1912-1915; member of Chicago Athletic association and Flossmoor Country club.

TREASURER—Frank M. Gordon, vice president, First Trust and Savings bank; member of Bankers' club; Olympia Fields Country club; Chicago Athletic association, Mid Day club, and ex-secretary of Illinois Athletic club.

SECRETARY—Wilbur F. McWhinney, residence, South Shore Country club; member Chicago Board of Trade; Chicago Athletic association.

BOARD OF GOVERNORS—Dr. John F. Golden, William F. Bode, vice president Reid Murdoch & Co.; Joseph E. Hitt, coal mine operator; Charles C. Willson, vice president, Great Lakes Trust bank; Clifford C. Chickering of Chickering Brothers, piano manufacturers, and Frank F. Winans, vice president, the National City company.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Austwick recently celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. Mr. Austwick has been a hotel, restaurant, river boat, and club chef since 1858. He was employed at the Chicago club for more than nine years before he went into business for himself. POSTAL MEN OBJECT TO BONUS.

Protest against the passage of the Madden bill, now before the United States senate, that provides for a bonus of $150 a year to all employés of the postoffice department, was voiced by speakers at a meeting of Chicago Branch Railway Mail association in the Hotel La Salle yesterday afternoon.

NEGRO CONFESSES MURDER DURING RACE TROUBLES

Through the arrest and confession yesterday of Judge Tate, 37 years old, colored, 320 East Thirty-eighth street, the police have cleared up the murder of Joseph Powers, white, 525 West Forty-second place, a street car conductor, during a riot the morning of July 29.

A coroner's jury Friday had decided Powers was the aggressor and ordered William Henderson, 4017 South Wabash avenue, and Henry Renfree, 3211 Vernon avenue, Negroes, released.

Soon afterward Lieut. John Norton and several detectives heard Tate knew about the killing and arrested him. He confessed to Assistant State's Attorney Thomas E. Reilly and Marvin Wilson, an investigator.

"Henderson and I were together at Root street and Emerald avenue the morning of July 29 when three white men across the street started toward us," he said. "One went back to the curb while the other two advanced. Then one fled. The other man struck me and knocked me down. I got up and stabbed him, then ran."

At the time of the murder Tate wore a mustache, but since had shaved it off to make his identification harder, he said. Tate is being held.

TRANSFER NEGRO POLICE BECAUSE OF RACE FEELING

Further friction between white and colored policemen of the Fiftieth street police station caused the transfer yesterday of three colored patrolmen—William P. McCall, Charles R. Rowell, and Waldo L. Baston.

A month ago the three patrolmen faced charges of disobedience to orders before the police trial board because they insisted on their "constitutional rights" too strongly. The charges, signed by Acting Capt. Michael Lee, specified that McCall, Rowell, and Baston had insisted on sleeping in beds in the dormitory provided for white policemen.

After the hearing the men were put back to work, as they were needed to help quell the race riots. The case is still under advisement. Subsequently the board made an investigation and found that the race feeling was still strong in the station. The transfer order was the result. McCall was sent to the East Chicago station and Rowell and Baston to West Chicago avenue and Desplaines street, respectively.

BOILER PLANT FIRE DAMAGE $10,000.

SOLDIER CHARGES LOAN MAN FELLED HIM, BROKE JAW

Forgotten $8 Leads to Loop Battle and Two Warrants.

About two years ago, before Abe Lobell of 1921 Indiana avenue, went to war, he came into possession of a business card of Carl M. White, who conducts a loan office at 56 West Washington street. Above a picture on the card was the legend: "Let's you and I get acquainted." Abe followed the advice and emerged from White's office with $8.

When Lobell went into the army he made no allotment of his pay to White. In fact, he forgot all about the $8.

Lobell came back from France and got a job as bell hop at the Planters hotel.

Connects with a Punch.

White was passing the hotel Thursday evening when he saw Lobell. Probably forgetting that "no publicity" is one of the watchwords of his business as set forth on his card, he is declared to have "lit into" the bell boy with such vigor that, it is charged, he knocked him down and dislocated his jaw. Then, thinking he had obtained $8 worth, he went on his way.

On Friday White was arrested by Detective Sergeants Charles McGurn and John Prendergast on a charge of assault and battery. Yesterday Lobell obtained another warrant charging assault with intent to kill. White obtained release on a $100 cash bond.

When He Faced Judge Landis.

White, a confessed "10 per cent a month" loan man, who will be arraigned on Monday in the South Clark street court, has been before Judge Landis.

"White," the judge told him on the occasion of their last meeting nearly two years ago, "you are just trying to jimmy your way into the house of correction. If you are ever called before me, take my advice and don't take the stand."

White has been in court a number of times, partly through marital troubles, but mostly in connection with his loan business.

The taxpayers must pay back taxes on one-third the full valuation of the sums named as follows: John F. L. Smith, Highland Park, $270,000, full valuation for 1913 to 1918 inclusive; Chauncey Jones, Waukegan, $15,000, full valuation for 1915 to 1919 inclusive.

SHE HAD $300 BEFORE SHE MET THAT BLONDE MAN

'Invested' in a Flivver; Gone. $300—and the Blonde Man, Too.

He was a new policeman and never had anything like that happen to him before. So when a flivver stopped in front of him at Broadway and Lawrence avenue early Tuesday morning and two men and a woman leaped out and took to their heels, he didn't know exactly what to do. But with great presence of mind he jumped behind an electric light pole and let several bullets fly skyward.

Nothing happened. He came out of hiding and examined the machine. It bore an Indiana license number, 184242. It was towed to the police garage and the Indiana authorities were notified.

A Blonde Fellow, About 25.

No reply had been received yesterday when Mrs. Mary Seeglitz, 442 St. John place, came to see Detective Sergeants David Revere and Charles Sweeney.

"I bought that car," she said. "E-er, that is, it belonged to me. Well, I paid $300 for it, but I don't think it's mine. It happened this way. I was up at the Covent garden Monday night when I got to talking to a blonde fellow about 25 years old, who said his name was Joseph Randall. I told him I was thinking of investing in real estate.

Went Home and Kept Quiet.

"He advised me to invest in a car instead. He said he had a new one he'd sell me for $500—$300 down and $20 a month. I agreed and he drove me home and I gave him the $300. Then he started out to teach me to drive the thing. We were going along Diversey boulevard when the thing stopped at Halsted street.

"'No gas,' he said. 'I'll get some.' He got out and I waited. I waited for more than an hour and then got out and went into a store to telephone for help. You see, I didn't know what to do. When I was in the store I heard the thing start chugging again. I ran to the door and there was this fellow Randall driving away with another fellow. Realizing I'd been stung, I went home and kept quiet."

FIRST CHARGES FILED AGAINST POLICEWOMAN

For the first time in the history of the police department charges were filed against a policewoman, when Alice Clements, who is detailed to police department stores, was made the subject of a complaint filed with Chief of Police Garrity on Friday in affidavit form by Louis Cohn of the Central Undertaking company, 318 Federal street.

The charges specify that when a man was killed in the F. W. Woolworth company's store at 38 South State street several days ago, the policewoman remarked to other attachés when she learned that the body was to be taken to the Central Undertaking rooms, that Cohn was a "body snatcher," and that he had on several occasions taken property from the clothing of bodies taken to his establishment. Cohn at once investigated and made formal complaint.

Capt. Crippen of the office of the second deputy was assigned to carry on an investigation for the police department.

The policewoman called on the undertaker yesterday, Mr. Cohn said, and apologized.

ARMED MINERS MARCH ALL DAY; AGREE TO RETURN

1,500 Men Obey U. M. W. Official and Abandon Unionizing Trip.

Charleston, W. Va., Sept. 6.—[Special.]—A message was received here at 9 o'clock tonight from President Frank Keeney that the troop of 1,500 armed miners bent upon marching from Kanawha coal fields to the Logan fields to aid the miners there to organize had been stopped a few miles from Danville, Boone county.

About fifteen hundred armed men were encamped there for the night, said President Keeney, in reporting on long distance phone, and in the meanwhile he took a motor car for a point higher up the Coal river in an effort to head off another large force of armed miners who were to have affected a junction with the men now at Danville.

It is thought that this is the turning point in the mad dash of the men across the mountains.

Talk of Calling Troops.

Gov. John J. Cornwell issued a statement setting forth that he would not tolerate for a moment any such practices and produced communication from the secretary of war and Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood relative to the action he had taken to procure government troops to quell any outburst.

The governor said he was "tired of fooling" with these men and promises an investigation into the conduct of the Guyan or Logan coal field.

Meanwhile it was learned that 800 miners at Montgomery had decided to go back to their work, but gave warning that unless their Logan comrades were allowed to organize they would immediately start a march across the hills that would not be stopped until they had obtained satisfaction. With Keeney's message the situation here is relaxing somewhat, but steps are being taken to prevent a double cross.

Marched All Day.

Augmented by from 500 to 1,500 men, all said to be armed, the miners, now at Danville, had left Oakgrove early today on a march into Logan county to force the unionization of the Guyon coal field. At Oakgrove last night they had been addressed by Gov. Cornwell, who had endeavored to dissuade them from carrying out their threat. The miners gave the governor a salute, following his address, by firing their rifles into the air, but did not take his advice.

In the meanwhile twenty-five automobiles, loaded with deputy sheriffs, armed with rifles, left Logan today with the intention of stopping the invaders before they crossed the Logan county line. The deputies are led by Sheriff Crafin of Logan county.

It also was reported that the operators in the Buyan field had unloaded a carload of machine guns and ammunition in the vicinity of the mines, to be used in defending the property.

Illinois "Insurgents" Move.

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 6.—About fifty insurgent miners, who started from Springfield on a march early this morning, had reached Auburn, about eighteen miles south of this city, late tonight.

Austrian Railway Men Strike.

VIENNA, Sept. 2.—A general railway strike has been declared throughout Austria. The strikers include the employés of the ministry of communications. The postal employés have as yet taken no action.

Concessions made by the railway men have resulted in the movement of a few local trains in certain parts of the country, but traffic to the southeast is tied up. No food trains reached Vienna today, notwithstanding an agreement that such trains would be kept moving.

Inventor Arrested on Woman's Tale of Swindle

Nicholas Johann, an inventor, was arrested yesterday on complaint of Miss Anna Schulz, 23 West Chicago avenue, who said he swindled her out of $100. Miss Schulz told the police that Johann induced her to invest her savings in a scheme which he was promoting, and then vanished.

REDS FACE STERN ACTION ON PLAN TO SEIZE STATE

Wholesale arrests of "reds" may follow the closing of the Communist Party of America convention at Smolny institute, 1221 Blue Island avenue, last night, according to authorities present at the final sessions.

A program identical in wording with that adopted by the soviet government of Russia, planning to crush the government of the United States and substitute a régime founded on the Lenine-Trotzky plan, called forth revolutionary speeches by the score from the New York and Detroit Russian delegates, who packed the convention and controlled by caucus the vote on every measure.

Police and department of justice stenographers in the hall made verbatim reports of the entire procedings.

With the opening of the convention last Monday the supremacy of the "bolshevik" delegates was demonstrated when the more conservative leaders were forced to stand by while red flags and various revolutionary banners were scattered through the hall. These flags were later torn down by the police.

Alexander Stoklitsky, now awaiting trial on deportation charges and the real leader of the Russian "red" element at the convention, has dominated every move made by the delegates. He controlled approximately ninety-four votes out of the 130 present.

There Is Where You Can Own a Big Paying Almond Orchard

Right in the heart of the choicest almond-growing district of California—in one of the most beautiful sections of that beautiful state—you are offered an opportunity which your good judgment will tell you at least to investigate.

And now is the time to look into this while the choicest lands are available—also because buying now means this season's planting—getting an early start.

We are ready to give you all the facts—ready to tell you how you can remain where you are, if you wish, and still make extraordinary profits from one of these richly producing almond orchards at Paso Robles.

You may not know much now about the money to be made in almond growing. This is your opportunity to learn into what a vast industry it is developing and how our plan enables you to enter it with a very modest investment.

If—in the clear light of verified facts which the Associated Almond Growers of Paso Robles present here and of the further facts which you can get by calling at our office or from our book, you can realize how quickly almond trees come into bearing—if you can appreciate the size and sureness of the crops, and the large and constantly increasing stream of profits which flows year after year from even a 10-acre orchard—

And if—in the light of these same facts—you can visualize the future of this industry as clearly as we who know the actual conditions see it, we honestly believe that you will not allow anything to stand between you and the ownership of at least one of these 10-acre orchards at Paso Robles. But we ask you only to investigate—then to act upon your own judgment as formed by the facts as you find them.

$2500.00 a Year for Life

$2,500 to $3,000 annually is what you may reasonably expect from a 10-acre Almond Orchard of 700 trees at Paso Robles! After you have read our book descriptive of this wonderful proposition, which we will send you free on request, you will regard this as a very conservative estimate. Take, for instance, the following figures based on the actual yield of an average young orchard. Last year almonds sold for 25½c per pound. The records show that 8-year-old almond trees of the right stock, when planted on the right kind of soil and properly cultivated, can easily be depended upon to yield from 20 to 30 pounds per tree. Let us take the lower figure—20 pounds. A 10-acre orchard—70 trees to the acre—700 trees in all—would yield 14,000 pounds. At 25c per pound they would bring $3,500 gross profit. The expense of growing and marketing is small—not over $50 per acre—leaving a net profit of $3,000. As the trees grow older, the yield becomes greater and greater each year, while the expense of caring for the orchard becomes less each year.

Increased Demand Forcing Profits Up

Practically all—99%—of the almonds produced in the United States are grown in California. But the entire almond crop of this country supplies only 15% of the domestic consumption. The other 85% is imported; and the imported almonds do not compare in richness, flavor and food value with the California varieties. Hence there is a constantly increasing demand for California almonds, far in excess of the supply. And do not overlook the fact that productive almond orchards constantly increase in value per acre. They are going higher every year.

Why PASO ROBLES is the Choicest Almond-Growing District in California

Look at the above map of a small section of California. It shows you the exact location of Paso Robles, about midway between San Francisco and Los Angeles and about 16 miles from the coast. Although most of the domestic crop of almonds is grown in California, it does not follow that all parts of that great state are adapted to almond culture. California measures a north and south distance as great as from Kansas City to Pittsburgh—and its interests are just as varied as exist between those two cities.

We had the whole expanse of the state to choose from and could have located our project in any part of California. We chose Paso Robles because the soil and the climate were ideal for almond growing, because we found that the most profitable crops were raised there, because no irrigation or fertilization is necesary in this district, and because there has been no crop failure in this section for 35 years, when planted on the high ground above the frost line.

We had the advice of the leading almond grower, Mr. G. A. Nehrhood, now our field manager, who for years has made a study of every part of the state and who says that nowhere in California is there a tract with so many natural advantages for almond culture as at Paso Robles.

Mr. Nehrhood's statement is verified by the actual results obtained in crops and prices by the orchard owners in this section. In fact, we have letters from authorities who report much larger returns than we claim. People who investigate say that we are too conservative.

A Safe Investment in a Growing Industry

Let it be clearly understood that this is NOT a real estate or land-selling proposition in the generally accepted meaning of the term.

Immediately after your contract is signed your land is planted by experts and your trees cared for by them until they begin to bear—and as long after that as you may desire. Your presence there is not necessary, although we should like to see every prospective buyer visit Paso Robles. Such a trip would prove more than anything we can say. You have crops easy to handle, imperishable and quickly sold at high prices—you also have the co-operation of a strong association of several hundred neighboring almond growers whose interests are identical with yours.

Remember—no almond crop failures at Paso Robles in 35 years. Compare that with the frost-bitten corn, wheat and fruit crops of the middle west. Can you think of any surer way to make money—big money—from the soil than by owning a Paso Robles almond orchard?

Can You Save $25 a Month?

To secure one of these orchards you make a small initial payment as low as $250—then only $25 a month—but you pay ONLY HALF the purchase price in this way. The balance is paid from the profits of your crops which we harvest for you. By this arrangement it is to our interest to get your orchard in paying condition as early as possible. We must give you our best expert service.

And to further protect you, one of the largest trust companies in California, the Title Insurance and Trust Co., Los Angeles (capital $2,500,000.00), is the custodian of our funds, holds the title to the land for your benefit and deliver the deed and a clear title to you under the terms of our agreement when the contract is completed.

Our easy terms and agreement to plant and care for your orchard will be given when you call—or when we send our book.

And Also—A Beautiful Acre Home Site

Whether you buy one of these orchards or not, there is the opportunity to have a beautiful home site up on the hills overlooking the Salinas Valley and the city of Paso Robles.

We secured a most desirable tract of this superb land and offer it in acre tracts for homes. Half of each acre we will plant in fruit and nut trees (cherries, apricots, figs, plums, prunes, almonds, walnuts) and care for them for four years without extra charge. The other half wil be reserved for house, garden and chicken and turkey raising.

These are superb locations for either winter or all year round homes. They will have all modern conveniences—cement walks, electricity, water, telephone connections, etc.—installed without cost to buyers. And through the property runs the great cement highway leading through a number of other beautiful California towns and cities to the ocean beach—an easy ride by auto through this country of fruitful orchards, flowers and pleasant homes.

If you want one of these home sites, act early. They are going rapidly.

Funds Deposited With Trust Company

Not only are the men back of this association responsible—not only does your money go into the most tangible of all investments—but the title to the land is held by the Title Insurance and Trust Co. of Los Angeles (capital $2,500,000.00), which also is trustee of the development fund, exercises constant supervision over the properties and transfers the title to the buyer when the contract is completed. Nothing safer than this in which to put your surplus earnings.

Money-Back Agreement

If you visit our property and do not find this investment exactly as presented in our booklet, "A Life Income Plus California"—and you will have thirty days in which to make your investigation—we agree to refund the payments you have made, together with your railroad and Pullman fares paid to inspect your purchase. If you select some one to represent you and this person does not find this investment to be as represented in our Booklet, we will refund payments you have made and pay railroad and Pullman fare.

Now!

This is the time to find out about these almond orchards and their profit producing power. Last year we sold in about two months all we could plant and for that reason many people who put off too long had to wait until the next available planting season. Don't postpone your decision. Come and see the wonderful pictures of the Paso Robles almond orchards, get the facts and figures and then decide. Buy only if you find undeniable evidence that these profits are really to be made. If you can also make the trip to Paso Robles, go—see the land, the orchards, the city. Have the question definitely settled whether you will own an almond orchard and make a life income of $2500 a year or more—or put your savings elsewhere. If you decide on the orchard, get it for this season's planting.

FREE! THIS BOOK

If you can't call to see the exhibit and get the facts, we have ready for you this richly illustrated book which tells the story and gives the facts about almond growing at Paso Robles. It is yours free, for the coupon.

VOTERS TO FIX FATE OF EXTRA POLICEMEN

Permanent Addition of 1,000 to Be Decided at the Polls.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

The voters who vote next Wednesday will decide whether they desire to increase their taxes to obtain a permanent addition of 1,000 patrolmen to the police force.

The question is not put that explicitly. It only asks the voters to approve an appropriation of $600,000 to provide the extra 1,000 for the remainder of this year. But that is so misleading that the city council issued a declaration saying it is the intention to employ the added patrolmen permanently and that that means the borrowing of $2,800,000 and asking the legislature to increase taxes in 1921 for the maintenance of these patrolmen.

The special election to decide this question will be held in connection with the primary for the constitutional convention with the same polling places, same judges and clerks. For both primary and election the polls open at 6 o'clock in the morning. For the election, voting stops at 4 o'clock in the afternoon; the primary continues an hour longer.

Women May Vote on Police.

On the additional police, both women and men may vote; at the primary only men.

The foregoing tells the question, the time, places and conditions of voting, and now why the question.

Mayor Thompson and the city administration deem more police advisable and necessary. The bureau of public efficiency says the addition is unwarranted and involves financial dangers. The views of this organization were summarized in THE TRIBUNE yesterday.

The mayor's written record was of a stereotype form until the race riots burst forth.

"I have pledged the people of Chicago that our streets shall be safe for men, women, and children. The chief of police must make them so."

That is from Mayor Thompson's first inaugural message, April 28, 1915. A year later, April 26, 1916, he wrote the city council: 'I join with the chief of police in the opinion that Chicago needs more patrolmen, better vehicle equipment, and a modern signal system."

Mayor Repeats Demand.

April 28, 1919, in his annual message, Mayor Thompson said: "I again urge your honorable body to give serious consideration to the expansion of the police department, to provide a greater force . . ."

After calling attention to the last two preceding recommendations the mayor, during the race riots on July 31 last, wrote the council: "In view of the existing conditions of public disorder which have been prevalent in the last few days, these needs have been vitally emphasized. I now urge your honorable body to take steps immediately to provide for the permanent employment of 2,000 additional patrolmen . . . so that the lives and property of all our citizens may be properly safeguarded henceforth."

He added a request of "urgent consideration without undue delay."

Gravity Emphasizes Need.

To this can be added a statement issued Friday by Police Chief Garrity asserting that Chicago needs more patrolmen, as compared with other cities. The Bureau of Public Efficiency used these same cities to demonstrate the lack of the need.

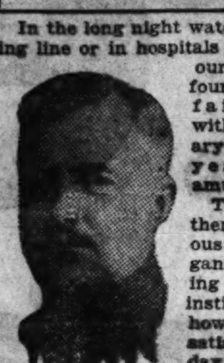
The mayor's message of July 31 was referred to the police committee. It attempted to have a joint meeting with the finance committee, but no quorum of that committee was obtained and so it is not on record for or against the increase.

The police committee recommended the calling of the special election for the purpose of submitting the question. It was represented to the committee that the bankers would finance the plan. At once 1,000 patrolmen were added to remain until after the election. The council called a special election and placed the question on the ballot.

Aldermen Alter Ideas.

Since, the police committee has visited Detroit, Buffalo, Boston, New York, and Philadelphia and has recommended that 975 men in "soft berths" be dislodged and placed upon post duty. The working out of that plan is now in the hands of a subcommittee. In addition, several aldermen, who as members of the police committee voted for the temporary employment of 1,000 added patrolmen, are now convinced that Chicago has a large enough force as compared with eastern cities, without permanently adding 1,000 bluecoats.

BUCK PRIVATES, OVERSEAS SOCIETY, PLAN 'DUGOUT' HERE



SGT. EDWARD M. McGUIRE

In the long night watches on the firing line or in hospitals or rest billets, our fighting men found that tempus failed to fugit with its customary alacrity. They yearned for amusement.

To be sure, there were various patriotic organizations catering to the social instinct, but somehow they did not satisfy. So one day there sprang into being the Buck Privates' society. Its success was instantaneous.

Originally organized in the 6th United States field artillery of the 1st division, which artillery regiment, by the way, fired the first American shot in the war, the Buck Privates' society soon numbered thousands of members in every branch of the service.

There was no formality of initiation. The only qualification was that you had to be an overseas buck private.

In order that the society may become a permanent institution the charter members, now discharged, are beginning a campaign of organization. The original overseas organizer, Private Paul F. Collins, Battery D, 6th field artillery, lives in Los Angeles. He is president and chief buck private.

But one of his comrades, First Sergt. Edward M. McGuire, is now in Chicago, and has opened headquarters as national field representative at room 664 Hotel Sherman. He hopes all enlisted men and noncommissioned officers will communicate with him.

"The Buck Privates' society in no way conflicts with the American Legion," Sergt. McGuire said. "In fact, I might say one of its aims is that of coöperation with the legion.

"We hope to establish a dugout in Chicago with a membership of at least 50,000 men."

City Paving 85 Miles of Streets Despite Troubles

Despite labor troubles, which have handicapped the work of street improvement, between eighty-five and ninety miles of paved streets will be added to the city's mileage of improved thoroughfares this year, according to Edward J. Glackin, secretary of the board of local improvements. The cost of these improvements will be $3,000,000.

PRIMARY FIGHT FOR CONVENTION SEATS WARMS UP

Candidates in Close Districts Issue Their "Broadsides."

The constitutional convention primary campaign in the Cook county districts, reached the "warring" stage yesterday. Broadsides were fired in a dozen of the bailiwicks where the voting is likely to be close next Wednesday.

John M. Glenn, in the Sixth district, put out the definite claim that he will be one of the Republican nominees, claiming that Rufus C. Dawes, his principal opponent, has been indorsed by only the Twenty-fourth ward organization in Chicago and that Mr. Dawes has only four committeemen with him in Evanston. The intimation has been that substantially all of the Brundage strength in the Chicago wards was to be thrown to Dawes.

Louis A. Cambridge, campaign manager for Mr. Glenn, issued this statement to Glenn workers:

"Pay no attention to false gods. Ignore eleventh hour rumers. The Republican voters of the Sixth district will vote for your candidate, John M. Glenn, for the Republican nomination for delegate to the constitutional convention at the primary election Wednesday. He stands for a constitution for the plain people. He is not trying to get the nomination by hanging on the skirts of any other candidate, but stands out clear and distinct for the principles of the Republican party."

Liquor Issue Raised.

Out in the Twenty-third district, embracing Oak Park and some of the northwest side wards, the wet and dry issue has been raised directly, due to the indorsement by the United Societies of William Ganschow of the west park board and Charles Woodward of Oak Park. Republicans in sympathy with the Anti-Saloon league have organized behind William S. Corbin of Oak Park and George M. Bagby of Chicago. The regular Republican organization has slated Ganschow and Woodward.

At a mass meeting held in the William Beye school gymnasium in Oak Park, all of the candidates had been invited to attend. Mr. Woodward was present and said that he had been indorsed by the United Societies without his knowledge. An open air meeting will be held at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon in Scoville park by the dry forces.

Englewood Fight Close.

Reports from the Englewood district indicate that all three of the Republican factional organizations are worried over the probable outcome of Wednesday's primaries. It has been impossible for any two of the candidates to make a mutual arrangement and the prospects are for a cut throat match between Chester W. Church, William H. Cruden, and Percival G. Baldwin, who have the backing, respectively, of the Brundage, Deneen, and Thompson factions.

Conferences are to be held today of the friends of former Probate Judge Charles S. Cutting, who are planning a whirlwind campaign in the two final days of the primary canvass, to nominate Mr. Cutting as one of the Republican candidates. The city hall organization is in complete control in the wards that form the Twenty-first district, that make up the central west side. This organization has slated Deputy City Collector George F. Lohman and Helmer C. Patterson. The Cutting managers expressed confidence last night that Mr. Cutting can break the slate, if the voters can be aroused sufficiently to go to the polls Wednesday.

Ward Clubs to Meet.

Republican and Democratic ward organizations all over the city are to meet today and tomorrow, to get final instructions for primary day from the ward committeemen and marked sample ballots will be ready for distribution.

Election officials at the city hall changed their forecasts somewhat as to the size of the primary vote Wednesday. "It looks as if an unexpectedly great interest has been stirred up within the last forty-eight hours," was the statement of Chief Clerk James F. Sullivan of the board of election commissioners. "The primary vote is to be much larger than earlier reports had indicated."

LISTEN, BUDDY: HERE'S BIG NEWS

Listen, Buddy. Remember when you flopped for the night on a mud soaked blanket in the bottom of a shell hole, with Jerry sending over everything he had? Remember what you were thinking about then? It was an American bed with real springs and clean, white sheets, beneath a roof that didn't leak, and lots and lots of peaceful quietude.

Well, Buddy, you can get it all right here in Chicago for 35 cents; and if you haven't got the 35, Sun Fairy Ann (ca we fait rien), as the French have it. The Salvation Army, the same outfit that gave you hot chocolate and doughnuts within grubbing distance of the first line, is giving it to you. The army opened its new hotel for soldiers, sailors, and marines yesterday at 47 South Wells street, and whether you're still in the service or have been discharged, it's all the same to them.

CABINET POST REPORTED OPEN TO W. W. MARSH

Democratic Treasurer Is Expected to Succeed Redfield.

Wilbur W. Marsh of Waterloo, Iowa, treasurer of the Democratic national committee, "the human dynamo from Iowa," as he is affectionately known within inner administration circles, has the refusal of the place in President Wilson's cabinet, soon to be vacated by Secretary of Commerce Redfield.

This information reached Democratic organization leaders in Illinois yesterday, by way of a feeler as to how the appointment of Mr. Marsh would be accepted by middle western Democrats.

Illinois will make no objection, it is learned, inasmuch as the regulars, who never have had anything good during seven years of Democratic government at Washington, have no expectation that the Redfield portfolio will be offered to one of their clan.

"Iowa is as close as a cabinet post will come to Illinois, so let's be with Marsh. He's our neighbor, at least," one of the regulars commented.

Mr. Marsh is the official coin collector for the Democratic national committee. "I wouldn't be afraid of Mark Hanna," he said, just after he had been elected treasurer of the committee, as the St. Louis convention adjourned in 1916. "I'll get the money. I'll have a campaign fund that will be sufficient for all legitimate needs."

And he did, as the Republican managers found out, later in the campaign.

FEATHERED STEEDS TO RACE—PERHAPS—AT ICE FUND MEET

A CHICKEN'S rightful place is in the frying pan, not on a race track.

Some of the department managers of Swift & Co. have come to this conclusion during the last few days, while attempting to train feathered steeds to harness as entries in the "O! Key-O!" field day at Comiskey park next Saturday afternoon. The cryptic letters represent a long established charitable organization which this year will share the profits of its annual field day with Chicago babies, through THE TRIBUNE free ice fund.

A feature of Saturday's meet is to be an official welcome home to Swift employés, who have returned after service wtih Uncle Sam. More than 9,000 left their jobs at the yards to enter the army, navy, and marine corps.

Headed by the Swift military band of ninety pieces, the veterans will be reviewed by army and company officers. Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood is expected to be present.

The afternoon will be given over to gala day stunts, games, and races. Thrift and war saving stamps will be given as prizes.

ECKHART SLATED TO DIRECT FOOD PRICE ADJUSTERS

Merchant Will Head New Chicago Committee on H. C. L., Hint.

NEW FOOD CHIEF?

Chicago Leader Slated to Head Federal Price Fixing Body.

J. W. ECKHART.

John W. Eckhart, Chicago business man, member of the Chicago plan commission and former floor leader of the board of education, has been prominently mentioned as the probable organizer and chairman for Chicago's new federal fair price committee.

Although official announcement has not reached Chicago federal authorities from the food administration in Washington, Mr. Eckhart's name yesterday filtered through unofficial channels, and was hailed with satisfaction by Uncle Sam's agents who have been struggling for weeks to bring to book food speculators and profiteers.

District Attorney Clyne said he had heard Mr. Eckhart would be asked to serve on the committee, but had no official confirmation.

Clyne Lauds Eckhart.

"No better man could be chosen to launch this highly important committee," he said.

It was pointed out the man to lead the new price fixing committee should be neutral in reference to market interests, and that Mr. Eckhart, interested in the flour industry, where prices are fixed by the government, is in a position to direct the committee in its food survey and price regulation.

If he accepts the post, he will be charged with the selection of representative men from every important industry and strong representatives from among the consumers to complete the committee personnel.

Mr. Eckhart could not be reached for verification of the unofficial announcement. He started an automobile trip through Wisconsin Thursday and is not expected home until the middle of the week.

As a further insurance against a sugar shortage in Chicago, District Attorney Clyne wired to New York representatives of the sugar administration asking that sufficient sugar be released to Chicago to meet all public demands at the government price during the next two months.

Averts "Sugar Famine."

This request, together with an announcement by Henry M. Rolapp, chairman of the Chicago sugar distribution committee, that government shipments from Cuba are being rushed, cleared away the "famine" clouds.

"Sugar will continue to be sold in Chicago at a retail cost of 12 cents," declared Mr. Rolapp. "The raw sugar coming from Cuba, which will be refined and ready for the shipper within forty-eight hours of its arrival, is the best club with which to deal with sugar hoarders."

Col. Fabyan to Rescue.

A new ally in the battle against the H. C. L. appeared in the person of Col. George Fabyan of Riverbank villa, in the Fox River valley, who announced to Mr. Clyne he will open a big store or string of stores in the valley and sell sugar, other food, and clothing to consumers at cost.

The predicted seizure of a car load of cocoa was completed during the day when Deputy Marshal Thomas Hennebry took over the car shipped by the National Cocoa Mill company of New York as it reached the yards at Joliet. The technical charge is that it contains too much cornstarch, but it is said the seizure is the first move in a new drive against the alleged chocolate trust.

COFFEE

that is supremely good costs but little more than ordinary coffee

SURELY there are times when you taste coffee of such rare aroma, coffee so mellow and golden and fine, that you are moved to enthusiasm . . . "Why, this is unusually good coffee!" . . . . At such times it is likely that you are tasting the Savoy blend.

A coffee so fragrant, so delicate and lingering in "bouquet" as Savoy Coffee, might seem too expensive for general use. But it isn't. It costs but little more than ordinary grades and makes many more delicious cups per pound.

The reason is this: Coffee is blended —just as rare perfumes are blended. Savoy coffee is simply good coffee, wonderfully blended. Savoy blending is an art that costs us large sums. But this cost, distributed over hundreds of thousands of pounds, becomes very small to you. We practically lend you the blend.

Go today to your grocer and ask him for Savoy coffee. While he is wrapping the package, ask him what he thinks of it. His opinion will make your purchase as pleasant as the coffee will make your meal.

YANKEES SWEEP TENNIS MATCHES AGAINST ANZACS

Complete Rout of Losers by Two Singles and Doubles Wins.

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 6.—Continuing the route of the Australians started yesterday the American tennis team made a clean sweep of the international tournament this afternoon by winning two singles and a doubles match from the Anzacs.

William M. Johnston of San Francisco, the new national champion, added further to his laurels in the feature match of the day by taking a hard fought four set battle from Norman E. Brookes, the Australian star. Scores were 6—4, 7—9, 6—2 and 6—2.

William E. Tilden, II., of Philadelphia, runner-up in the national matches, pulled a surprise by taking his match from the English champion, Gerald E. Patterson. It was a spectacular four set battle which went to the American cause, 3—6, 6—3, 6—4 and 9—7.

Doubles Go Five Sets.

Richard Norris Williams, II., of Boston and Wallace F. Johnson of Philadelphia teamed to a victory over the Australian pair, Randolph Lycett and R. V. Thomas, 6—2, 6—4, 2—6, 3—6 and 6—0.

The Australians fought bitterly before a crowd of 3,000 to retrieve the clear sweep of yesterday, but they could accomplish nothing against the brand of American tennis played by the United States quartet.

The battle between Johnston and Brookes was a thriller. The pace of the hard fought match told on the champion. He lacked the spirit and energy that characterized his earlier play. His repeated drives in the net all during the match gave his game a tinge of off color. What he lacked in spectacular flash he made up in pluck, gameness, and cunning. In each set Brookes went away in the lead. Time after time on his own service the Australian would reach a count of forty-love, only to be overtaken and downed by the American.

Tilden Fights Uphill Game.

William T. Tilden II. fought an uphill battle through the entire match with the Australian champion, Gerald Patterson. The smashing drives of the Australian enabled him to win the first set. Tilden played a back court game on the defense in the second set and won. The pair alternated on their service in the third set. Tilden was showing marked supremacy over Patterson in placements and won the set. The fourth set was a battle royal that went sixteen games. Tilden was much steadier than the Australian and won.

Poor quality of Johnson's service and Williams' tendency to wildness made the early chances of the Australian's victory in the doubles look bright. Lycett had trouble in keeping his drives in the court, and the first set went to the Americans, 6—2.

The Americans volleyed their way through the second set, and after the Australians had scored the heavy end in the third set, the Americans steadied and set a terrific pace, riding over the Australians roughshod for the match.

CHEVROLET WINS $5,000 MATCH RACE FROM TOFT

Johnstown, Pa., Sept. 6.—[Special.]—Gaston Chevrolet, winner of the automobile race on Labor day at Uniontown speedway, this afternoon won the $5,000 match race from Omar Toft, the champion dirt track driver of the Pacific coast.

The race of twenty-six miles was held on the Luna racetrack, a half mile oval, and was run in five heats. Chevrolet won the first heat, five miles, in 6:12. The second and third heats of three and five miles, were won by Toft, in 3:36 and 5:39 respectively. Chevrolet easily won the remaining heats of three and ten miles in 3:33 and 11:58, respectively. Chevrolet broke the track record of 70 seconds to the mile, held by Dubrow, by making a mile in 58.

VICTORY BY SARI GIVES YACHT CUP TO LINCOLN PARK

The classic Lipton cup passed into the possession of the Lincoln Park Yacht club yesterday afternoon when Commodore Samuel Dauchy's Sari, flagship of the north side fleet, made it three straight by defeating Commodore Charles E. Kuehn's Otter of Milwaukee in the final clash between the two fast class R racers.

As was the case in the two preceding races, sailed Thursday and Friday, the local craft at once went into the lead and held it throughout the entire contest.

Skipper Kuehn played in tough luck yesterday, however, and while he had no chance for the cup, he did have an excellent opportunity to save his face by taking the final event of the series. Otter was holding Sari on practically even terms on the initial leg when the balloon jib was carried away. The accident slowed the Milwaukee boat to such an extent that what looked like a grand opportunity to take the lead and possibly the race went glimmering.

Accident to Mainsheet

Again, on the second leg, when Otter was making up some of its lost time, the mainsheet got away and before the mainsail could again be hauled back into position additional time was lost, and the Milwaukee men gave up all hope of winning. The start was made at 2 o'clock and for the first time in the series Skipper Dauchy was able to beat Skipper Kuehn over the line.

The quadrangular course was sailed and the initial leg was a reach. Both boats were close together and everything pointed to an even contest when the accident to Otter's balloon jib occurred. The Milwaukee crew gave a remarkable example of rapid handling of canvas by dousing the damaged sail and setting a new one, but by the time the work was done Sari had assumed a lead that could not be overcome.

First Leg Nearly Even.

Sari rounded the first stake at 2:20:19 and Otter followed at 2:21:02. The second leg of the square was a spinnaker run and the spectators had it all doped out that Otter, somewhat faster on the run than its rival, would even up matters. Both crews did quick work in flying the light canvas and Otter was slowly closing up the gap when the mainsheet carried away.

That settled matters for the challenger. As it was, however, Otter almost evened matters with Sari and turned the leeward stake only twenty-eight seconds astern. Sari rounded at 2:47:09 and Otter turned at 2:47:37.

The third leg was a reach and Sari began pulling away from Otter for a slight gain. Time at this stake was: Sari, 3:06:30; Otter, 3:07:20. On the fourth and final leg a beat down to the finishing line showed Sari's superiority at windward work, for the Dauchy craft made a steady gain and had a safe lead when the race ended. Summary of the contest:

Yacht, skipper, club.	Start.	Finish.	Elapsed time.
Sari [Dauchy], L. Pk. Y. C.	2:00	3:36:50	1:36:50
Otter [Kuehn], So Sh. Y. C.	2:00	3:38:45	1:38:45

Cup at Formal Affair.

The Columbia Yacht club, under whose auspices the series was sailed, will present the Lipton cup to Commodore Dauchy at a formal affair to be held within a few days.

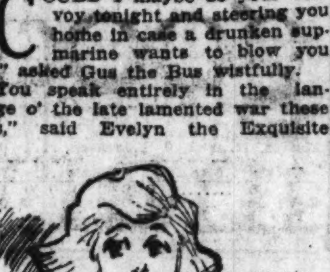
GUS THE BUS—AS HE WAS.

"COULD I maybe be your convoy tonight and steering you home in case a drunken submarine wants to blow you up?" asked Gus the Bus wistfully.

"You speak entirely in the language o' the late lamented war these days," said Evelyn the Exquisite



Checker. "You're gettin' to be a reg'lar G. A. R."

"Better I should be a G. A. R. than a I. W. W., like a lot o' bussers and waiters is. When I'm speak in the langwidge from war that's becus I'm a man o' war, and that's why I should be a convoy to—to a——"

"To a little smack, I s'pose. Before you was a man o' war you was chaser. Say—you used to be a mighty Romeo before you went acrost. But you come back a hero an', like all great men, you've tooken on modesty. I usedn't to be able to call my face my own, back a couple o' years ago when you was around. At last you take a tumble offen your pedestall an' ask to take me home. Well—I'll tell the world it's about time. I s'pose it took you this long to get the flavor o' them French fifis out o' your system, huh?"

"Missus Effelyn," said Gus, gravely, "you are busting my heart. When you talk like that way about me you make me shiffer worser than when them large Berthas was throw iron kisses at me.

"In the old days I seen you ev'ry day, and we was awful closet friends. Since I'm come back it takes a few weeks I get up curridge again to break through the ice, that's all. And better you don't complain too many much, becus when Gus gets a little encurridgement he goes over the top and treats 'em roughish.

"And when you throw hintings about my affair with them French dolls you are talking at a man what went over the ocean to fight for womenhood, not to fight for women. Of course, I'm only a man, Missus Effelyn, and I want to tell you no female could smile me in the face and bluff me—I smile right back.

"Them French peacherino used to wunk one eye and shimmy with one shoulders and chirp me 'Oh, you Semmee!' And I used to make 'em salootings and say 'Oh, you bebee!' But if any of them begins getting frisky, I am drawing up in my khakeye shell and I say 'em 'As you were, Frenchey—as you were!' They didn't maybe knew just what means that, but they could tell from the iron ring in my voice it wasnt nothin' good to eat or no walkings in the moonlights by the Argonne.

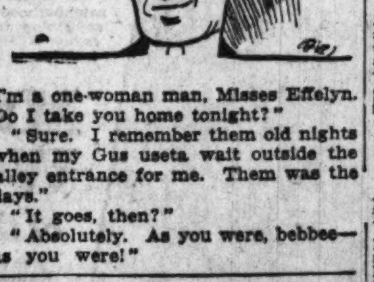
"No, Missus Effelyn, with the honor from the whole American army sitting on me, I aint the kind of a party what he loses his head—or his heart, neither."

"I wisht I could believe you,' sighed the exquisite, with perhaps too much vehemence to be entirely effective. "I know youse men too bitterly well. Out o' sight, out o' mind; you go out o' my sight, you go out o' your mind.

"If you was the kind of a man what women would let alone, maybe you wouldn't bust down brick walls to get at 'em. But you bein' the kind what attracks females, the burden was on you only to resist em. An' I know that's hard for any guy. When I vamped you you yielded, didn't you?"

"By you was diff'rent. You're you.



I'm a one-woman man, Misses Effelyn. Do I take you home tonight?"

"Sure. I remember them old nights when my Gus useta wait outside the alley entrance for me. Them was the days."

"It goes, then?"

"Absolutely. As you were, bebbee—as you were!"

PLAN REGATTA FOR SPEED BOATS IN AUGUST, 1920

Chicago yachtsmen, headed by Sheldon Clark, at a preliminary meeting yesterday decided to hold a big speed boat regatta here in the third week of August, 1920. At a meeting to be held later this month definite plans for the meet will be drawn up and a strong campaign started to get entries from the United States, Canada and Europe.

The meet as at present planned will cover a week and will comprise a program of races for various classes of speed boats and cruisers for a prize list never before equaled. A trophy will be awarded the winner of the championship contest of the meet and awards will be given the winners in the various classes. Cruisers will play a greater part in the regatta than in any of the past as the trend of the speed boat game lately has been to develop a fast express cruiser that can be used to some purpose rather than a boat that is good for nothing but racing and only for smooth water.

The contests will be held inside the North breakwater over a two and a half mile course laid out between it and the municipal pier. This will enable hundreds of thousands to view the contests.

BOYS OF GERMANY MOST ADEPT OF EUROPE AT BALL

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—Walter C. Coombs, Pennsylvania football player, who was end on the All-America team of 1899, has just returned to the United States from France, where he was a "Y" athletic director, with the news that the German children are the best baseball pupils abroad.

"While in Europe I watched carefully to see how baseball was catching on with the youngsters of the various countries," said Coombs, "and I was amazed to find that the most proficient players are among the German boys in the occupied territory. Everywhere you go there you will see the German school boys with stones for bases, hand made baseballs and sticks for bats, playing our game much the same as it is played among the youth of the United States.

The children of Italy, France, and England are only dabbling at it, and to my mind making only ordinary progress.

NEALE'S WILLOW HELPS REDLEGS BUMP CARDS, 5-2

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 6.—Neale's hitting featured Cincinnati's 5 to 2 victory over St. Louis. Neale's single in the first scored a run and his double in the fifth drove in two more. Schupp, who started for the locals, was put out of the game in the second for protesting Umpire Harrison's decisions on balls, and Clemons was chased in the fourth.

East St. Louis Defeats Chicago Armours, 11 to 5

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 6.—[Special.]—Armour & Co.'s East St. Louis plant won the first of a series of three games from the Chicago plant today, the game being played at East St. Louis. The score was 1 1to 5.

Jimmy Archer, former Chicago Cub catcher, caught for Chicago with Johnson pitching. The latter was erratic, showing spurts of wonderful form at times. He fanned eleven local men. Smith hurled consistently, striking out eight. Two games will be played tomorrow afternoon.

PIRATE BINGLES SLAUGHTER CUBS IN 11-0 TRAGEDY

Pittsburgh Gets 18 Hits, While Cooper Holds the Visitors.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 6.—[Special.]—Fred Mitchell's Cubs gave a sorry exhibition in their final game of the year at Forbes field this afternoon. They were helpless against the southpawing of Wilbur Cooper, who held them to five blows, Merkle and Killefer poling two each. The home guards, hitting in vicious fashion, gathered eighteen safeties of assorted sizes from Claude Hendrix and Nick Carter.

In addition to swatting like a flock of champions, the Pirates turned out some gilt edged fielding, the inner defense accounting for four of the seven double plays which studded the matinée.

Hammer Hendrix Off Slab.

There is no telling what might have happened to Hendrix had he remained on the slab for the full contest. Prior to the pastime he ordered a quart of buttermilk and a ham sandwich in the clubhouse, but on second thought limited his feasting to the buttermilk. Only one run was scored off him in the opening round, but that tally would have been sufficient to clinch the game for Bezdek's men, as Cooper was absolute master of the north siders from start to finish.

It seemed as if every one on the Pirate club was out to fatten up his sticking average, for Bigbee assembled four singles in five trials, Carey poled three singles and drew a pass in five times up, Whitted got a double and two singles in addition to being hit with a pitched ball.

Pirates Sew Up Game Early.

There was little of anything about the matinée to interest the assembled 7,000 fans after the third inning when the Pirates had gained a five run lead and the Cubs, helpless against Cooper's southpaw offerings, seemed content to just hurry through the conventional nine innings.

The Corsairs jumped out in front in the opening session when Bigbee combed a single and took third on Carey's wallop to right. Carey stole second and when Hollocher tossed out Southworth at first, Bigbee scored.

Five hits produced four runs in the Pirate third. Cooper opened with a single, then Bigbee and Carey notched one baggers, the latter's shot scoring Cooper and sending Hendrix to the clubhouse while Carter shouldered the burdens of the mound.

Double Plays Stop Victors.

Southworth sacrificed and Whitted slammed a double to deep right field counting Bigbee and Carey. Barbare exploded a single which shoved Whitted over the plate and the riot subsided when Cutshaw hit into a double play, Herzog to Hollocher to Merkle.

The rally continued in the fourth, four drives yielding three more runs for the Pirates. One down, Schmidt singled to left, Cooper singled to the same territory and the route was plugged when Merkle booted a bounder from Bigbee. Carey singled to center counting Schmidt and Southworth hit to Herzog forcing Cooper at the plate. Then Whitted cut up some more with a single to right, scoring Bigbee and Carey. Carter finally stopped the outbreak by fanning Barbare.

Three More in Sixth.

The great desire to fatten up their batting averages crept over the Pirates again in the sixth when they added three more unnecessary runs. Cooper walked this time. Bigbee singled and a ticket to Carey filled the paths. Southworth hoisted to Magee but Whitted again connected for a single and Cooper tallied with the fifth run driven in by the Pirates first baseman. Barbare's sacrifice fly to Parkert scored Bigbee and when Carter made a bum heave on Cutshaw's roller Carey tallied.

NOTES

Cleveland once more today.

The White Sox still lead the league by a margin of six and a half games with eighteen more to play.

The Gleasons have won eleven games from Cleveland and the Indians have copped eight from the White Sox with one more to play.

Weaver's ninth inning run was made by forcing Collins out at second then stealing second, third and home without any attempt to stop him.

Frank Chance former Cub manager was one of the spectators and rooted for Chicago to no purpose. With his wife he will leave tonight for California after more than two months in the east.

The White Sox will leave directly after today's game for Washington where they begin their final eastern invasion on Tuesday. They have twelve games to play in the east, followed by five on the home lot at the end of the season.

The Sox got off on the wrong foot in the first inning and never recovered their balance. Leibold led with a safe hit but was nipped at second when a hit and run play with Collins went wrong. Collins followed with a single that was wasted in spite of an error by Wamby right afterward.

Notes

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 6.—[Special.]—The Cubs and Pirates left aboard the same train at 8:30 tonight for Chicago to play at the north side grounds tomorrow afternoon. It will be the final game of the year between these old rivals.

Grover Alexander and Earl Hamilton are the likely hurlers when the Bruins and Buccaneers meet at Chicago tomorrow.

Bezdek mercifully removed Bigbee from the lineup in the eight inning after the home town left fielder had done his bit by scoring four runs.

Merkle was the only north sider to show to advantage against Cooper. The first sacker gathered a single and double in three trials.

The Cubs played a listless, down-in-the-mouth sort of game and put up little or no opposition after the Pirates had knocked Hendrix loose from the slab.

Terry and Cutshaw were the only Pirates who failed to get at least one hit during the slugging bee. Cutshaw is said to have fallen into a batting slump, while Terry never was rated a hard clouter.

Beat Beckett, Carpentier Tells Champion Dempsey

PARIS, Sept. 7.—Georges Carpentier's managers stated today that the French boxer will fight Dempsey only in case the American champion defeats Beckett. Otherwise, Carpentier will remain in the light heavyweight class, awaiting challenges from eligible boxers.

GLEASONS MAKE FOURTEEN HITS, BUT WASTE MANY

Williams Driven to Cover by Three Triples and a Home Run.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Cleveland's Indians climbed back into second place yesterday, by trimming the White Sox in their penultimate game of the year, by a score of 11 to 2, and in spite of the defeat, the Gleasons lost only half a lap in the pennant race.

It was a freakish battle, because the home team outhit the visitors by a considerable margin and made only one more error, yet in the run column Chicago was outlucked worse than the figures show. With fourteen hits all the Gleasons could score was two runs, and one of those was a gift in the last half of the ninth.

Drive Williams to Cover.

Speaker's tribe drove Williams off the mound in four rounds, during which they made four tallies on six swats, all except two of which were for extra bases. Three triples and a home run were registered against Lefty before he was relieved at the end of the fourth, and Jim Bagby, his slab opponent made the home run.

Lowdermilk went to Williams' rescue in the fifth and his wildness coupled with a three base boot by Buck Weaver, netted the Indians four runs. After that it was merely a question of getting it over, but Boss Gleason kept sending in reserves as fast as his pitchers came to bat. Mayer, who worked the sixth, seventh, and eighth, was taken out to let John Collins fly out for him in the home eighth, and Jack Sullivan finished. The Indians apparently knew Jack's weakness, for they scored a run on him without a base hit.

Weaver Steals Three Bases.

The Sox banged Bagby safely in every inning, except the second, but he kept them from profiting by their swats. The only run to which they were entitled was made by three successive singles in the sixth. Weaver was allowed to steal three bases in a row in the ninth and raise the home team's count to two.

Graney opened on Williams with a three base belt in the first round. He watched Chapman fly out, then scored on Speaker's single. Harris singled, too, but Williams checked that assault there. Wood led off in the second with another three base knock and O'Neil flied to right so far that Joe had an easy trip to the plate.

Again in the fourth Wood led off with a terrific wallop. It cleared Hap Felsch's dome in right center and was good for a tally, although Felsch, with the aid of Risberg's relay, had the ball at the plate in time to retire the runner. Schalk dropped the ball after Ump Hildebrand had waved Wood out and the run scored. O'Neil was an easy victim then. Bagby hoisted a long fly into the bleachers back of Jackson's terrain. Williams struck out Graney, then faded in favor of Lowdermilk.

More Runs in Fifth.

One down in the fifth, Speaker singled again. Harris struck out, but Gardner drew a pass and Wamby belted one safely, scoring Tris. Smith took Wood's place and walked, filling the bases. O'Neil rapped a nasty bounder to Weaver, who scooped it, then threw wildly to first, and three Indians scored.

With Mayer working in the sixth, a pass to Graney, Speaker's triple, and an infield out gave the visitors two more runs. Their eleventh tally came in the ninth, when Sullivan was hurling. He passed Jamieson, who replaced Speaker in the sixth, then threw out Harris on a bunt. Gardner flied and Wamby bunted with two out. Sullivan threw the ball into the Indian dugout this time and let Jamieson score.

BROWNS TOPPLE TIGER SLABMEN IN 12-10 FARCE

Five Miscues and Eight Walks Mark Batfest at Detroit.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 6.—The Browns batted four Detroit pitchers hard and won the third game of the series, 12 to 10. The hitting of Heilman and Tobin was the only redeeming feature of the loose play. The former hit two triples and a single in four times up, and Tobin got five hits and counted four runs. Five errors by both teams and eight bases on balls contributed to the scoring. Score:

LOGAN SQUARES BUMP GUNTHERS IN 6 TO 3 SCRAP

Opening Attack, Netting Three Runs, Almost Settles Issue.

"Gibby" Nelson's twirling, combined with four double plays which stopped rallies, was too much for the Gunthers, and the Logan Squares downed their rivals yesterday, 6 to 3, at Gunther park.

Dougherty essayed to pitch for the Gunthers, but was hit hard in the opener, three hits, a pass, a sacrifice fly, and an error netting Callahan's club three runs. Nelson clinched the combat in the second by driving out a homer off Dougherty, and the latter was yanked, Dave Black finishing. Two errors in the third gave Niesens' men two runs, while another error and Conroy's single netted them one in the fifth.

Foreman hit safely four times, three of the clouts going for doubles, while his fielding and a stop by Joe Weiss and Meinke's fielding were other features. Score:

ILLINOIS HONORS IN TENNIS FINAL FOR MISS NEELY

Beats Mrs. Adams, 6-1, 10-8; Other Titles Decided Today.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

Miss Carrie B. Neely of this city won back the title of Illinois state women's tennis champion, which she last held in 1916, in the final match of the annual tournament played yesterday on stone dust courts of the Chicago Tennis club. She defeated Mrs. H. S. Adams of Centralia, 6—1, 10—8, in a characteristic match, playing always coolly and steadily, and leaving it to her opponent to flub a point or leave an opening for a killing shot, rather than take chances herself by pressing the play.

Miss Neely lobbed often, but her sky shots were so well directed that they rarely went out, and she thus scared Mrs. Adams away from the forecourt in the first set. Mrs. Adams began finding the range with her forehand in the second set, and quickened the rallies by stroking the ball hard. In the long run, Miss Neely's steadiness proved enough to win.

Only One Title Decided.

The women's singles title was the only one decided. The women's doubles final and one semi-final in men's singles had to be adjourned because of darkness. In the women's doubles, Mrs. Adams, paired with Miss Elizabeth Qualey of Chicago, captured the first set from Miss Neely and Miss Mary Katherine Voorhees of Evanston, 6—3, and the second set stood at 1 all, when Umpire Jack Harris called off play. It will be played out tomorrow afternoon.

Ralph H. Burdick took a strongly contested match in the men's singles semi-finals from his doubles mate, Charles L. Johnston Jr., 1—6, 6—4, 1—6, 6—1, 8—6. At the end Johnston was all in, and Burdick concealed his fatigue little better.

The other semi-final was unfinished, and will be played off at 9:30 o'clock this morning. Lucien E. Williams of Highland Park showed a sparkling driving game against Sam Hardy, and waded through that veteran expert in the first two sets, 6—1, 6—2. Sam finally earned the third set, 11—9, after both had been on the verge of victory several times. Further play then was called off until this morning.

Winner to Meet Burdick.

The winner will meet Burdick for the state singles championship at 2 o'clock. At 4:30 o'clock Burdick and Johnston will play for the state doubles title against Walter T. Hayes and Arthur P. Hubbell.

Johnston's top spin shots and the fact that Burdick, after shooting outside several times, shortened his drives until they landed far inside the court, just to his opponent's liking, landed the first set easily for the former New Yorker, 6—1. In the second set Ralph began working his drives with more speed and certainty into Johnston's deep court, gathering the set, 6—4, and evening the match.

Third Set to Johnston.

The excellent placing of Johnston and his short drives, which seemed to fall like a plummet as soon as they cleared the net and caught Burdick racing to the barrier, gave him the third set, 6—3, but the latter came right back, smashing and volleying well in the fourth set, which he won, 6—1.

Neither could rely on his service to win in the deciding set, and the games went to 3-all, when Johnston speeded up and made it 5—3. Then Burdick for the first time showed a sustained spurt of attacking power. He drove deep, shot across court, and worked his way to the net, where he caught many short lobs from Johnston's racquet for deadly returns. He made the games 6—5 in his favor, then Johnston won his service.

The next game was the turning point. Johnston fought grimly against Burdick's service, and the game was deuced four times before Ralph was able to break through. The last game was easy, Burdick shooting four straight placements from his vantage point at the net; Johnston being too near exhaustion to battle for the returns.

HONORS AT TRAP TO DR. BELKNAP

Dr. F. W. Belknap, the local amateur, gave a fine exhibition of trapshooting at the Lincoln Park Gun club yesterday, when he won the twenty-five target change gun event with a perfect score. The conditions of the race were that each contestant shoot at each target with a different gun. A. Johnson captured the fifty target distance handicap event with a score of 48. He shot from eighteen yards. L. B. Clarke, a former Grand American winner, who shot from twenty yards, tied for second with 47. Scores:

Auto Race Drivers Fail to Appear at Galesburg

Galesburg, Ill., Sept. 6—Entrants in the automobile races booked today under the auspices of the Galesburg District Fair association, came here thinking the Galesburg track was a half mile and had geared their machines for that. They left without giving due notice when they found the track was a mile. The fair managers this afternoon made provision to repay the entrance fee to 3,500 people assembled to see the racing.

Brookes, Patterson's 42 year old fellow townsman, hero of many Davis cup matches, still retains the Australian title.

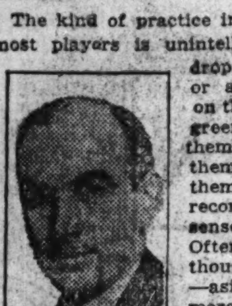
William M. Johnston, phenomenal 24 year old San Franciscan, who won the American title at Forest Hills last week against the strongest tennis field ever gathered in one tournament, will lead the contingent of ranking American entrants.

Study of Putting Necessary to Produce Best Golf Result

BY GEORGE A. O'NEIL.

Any one can improve his putting by practice.

Unintelligent practice is absolutely useless.



GEORGE A. O'NEIL.

The kind of practice indulged in by most players is unintelligent. They drop half a dozen or a dozen balls on the putting green, try to putt them down, gather them up, drop them again, and recommence the senseless round. Often the only thought exercised—aside from the mere mechanical effort to hole each ball—is devoted to making the distances as varied as possible; and this effort is unintelligent and wrong.

Tips for Correct Practice.

Intelligent study would call for a careful consideration of the length and quality of the grass. It would require repeated experiment in determining the exact force necessary to hole a ball from a given distance and the increase necessary for each additional foot. It would demand hundreds of experiments with curving putts on sloping greens. It would involve the establishment by each player of the best method—that is, the best for him personally—of seeing the "true line" to the hole and the best method of swinging his putter accurately in the line.

Everybody knows that mastery of play in billiards is obtainable only by the expenditure of hundreds of hours in studious practice. Golf is in every department a game of skill, like billiards, and there is no department in which mastery is so completely obtainable by study as in putting.

Choice of a Putter.

In choosing a putter three features are important:

1. The lie of the club should be very erect—that is, the shaft should form nearly a right angle with the sole of the club. This permits the player to stand well over the ball and enables him to see the true line of direction to the hole and to swing his putter accurately in the plane of this line.

2. The face of the club should be erect. If the face is laid back it will put back spin on the ball. If it is inclined forward it will choke it into the turn.

3. The club head should be heavy enough to impart sufficient momentum to the ball to make it roll true, in spite of small obstacles. If the club head is not heavy enough the increased power demanded is apt to cause a spill.

Grip Putter Near End.

Grip the putter near the end, where it balances best. A short grip means increase of effort and liability to pull. To obtain accuracy and delicacy of touch the shaft should be gripped firmly but without tension or strain. The hands should be close together—the little finger of the right hand may well overlap the forfinger of the left or interlock with it. The shaft should rest in the fingers, not in the palms, or flexibility of the wrists will be destroyed.

In taking the stance the main thing is to adopt a position which will be comfortable and steady and will enable you to see the true line from the ball to the hole and to swing straight back in the prolongation of the line.

Get "True Line" to Hole.

The true line can be seen by sighting over the ball to the hole or over the hole to the ball. If, when you are in position to putt, the line seems different from that point obtained by sighting, you can be sure that your stance does not enable you to see the true line. In that event, if you can't adjust your stance correctly, you had better fix the true line by reference to some object lying between the ball and the hole—such as a blade of grass—for the true line is the correct path for the ball.

So far as direction is concerned, there is nothing so important as getting the mental picture of the true line and of the ball rolling down that line into the hole. If you can do this, you can putt. If you find that you lack confidence and are rimming the cup instead of going down, stop and ask yourself if you have not been picturing the ball as acting just that way. Remember that ninety-nine times out of a hundred you will play the shot you picture, not the one you desire. If there is any one secret of successful putting, it is this.

Sharp Stroke Is Proper.

The proper stroke in putting is not a pendulum swing, nor a nervous snatch, nor a jab, but a sharp stroke with follow through. Draw the putter straight back in the prolonged line of direction, using forearms as well as wrists, and strike the ball a firm, clean stroke. A stroke that is checked as it strikes the ball is likely to be pulled or sliced and to die out quickly.

Finally, always play to be up, even at the risk of being over. As a matter of fact, the player who is afraid of overputting is not up half the time. You have got to take some risk on distance, because it can not be calculated as accurately as direction. The wise player always gives his ball a chance to go down. If it stops a foot beyond the hole it has had the chance and is still no worse off than if it had stopped a foot short.

RECORD ENTRY FOR PATER-FILIUS

Secretary John H. Merrell reports a record breaking entry for the sixteenth annual Pater-Filius tournament of the Midlothian Country club on Wednesday. It is a two ball foursome, medal play handicap at thirty-six holes. Gold medals will go to the winners and their club will hold the cup for a year. Silver medals will be given the runners-up. Burton Mudge and Burton Mudge Jr. have donated prizes for the best gross score at thirty-six holes and prizes will be given for low net for eighteen holes.

The event is open to fathers and sons, conditional on one of them being affiliated with the U. S. G. A. or the Western Golf association. Entries can be made by letter or telephone any time prior to the day of play to John H. Merrell, 1838 Peoples Gas building. Opportunity to practice over the course can be obtained on application to Mr. Merrell.

BERKEY SCORES 32 FOR 9 HOLES OVER GLEN VIEW

Club Champion Cuts Off Four Strokes from Par Golf.

BY JOE DAVIS.

Making golfing hay while the sun still adds speed to our baked fairways, Peter Berkey, club champion in 1916, reeled off a score of 32 for the last nine holes at Glen View, four strokes under par.

Playing in a class handicap event he started at the tenth tee and went one over par as a starter. From this point he made no mistakes, getting birdies at the twelfth, fourteenth, fifteenth, seventeenth, and eighteenth holes, and cutting four strokes under par for the incoming nine.

First Nine in Forty.

Playing the first nine holes he had sixes at the fourth and eighth holes, but partly offset these with a birdie 4 at Old Hickory, 548 yards. He came home in 40 for a total of 72. His score of 32 for the second nine is thought to be an amateur record, but this could not be officially verified last night.

With a handicap of 4 he easily won the handicap, getting both low gross and net. His card and the par figures:

Out ....5 4 4 6 4 3 5 6 3—40
Par ....5 4 4 4 4 5 3 5 4—38
In ....5 3 3 5 2 4 4 3 3—32—72

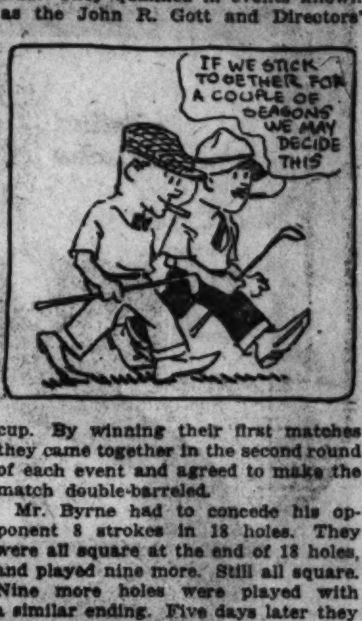
TALES of A TEE-BOX TOURIST

IT is nothing new for a member of the legal profession to get continuances in his profession, but possibly they are not quite as much to his liking in a golf match.

Attorney John E. Northup and John F. Byrne, former well known baseball player, are members of the Glen Oak club. They qualified in events known as the John R. Gott and Directors' cup. By winning their first matches they came together in the second round of each event and agreed to make the match double-barreled.



IF WE STICK TOGETHER FOR A COUPLE OF SEASONS WE MAY DECIDE THIS

Mr. Byrne had to concede his opponent 8 strokes in 18 holes. They were all square at the end of 18 holes, and played nine more. Still all square. Nine more holes were played with a similar ending. Five days later they played 18 more holes, and on the home green the attorney missed his putt for a 4, Byrne getting the verdict, 4—5, at the end of 54 holes of play.

SUBURBAN GRIDS START PRACTICE FOR HEAVY TITLE

Five Schools Are Listed; Little Interest Among the Minors.

BY PREP.

With football teams of the Suburban High School league already in full swing of practice, coaches and managers of the schools concluded their schedule drafting last week. Due to lack of heavy material for the squads, only five schools will be represented. They are Oak Park, Proviso, New Trier, Evanston, and Deerfield. These five schools should have a well matched fight for honors.

Lightweight teams promise to become a thing of the past unless some action is stimulated among the schools to bring out the fellows under 130 pounds and get them interested in drilling for teams. A meeting will be held this week to decide the advisability of continuing the "minor" teams in Suburban league athletics. Last year only four lightweight teams played football, although the winning school, Proviso, had a crackerjack eleven.

Forty Out at Proviso.

At New Trier, Proviso, and Deerfield heavyweight squads already are in practice. At Proviso forty boys responded to the new coach's call for candidates. At Oak Park sixty turned out for both heavy and lightweight squads, and are practicing in both weights. New Trier, second place winner in the "major" division in 1918, also had a good response.

Only three members of last season's Cook county champion high school heavies returned to school at Oak Park. However, several of last year's lightweights and second string heavies will help fill the gaps. Proviso should present a strong aggregation on the field, having six of its 1918 regulars back in school. If the league continues the lightweight division, the Maywood school will be an overwhelming favorite, having all its 1919 league champions back in school.

Heavyweight Schedule.

Following is the league heavyweight schedule for the season:

Oct. 18—Proviso at Evanston; Deerfield at New Trier.
Oct. 25—New Trier at Oak Park; Proviso at Deerfield.
Nov. 1—Oak Park at Proviso; Deerfield at Evanston.
Nov. 8—Evanston at Oak Park; New Trier at Proviso.
Nov. 15—Evanston at New Trier; Oak Park at Deerfield.

NORTH SHORE.

In the second round for the President's cup at North Shore B. G. McCloud defeated E. Hedrick, 1 up. W. I. Woodward defeated R. Potter, 1 up. F. Buckman won from H. E. Marshall by default. W. I. Woodward won the putting contest, Oscar W. Schmidt being second.

UXTRY POIPER! ALL ABOUT THE MITCHELL BROS.

Firm of Richie, Pinkie and Billy Launch Monthly Devoted to Selves.

BY RAY PEARSON.

Be it known that the Mitchell family of Milwaukee is pugilistically inclined, but if this isn't known anywhere that Uncle Sam carries the mail it soon will be learned. The glove wielders of the Mitchell family are Richie and Pinkie, both lightweights, while another brother, Billy, acts as manager for the pair. The success of the combination has been marked.

But while Richie and Pinkie aren't scrapping and brother Billy isn't pulling something in the fistic line, they have been thinking of something else, and that something else concerns publicity. Of course, it is in Billy's line to see that the fighting members of the family aren't overlooked in the public prints; in other words, to see that Richie and Pinkie get plenty of publicity in order to keep them in the limelight.

Publish Own Monthly.

That leads up to the latest and novel method of gaining publicity. Manager Billy no longer dictates a few lines extolling the wonderful prowess of Richie and the sterling qualities of Pinkie, attaching stamps to the manuscript and mailing it to the boxing critics throughout the country. No, the Mitchells don't do that. When they haven't any pugilistic activity to keep them busy they get down to another job, and that job is getting out "The Mitchell Monthly."

"The Mitchell Monthly" is a regular li'l newspaper, believe us, brethren, and any one inclined to forget that the Mitchells are in the boxing game will be awakened to the fact by reading this one page edition, which is to come off the press the first of each month. The entire page is devoted to the fighting Mitchells, and if they don't get "heads" in the regular newspapers they should worry, for they get plenty of them in "The Monthly."

No Knocks in This Paper.

It is evident after reading the Mitchell newspaper that the Mitchells are going after publicity and going to help the newspaper scribes by furnishing it all written up and ready for reprint. The first edition at hand contains a story explaining the purpose of "The Mitchell Monthly." Here's what it says:

"If you don't toot your own horn no one else will blow it for you," is the motto of the Mitchell boxing trio, Richie, Pinkey, and Billy. The Milwaukee boys are now editing their own newspaper, and the sporting editor of every wide awake newspaper in the land is on the mailing list. The paper is issued monthly. It chronicles the happenings of the past month in the Mitchell family and gives a forecast of what they intend to do.

Learn as Real Reporters.

Richie and Pink, both of whom hammered typewriters when in high school, are the news getters. Three months ago each of them was apprenticed to a newspaper here. In their spare time, under the eye of experienced news writers, they learned how to fashion a story. Billy also took a course in the editing end. He is the editor in chief, while the two boxers scurry for the news.

The first issue, just out, is of eight columns, illustrated with cuts of the Mitchells in various poses. The feature is the three column diagram of Richie, prepared by William Lachenmaier, physical culture expert, who asserts that Richie is near the model man. Statistics show that he approaches very closely the lines laid down for the ideal figure, in height, weight, and all round build.

"The idea, I think, is something new," said Manager Billy Mitchell. "It does not take a lot of time and it gives the two boys something to think about, when they are not busy in the gymnasium or on the road. They like the work and we have a lot of fun discussing the merits of different stories and their position on the page.

"We plan to get it out every month and will attempt to make the Mitchell Monthly a wide awake sport sheet. While we intend it primarily for our own use, its columns are open to any honest young fighter trying to make a living.

"No, we have no political policy. We stand for clean, square boxing; that is all."

The Mitchell Monthly is published in Milwaukee for free distribution.

FOUL BY OVER THERE GIVES STAKE EVENT TO WHITNEY'S HORSE

New York, Sept. 6.—[Special.]—Before a crowd of more than 20,000 persons, who were more or less packed into the spacious stands at Belmont park today, W. R. Coe's Over There got under the wire first in the running of the historic Lawrence Realization stakes, but he did not win the purse. A few minutes after he had rushed past the stands, he was disqualified for a foul committed at the five-eighths pole and the winner's share went to Harry Payne Whitney's Vexatious, while P. A. Clark's Dunboyne, and R. T. Wilson Jr.'s Thunderstorm were placed second and third respectively.

The foul and the subsequent disqualification marred what had otherwise been a good contest, but the decision of the judges met with the approval of the majority of those who witnessed the race.

Vexatious the Favorite.

Vexatious had been a well played favorite and, after the judges had consulted and had called upon three of the riders in the race and finally ordered the change in the placing of the horses, there was an outburst of cheering.

Vexatious won a popular, though scarcely deserved victory. However, the foul was so deliberate that it could not escape the judges and their action was well founded. Fairbrother on Over There was running on the outside and almost abreast of Dunboyne, which had the rail, and Thunderstorm, which was next to him. Fairbrother evidently thought he had a chance to get the rail and take the lead and he cut across the track. As he did so Over There bumped into Thunderstorm and the latter, in turn was slammed against Dunboyne, but with less force.

Cleopatra Beats Upset.

The blow of the disqualification was softened for W. R. Coe by the impressive victory of his fleet filly, Cleopatra, in the Champagne handicap, in which she soundly defeated H. P. Whitney's Upset, conqueror of Man o' War in the fluke race at Saratoga. This was run at seven furlongs on the straight course, and it was the first time this season that the youngsters had been asked to go that distance.

W. Booth's Neddam captured the first race, a five and a half furlong dash for 2 year olds, being an easy winner over James MacManus' Padriac and G. W. Widener's Royal Duck. Neddam got away to a flying start and was never headed.

Steeplechase to Rhomb.

The Freeport steeplechase handicap brought out only three starters, and was won by Wood Stockton's aged Rhomb. Skibbereen was second and Reddest third. Summaries:

First race, 2 year olds, $800, 5½ furlongs—Neddam, 112 [Kelsey], 4 to 5, 1 to 3, out, won; Padraic, 105 [Ambrose], 5 to 1, 8 to 5, 7 to 10, second; Royal Duck, 107 [Nolan], 12 to 1, 4 to 1, 2 to 1, third. Time, 1:05 1-5. Gloria France, Ira Wilson, Glen Light, Armistice, and Bread Line ran.

Second race, the Freeport steeplechase, 3 year olds and up, $900 added, about 2 miles—Rhomb, 134 [Borgan], even, 1 to 6, won; Skibbereen, 137 [Byers], 17 to 10, 1 to 3, out, second; Reddest, 139 [J. Rowan], 4 to 1, even, out, third. Time, 4:27 2-5. Only three starters.

Third race, the Champagne, $2,500 added, 2 year olds, 7 furlongs—*Cleopatra, 107 [McAtee, 11 to 10, 1 to 4, out, won; †Upset, 125 [Knapp], 11 to 10, 1 to 4, out, second; ††Doctor Clark, 104 [Ambrose], 11 to 10, 1 to 4, out, third. Time, 1:24 1-5. Capt. Alcock, *David Harum, and Dunsantol ran.

Time, 2:47 3-5. Polka Dot and Over There ran. *Duboyne finished first, but was disqualified.

Fifth race, 3 year olds and up, $900, 1 mile—Mary Belle, 107 [T. Rowan], 16 to 5, 6 to 5, 3 to 5, won; Pictor, 108 [Ensor], 18 to 5, 6 to 5, 3 to 5, second; Graphic, 111 [Rice], 8 to 1, 3 to 1, 6 to 5, third. Time, 1:41. Frank Waters, Clara Martin, Hickorynut, and Dr. Rae ran.

Time, 1:12 4-5. Stepson, Warnote, Grandee, Cock " the Main, Heroism, Normandie, Farmingdale, Lucy Lee, and Nanette Flack ran.

Leonard to Box Dundee at Newark on Sept. 17

New York, Sept. 6.—[Special.]—Articles have been signed by Benny Leonard and Johnny Dundee for an eight round bout to be held Sept. 17 at the Newark Sportsmen's club. The agreement is that Leonard will make the lightweight limit, and there is considerable speculation over this. All of the champion's recent battles have been with welterweights. Dundee will be able to weigh 130 pounds at ringside.

ARABY GRIDDERS TO PRACTICE.

The Araby A. C. football team, 128 pounds, will practice at Ashland and Leland avenues this morning at 10 o'clock. All players and candidates are requested to be present. The team would like to book a practice game for the last Sunday of this month. For games call Ravenswood 5705.

MORE DOPE FOR HUNTERS.

On Sept. 16 the season on ducks, geese, mudhens, snipe, and plover opens in a number of middle western states and once more there is some confusion.

This is due to amendment bulletins issued by the biological survey that are misleading to hunters who are not familiar with the workings of the so-called federal law. For example, a recent amendment gave the legal daily limit on mourning doves in Illinois as twenty-five; the state laws permit the taking of fifteen only, and in this instance the state law holds, as the regulations of the bird treaty act permit any state to place further restrictions on the federal laws.

Another example is the hours of shooting waterfowl. The federal law permits shooting a half hour before sunrise, but the laws of a number of states, including Illinois, forbids any shooting before sunrise and again the state law is to be followed. Fortunately the different states have revised their laws so as not to exceed the regulations of the bird treaty act and if the hunter will follow the laws of his state he will not get into trouble.

If the wardens do theid duty every hunter will have a chance at the home bred ducks this opening day. Last year the federal law specified Sept. 16 as opening day, while some state laws permitted shooting on Sept. 1.

As a result some hunters took a chance on the 1st of September and cleaned up all the home bred birds before those who followed the federal ruling got a crack at 'em. We know of two hunters in Illinois who killed sixty mallards and teal the first five days in September last year, most of which spoiled on their hands. As long as we have ignorant coots like that running around with guns we must have strict game laws and wardens that will enforce them regardless of the political consequences.

The other day, while fishing a weedy bayou, we flushed a hen mallard with five husky youngsters almost as big as their mother, but not as wise by a long shot. They circled around a few times and the mother bird tried to lead them to a neighboring "slew," but Youth will have its way, and the youngsters insisted on staying where they were.

We carefully poled into their feeding place, and in spite of the vain efforts of the wise old "mommer" the young birds would come back every time we scared them up. Finally we got to the edge of the open spot they used and hid in the rushes. Five minutes later the young birds dropped in. We could have killed one of them with a sling shot.

This determination to ignore the advice of elders holds true all along the line, whether the headstrong one wears fins, fur, feathers, or frocks, and the hunter going after home bred ducks should keep it in mind.

These young birds are not acquainted with men and firearms and they dislike to move far away from the only home they have ever known. In approaching a pond or "slew" where young birds are, do so slowly. If they flush before you get within good shooting distance do not chance a long shot.

Stand still in your tracks or hide in the weeds, and these young birds will surely come back. Don't bother with calls, and in country where there are many small streams or ponds do not load yourself down with decoys.

Merely go along and flush the birds, getting them when they jump if they offer a good mark, or hide and wait for their return. A pair of hunters can get plenty of birds and lots of sport in this way, providing the competition is not too strong.

On opening day good sport is often found by poling down stream slowly and jumping the young birds as you go along. Tie a line to your paddle so you can drop it and get in your shots quickly. This "jumping" ducks is a great sport and in good territory yields good bags.

When hunting early ducks the hunter should keep his eyes peeled for jack snipe, for wild, harum scarum Jack is likely to be around the same places that you will find home bred teals and mallards—sloughs, ponds, marshy spots, and the edges of rivers and creeks, or even ditches.

No piece of water or near water is too small to harbor a few ducks or a stray jack.

Heavy loads are not necessary for these young, light feathered birds, and a light, small bore gun that can be quickly handled is more desirable for this early hunting than the heavy gun used for general duck shooting.

Just a word of warning: Be careful about shooting wood ducks. If you see a medium sized duck with a squarish tail and who rocks a little from side to side as he flies, better take another look and make sure he is not a wood duck. They are protected all the year 'round.

MUCKS TO HELP C. A. A. ATHLETES IN TITLE GAMES

Former Badger Star to Go to National Meet This Week.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

When the National A. A. U. outdoor junior and senior track and field championships are held in Philadelphia Friday and Saturday, Arlie Mucks, the former University of Wisconsin athlete, who has not taken part in athletics for two years, will compete as a member of the Chicago Athletic association team, which will make an uphill fight for the senior title.

Physical Director Martin Delaney of the Cherry Circle club yesterday received word from the big athlete, who is farming in Nebraska, that he will be in Chicago in plenty of time to start east with the team on Thursday morning. Mucks said he has been doing light training with the shot and discus on the farm and will be in good enough shape to make strong bids for first places in these events.

Mucks' Help Needed.

Without Mucks, hopes of the western teams finishing well up in the point column would be slim. The New York A. C., after an absence in competitive athletics during the war period, has organized one of the strongest teams in its history. Athletes of known ability will wear the winged foot, and taking into consideration their performances in the metropolitan championships held recently, will be a hard aggregation to beat.

As the best of the country athletic world will be seen in action, it will be readily seen that record holders and title winners will be the only ones with chances to win points. For this reason, the acquisition of Mucks to the C. A. A. team will be a great help. The former Badger athlete can hurl the discus well over 150 feet, and can put the shot close to forty-seven feet. If Mucks wins these events he will take points away from the New York A. C.

Frank Loomis Out for Season.

Although Mucks will greatly strengthen the C. A. A. team, which must be given the best chance of any western aggregation to win the title in the senior division, the loss of Frank Loomis, national champion in the 220 yard low hurdles, will be felt. Frank broke a small bone in his left ankle in the Labor day games at Stagg field and will be out of competition for the remainder of the outdoor season.

In addition to this setback, Frank Foss, the former Cornell university athlete, who recently established a new world's record of 13 feet 3 9-16 inches in the pole vault, has been confined to his bed with a high fever. While training at Stagg field, Foss spiked himself and an infection resulted. Earl Eby, the star middle distance runner, is recovering from an infection on his finger at Camp Grant base hospital and will not be at his best. Foss and Eby will make the trip.

FOR PLAYERS OF WHIST

It is delightful to work for nine tricks in a deal when eight appears to be all that may possibly be extracted from the combined hands of the declarer and dummy. Every faculty is called into action while the adversaries are trying to discover your purpose and defeat your efforts.

West secured nine tricks.

After dummy's hand was exposed the declarer could see two tricks in each suit and a possible ninth trick if the diamonds were evenly distributed. A trial of the diamonds revealed an appalling situation.

Not only was the declarer unable to make a third trick in the diamond suit, but his play at tricks two and three established three diamonds in the north hand.

The only other possibility was to secure three tricks in the club suit, which required some complicated play.

At trick five the declarer began his campaign to force north to lead away from the king of clubs. He knew that he would be unable to accomplish this scheme except by taking all the spades and hearts from the north hand.

The plan might have been defeated by north at trick 7 had he thrown away one of his good diamonds and kept both of his small hearts. That would have given north a card of exit when the declarer finally threw him in the lead.

A few, but not many, players would have been farsighted enough to read the whole situation, and discard a diamond instead of the five of hearts.

At tricks 7, 8 and 9 the declarer completed his scheme, and afterward merely had to wait for the two tricks in clubs to come to him.

The next deal shows an interesting struggle for a rubber.

West secured eleven tricks.

West, apparently, would be forced to lose two tricks in diamonds and one in spades. He resisted the temptation to play the queen of spades second hand at trick three, as he did not believe that south would lead away from the king. By careful play he picked up the twice guarded queen of clubs held by north. This trick might have been lost, except for the ill advised double of five clubs.

After the sixth trick west began to force discards in the hope of making either the queen of spades or ten of hearts.

North was forced to a ruinous discard at trick eleven, giving the declarer a hard earned victory.

Athletic Events Booked at Gaelic Park Today

In addition to the five mile bicycle race and Gaelic football game, which will feature today's program of athletics and dancing at Gaelic park, contestants who will compete in the closing A. A. U. outdoor games of the season will hold informal tryout track and field events. The Gaelic A. A. has scheduled the last outdoor meet of the local season for Sunday, Sept. 28, and the park at Forty-seventh street and California avenue will be open for training of the individual entrants on intervening Sundays. Best bike racers of local clubs are scheduled in the five mile race this afternoon.

200 METER RACE TO BE RUN OVER

Newark, N. J., Sept. 6.—Failure to catch the correct time in the 200 meter run of the National Pentathlon, or all around championship, here today caused the Amateur Athletic union track officials to decide upon rerunning that part of the event next Monday.

This is necessary in order to break a tie for first place between Jack Fritz of the New York Athletic club and Bernard Lichtman of the Pastime A. C., New York. Each had a low score of 7 points. Daniel Shea, Pastime A. C., was third with 11 points, and B. Booth, Paulist A. C., New York, fourth with 15.

Michael Devaney of the Millrose A. C., New York, won the national two mile steeplechase event in 10:17 2-5.

MEXICAN BARES TRIPLE MURDER OF AMERICANS

Bandits Surround Trio on U. S. Soil; Exile Tells of Terror Reign.

BY KENT HUNTER.

El Paso, Tex., Sept. 6.—[Special.]—Three more murders have been chalked up against Mexican banditry as a result of an investigation by the father of one of the victims. It is the story of a detective's trail that led up and down the 1,800 miles of border and found its solution more than 100 miles south of the line.

On Feb. 14, 1916, the bodies of Andrew C. Peterson, Milton Jensen, and Hugh Acord were found two miles south of Hachita, N. M.

Peterson and Jenson had owned ranches on the American side, where Mexico, New Mexico, and Arizona meet. Acord was a brother-in-law of Peterson.

Story of Three Murders.

An investigator was employed. He followed clew after clew, and only a few days ago in Casas Grande, Chihuahua, found a Mexican, Pedro Soto, who told the following story:

"Peterson, Acord, and Jenson were south of their ranch on the American side of the line looking for stray cattle. While at a corral 500 yards north of the line they saw a party of Mexicans approaching. Col. Sylvestro Quevedo, a Villista officer, led the party. He called Peterson and the others to the line and asked them if they had seen any other armed men along the border.

"Peterson told him that two days before a body of thirty or forty Carranzistas had gone toward Sonora. Quevedo said he was looking for that same party, that he also was from Sonora.

This Amuses Bandit.

"Peterson asked if he had heard anything of Salazar, Quevedo, or the rest of that gang of thieves. Quevedo smiled and said that he had heard they were about sixty miles south of there. Peterson and his party turned away.

"Quevedo gave a signal, and the members of his band surrounded the three Americans, herded them across the line, and stripped them of their guns. Quevedo put a guard of five over them and told them to shoot if the gringoes attempted to escape.

"Then he sent others to round up horses and run them across the line. Seventy-five horses and mules were taken.

"The entire party, with the three Americans in the center, started south. Two miles south of the line Quevedo gave another signal and the three Americans were shot from their saddles. The bodies were stripped, mutilated, and left where they had fallen."

U. S. Body Sifts Narrative.

The local branch of the National Association for the Protection of American Rights in Mexico, J. N. Quail, southwestern field secretary, is taking steps to have the story verified.

A first hand story of conditions in Chihuahua came to THE TRIBUNE today from a ranch and mine owner who has decided to come to the border and live in safety with his family until better times come. He said:

"While there is some general farming, the principal industry in Chihuahua is mining and raising cattle. There are some particularly fine tracts of grazing land and some spots that are pure desert. As an average it requires twenty-five acres of land to one head of stock. Water is scarce and the possession of springs or wells often controls a large tract of pasture.

Irrigation Is Needed.

"For the above reason, the large tracts of land so often complained of are a necessity. There are some small tracts of irrigated land and much more could be brought under cultivation by the use of reservoirs and power pumped wells.

"Mining has advanced very rapidly, particularly during the last twenty years, employing many men at much better wages than the farmers could afford to pay. The result was that the smaller farmers became hopelessly in debt to the banks and the more wealthy element. The Madero revolution furnished them the only relief.

"There are four warring elements in Chihuahua: The Carrancistas (federals), Villistas, and Socialistas and numerous smaller gangs of bandits.

Carranza Chiefs Dishonest.

"The Carrancista government is badly financed and the officials are not generally credited with a large amount of honesty.

"Often the soldiers are not paid for months and are compelled to 'rustle,' which does not add to their popularity and greatly increases the local crimes.

"Villa (born Doroteo Arrango) is a most extraordinary man of powerful physique and little education. He does not drink at all and smokes very little. His frequent marriages have become a joke. No priest or magistrate will deny him a ceremony."

Mexico City papers received here today contained front page articles telling of the discovery by Gen. Juan Barragan, chief of staff, of a secret society to assassinate President Carranza.

Wealthy Men Beheaded.

Nogales, Ariz., Sept. 6.—Jose Maria Soto, one of the wealthiest Mexican ranchers in Sonora, and Santiago Cota, prominent Hermosillo barrister, were murdered last night at Imuris, sixty-eight kilometers south of the border. The bodies were found near the Sito ranchhouse. The heads of the victims had been nearly severed.

CARRANZA SENDS PROPAGANDA SUM TO U. S., IS REPORT

Washington, D. C., Sept. 6.—[Special.]—In an effort to create a public opinion favorable to his government and to block any movements that may lead to intervention, the Carranza government is said to have sent a propaganda fund of about $500,000 into the United States.

This declaration was made here today by a man in close touch with the Mexican situation and occupying an important official position in connection with Mexican affairs.

Another man in close touch with Mexican affairs said he had been informed that a sum, the amount of which he did not know, had been set aside for the purpose by Carranza and that it was probably already on deposit in this country.

MEXICO ASKS AMERICANS TO WAIVE DAMAGES

Washington, D. C., Sept. 6.—Apparently convinced that the United States is in earnest in demanding proper treatment of Americans in Mexico, the Carranza government has adopted a novel expedient in an attempt to relieve itself of responsibility.

Americans going to the Tampico region hereafter will be compelled to sign a formal release of the Mexican government's responsibility for what may happen to them. If they refuse, Mexican officials will refuse to vise their passports.

The condition raises a peculiar situation, for under international law a government may refuse travel permission to foreigners into a region where it may not be prepared to guarantee their safety.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH ENTERS NEW HOME TODAY

Congregation, Organized in 1833, Has Called London Pastor.

BY THE REV. F. L. GRATIOT.

The First Baptist congregation—for it has been nothing more for the last year—will hold its first services in its new church on Fiftieth street between Drexel boulevard and Ellis avenue, today. The new building, one of the finest examples of Gothic architecture in America, was erected by the Pilgrim Congregational church, which united with another church before it was completed.

The First Baptist church was organized in 1833 with fifteen members. Its first building was erected on the site now occupied by the Chamber of Commerce building. It was later forced out by business houses, and moved to the "fashionable residence quarter," Hubbard court and Wabash avenue. When the Chicago fire destroyed the building there, it was decided to build "away out on the prairie," at Thirty-first street and South Park avenue.

For nearly half a century until, when in 1918, the influx of Negroes changed the neighborhood completely, the church made this its home. A year ago the building was sold to the Olivet Baptist church, the largest colored church in the world, with a membership of nearly 10,000.

The church has called the Rev. A. C. Dickison, successor of Spurgeon at the Metropolitan church, London, to become its pastor. Today's services will be conducted by the Rev. C. E. Ladd, formerly pastor of the First Baptist church of Austin.

Mexico Catches Robbers of U. S. Sailors at Tampico

Washington, D. C., Sept. 6.—The state department received a dispatch from the embassy at Mexico City today announcing that the Mexicans who held up and robbed American sailors from the monitor Cheyenne in the Tampico district some weeks ago had been caught and are being held at Tampico. Some of the personal belongings of the sailors were recovered.

WOMAN FOUND DEAD; SEEK CAUSE.

Miss Grace Geis, 30 years old, was found dead in her room at 721 South State street yesterday. Police of the South Clark street station are making an investigation to determine the cause of death. The body was taken to undertaking rooms at 838 South Wabash avenue.

More Efficient Transportation for Every Dollar Spent

The power, ability, comfort and economy of the Oakland Sensible Six are the results of scientific design, finely developed methods of construction and the use of carefully selected materials.

This combination of forces produces a combination of advantages: (1) A high speed overhead-valve six-cylinder engine that delivers an unusual amount of power in proportion to car weight; (2) A chassis so balanced that it helps the engine to transform the utmost of its energy into transportation; (3) A general quality treatment in finish, in upholstering and in the little things.

Only such tremendous resources as are commanded by Oakland—engineering, purchasing and manufacturing—could build a car which is so thoroughly excellent in both appearance and performance and yet which can be owned, operated and maintained at the minimum of cost.

The actual intrinsic value, denoted by the materials and workmanship of each Oakland Sensible Six, is accompanied by an exceptional value in daily operation—for smooth travel is delivered at 18 to 25 miles to the gallon of gasoline and 8,000 to 12,000 miles on tires.

See the New Oakland Four Door Sedan

Both the Oakland Sensible Six Sedan and Coupe demonstrate what is possible in all-year, all-service cars when extraordinary manufacturing effort is expended on them.

The new four door Sedan is extremely easy to enter and leave and its commodious five-passenger interior is very advantageously furnished, affording full and unique provision for all-weather travel.

IF TRUE, HERE'S REASON WHY IT PAYS TO BE GOOD

Also It Explains Man's Opportunities in the "Higher Plane."

BY THE REV. F. L. GRATIOT.

"By a proper application of education [à la Theosophy] and Karma [à la idem], combined with gestation—just so—and in line with the higher understanding of the interrelationship of the involutional and evolutional theories, or, rather, principles [and add the four births which each soul must go through], we will soon be bearing children full grown."

So said Miss Isabel B. Holbrook, Theosophistical lecturer, in her lecture at Kimball hall before the national convention of the society.

"You may be surprised at what I am going to say," she continued, "but if we progress far enough some of us might bring forth Moses."

"Growing to Higher Life."

"This gross body of ours," said Miss Holbrook [who is], "is but the shell of our real self, which is developing, developing, developing. Our inner self, our real self, our ego—I wish some one would invent some word that better describes the inner essential being—our sum total, is every trying to express itself through this double action shell.

"There are really three circles of protoplasm around this soul of ours, and we are gradually eating up these shells, just as the caterpillar, and thus growing to a higher life." The "double action" feature is the fact that both material and spiritual elements are at work in this shell. The three sheaths are the etherial, the astral and the mental, each of which, by the process of gestation, must be broken through, being eaten up, don't forget, as they are discarded.

Why It Pays to Be Good.

"Our four births came in seven year cycles. The first, er—well, when we are born materially. Then at 7 years we are born again, at 14 again, at 21 again, and at 28 [or, if you're not good, not until 70 or 80], we get born some more. It is hoped by regular education [à la Theosophy] either to reduce these, or at least to have them happen some time before the first birth. When all live in the higher ether this may be possible. Then is when we'll be born all grown up, at least mentally.

"The seven year birth is accompanied by a "phenomena" just as—well, any way, teeth are that "phenomena." "Speaking of teeth, they have great significance theosophically. Our twenty-eight teeth correspond to the twenty-eight planes of existence. Add the four wisdom teeth, we have the four Atismic super-planes. This number also corresponds to the thirty-two degrees of Masonry." See? "But there is another degree in Masonry, as there is another tooth—and another super-high degree in the Theosophical heaven. The little bone in the neck, the seat of speech—that is the mystical corresponding tooth."

Miss Holbrook explained to the reporter what these planes are. Four big sections with several subplanes—the Physical, the Astral, the Mental, and the Buddhistic. Then above are the foud super, leading up to the Atismic, the unapproachable, inexorable, impossible, ultimate.

BEG YOUR PARDON!

The Tribune has received from Miss Anna Frazier of Aurora a letter referring to her much discussed statement on housemaids printed in the issue of Aug. 7. In that statement Miss Frazier was quoted as expressing the opinion that servant girls were overpaid and frivolous, that instead of practicing economy and thrift they are actually wasteful and by their ignorance and carelessness add unnecessarily to the cost of maintaining the home, and these facts should be taken into account in determining the value of their services.

Now Miss Frazier writes: "The article furnished to you by your Aurora correspondent contained two misstatements which could not but be offensive to the chronically dissatisfied and easily angered portion of the working people.

"He represented me as one of the wealthiest women in Aurora, when as a matter of fact I am not wealthy at all. I have an income, which, while I exercise a degree of economy that is unknown to many housemaids, is sufficient for my needs. Several of the women who have written me anonymous letters scornfully mentioned my alleged wealth.

"The other misstatement is 'They should not be paid more than $4 a week.' I did not say so. I chose my words carefully and said 'Housemaids at even $4 a week have more money to spend for clothes than many mistresses have.' There is an important difference. I meant only to speak plainly and fairly and to not be unnecessarily irritating."

TUBERCULOSIS HOSPITAL CONCERT.

Visitors are invited to attend the concert and lecture which will be given this afternoon at the municipal tuberculosis sanitarium. The program starts at 2:45 o'clock. A schedule of Wednesday and Sunday lectures and concerts has been arranged.

MEET HERE ON STATUS OF JEWS ABROAD SEPT. 14

Discussion at Zionists' Convention to Be Led by Judge Mack.

Discussion of the status of the Jews in Europe, with especial reference to the prospects for their political emancipation, will be one of the features of the Zionist convention starting next Sunday at the Auditorium theater.

This is the twenty-second annual convention of the Zionist Organization of America, and the first national convention of any Zionist organization held since the restoration of Palestine as an autonomous Jewish commonwealth has been assured by the signing of the peace treaty.

Discussion regarding the political status of the Jews in Europe will be led by Judge Julian W. Mack of Chicago, president of the organization, and Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of New York.

Judge Mack was the head of the delegation sent to the peace conference by the American Jewish congress, of which he is also president, at its meeting in Philadelphia last December, and Dr. Wise was a member of the delegation.

This congress instructed its delegation to ask for an independent Jewish state in Palestine under the trusteeship of Great Britain. It also gave instructions regarding the status of the Jews of Poland, Roumania, Czecho-Slovakia, and Jugo-Slavia, which included a "bill of rights." The aim was to protect the minority peoples in the free exercise of their religion, language, etc.

Prof. Felix Frankfurter, former assistant to Secretary of War Baker and until recently chairman of the United States war trade policies board, who, with Justice Louis D. Brandeis, of the United States Supreme court, represented the Zionists at Versailles, will take a prominent part in the discussion.

Justice Brandeis, president of the organization, will be present.

START MINNEAPOLIS FLIGHT AT 5 A. M.

Residents in the vicinity of Washington park will get a chance to see Col. R. S. Hartz start for Minneapolis this morning in his "round the rim" aeroplane—that is, if they are willing to break their Sunday morning slumbers. Col. Hartz planned to get away yesterday, but readjustments on his mahine necessitated his waiting until this morning when, he says, he hopes to get away about 5 o'clock, reaching Minneapolis at 9.

WOULD DO AWAY WITH USING WORDS LABOR AND CAPITAL

Dropping of the terms "capital" and "labor," and substituting for them "employer" and "employé," is one of the suggestions for improving conditions in the industries that will come up at the "Our Country First" conference, which is to open tomorrow in the Congress hotel.

The conference was called under the auspices of the Illinois Manufacturers' association for the general purpose of finding remedies for present conditions of unrest, and of discussing plans for removing causes for dissatisfaction in the industrial world. All classes of the industrial, financial and agricultural worlds, including representatives of organized labor, are to have a hearing. It is expected that resolutions will be passed for action by congress that will be a material aid in clearing up the situation.

Gov. Samuel R. McKelvie of Nebraska is to be one of the speakers who will be heard tomorrow. The address of welcome will be delivered by D. E. Felt, president of the Illinois Manufacturers' association. On behalf of the state the delegates will be welcomed by E. J. Brundage, attorney general.

Other addresses will be delivered by S. M. Hastings, chairman of the conference; H. H. Merrick, Roland B. Mahany, assistant to the secretary of labor; J. F. Zoller, and S. T. Bledsoe. In the evening there will be an open forum conducted by W. H. Manss, former director of the war service committee of the war industries board.

Charles Piez, former director of the United States Emergency Fleet corporation, is to be one of the speakers at Tuesday's sessions.

FUNK BROTHERS, PIONEER'S SONS, DIE ON SAME DAY

Bloomington, Ill., Sept. 6.—Lafayette and Jacob Funk, sons of Isaac Funk, and oldest surviving members of one of the most noted pioneer farming families in the history of Illinois, died today within three hours of each other.

Lafayette passed away in Funk's Grove at 3:30 a. m. and at 6 a. m. his brother Jacob died at his home in this city.

Their deaths were due to the infirmities of advanced age.

They were members of a family which has figured prominently in the agricultural development of the state. Both had passed their 85th birthdays.

Their father came to Illinois in 1824 and settled at Funk's Grove, where he became the owner of 25,000 acres. Isaac Funk reared eight sons, all of whom attained success in agriculture, in business, and in politics.

One of the sons was in congress and three were members of the Illinois legislature. Among these was Benjamin E. Funk, father of Frank H. Funk, former state senator and now a member of the state utilities commission.

Sale of Bad Cantaloupes Closes Produce Store

A produce merchant at 164 North State street made a slight mistake yesterday in selling four decayed cantaloupes to Charles M. Dennis, managing editor of the Chicago Daily News, instead of to a citizen not so well acquainted with the legal machinery of the city. Mr. Dennis reported the case to Dr. John Dill Robertson, commissioner of health, with the result that an order was issued to close the store of the offending merchant.

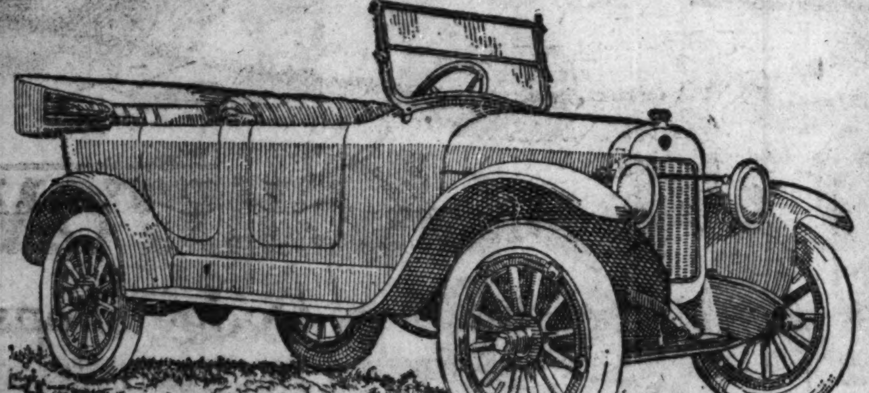
A Feast to the Eye is the Post-War Maxwell



A NOTED artist, whose income is sufficient to provide him with a Rolls-Royce, took one look at the Post-War Maxwell and remarked: "It's a sun-down!" Which is art slang for saying, "It's a beauty."

This artist then went to the telephone and placed his order for one.

But the real great beauty of the Post-War Maxwell was hidden from the eye of this noted artist.

He did not know about the vast improvements made in the chassis, how the electric system has been perfected, how a heavier and masterly rear axle has been used, how Hot Spot and Ram's-horn have given the engine a new efficiency, how the emergency brake has been set up on the transmission shaft, nor a score of others that would make a "mechanical mind" forget his dinner.

It's a greater Maxwell than any of the 300,000 of the same type that grace the highways of the world.

Though a respectable sum has been added in value, the price is only $985 f. o. b. Detroit.

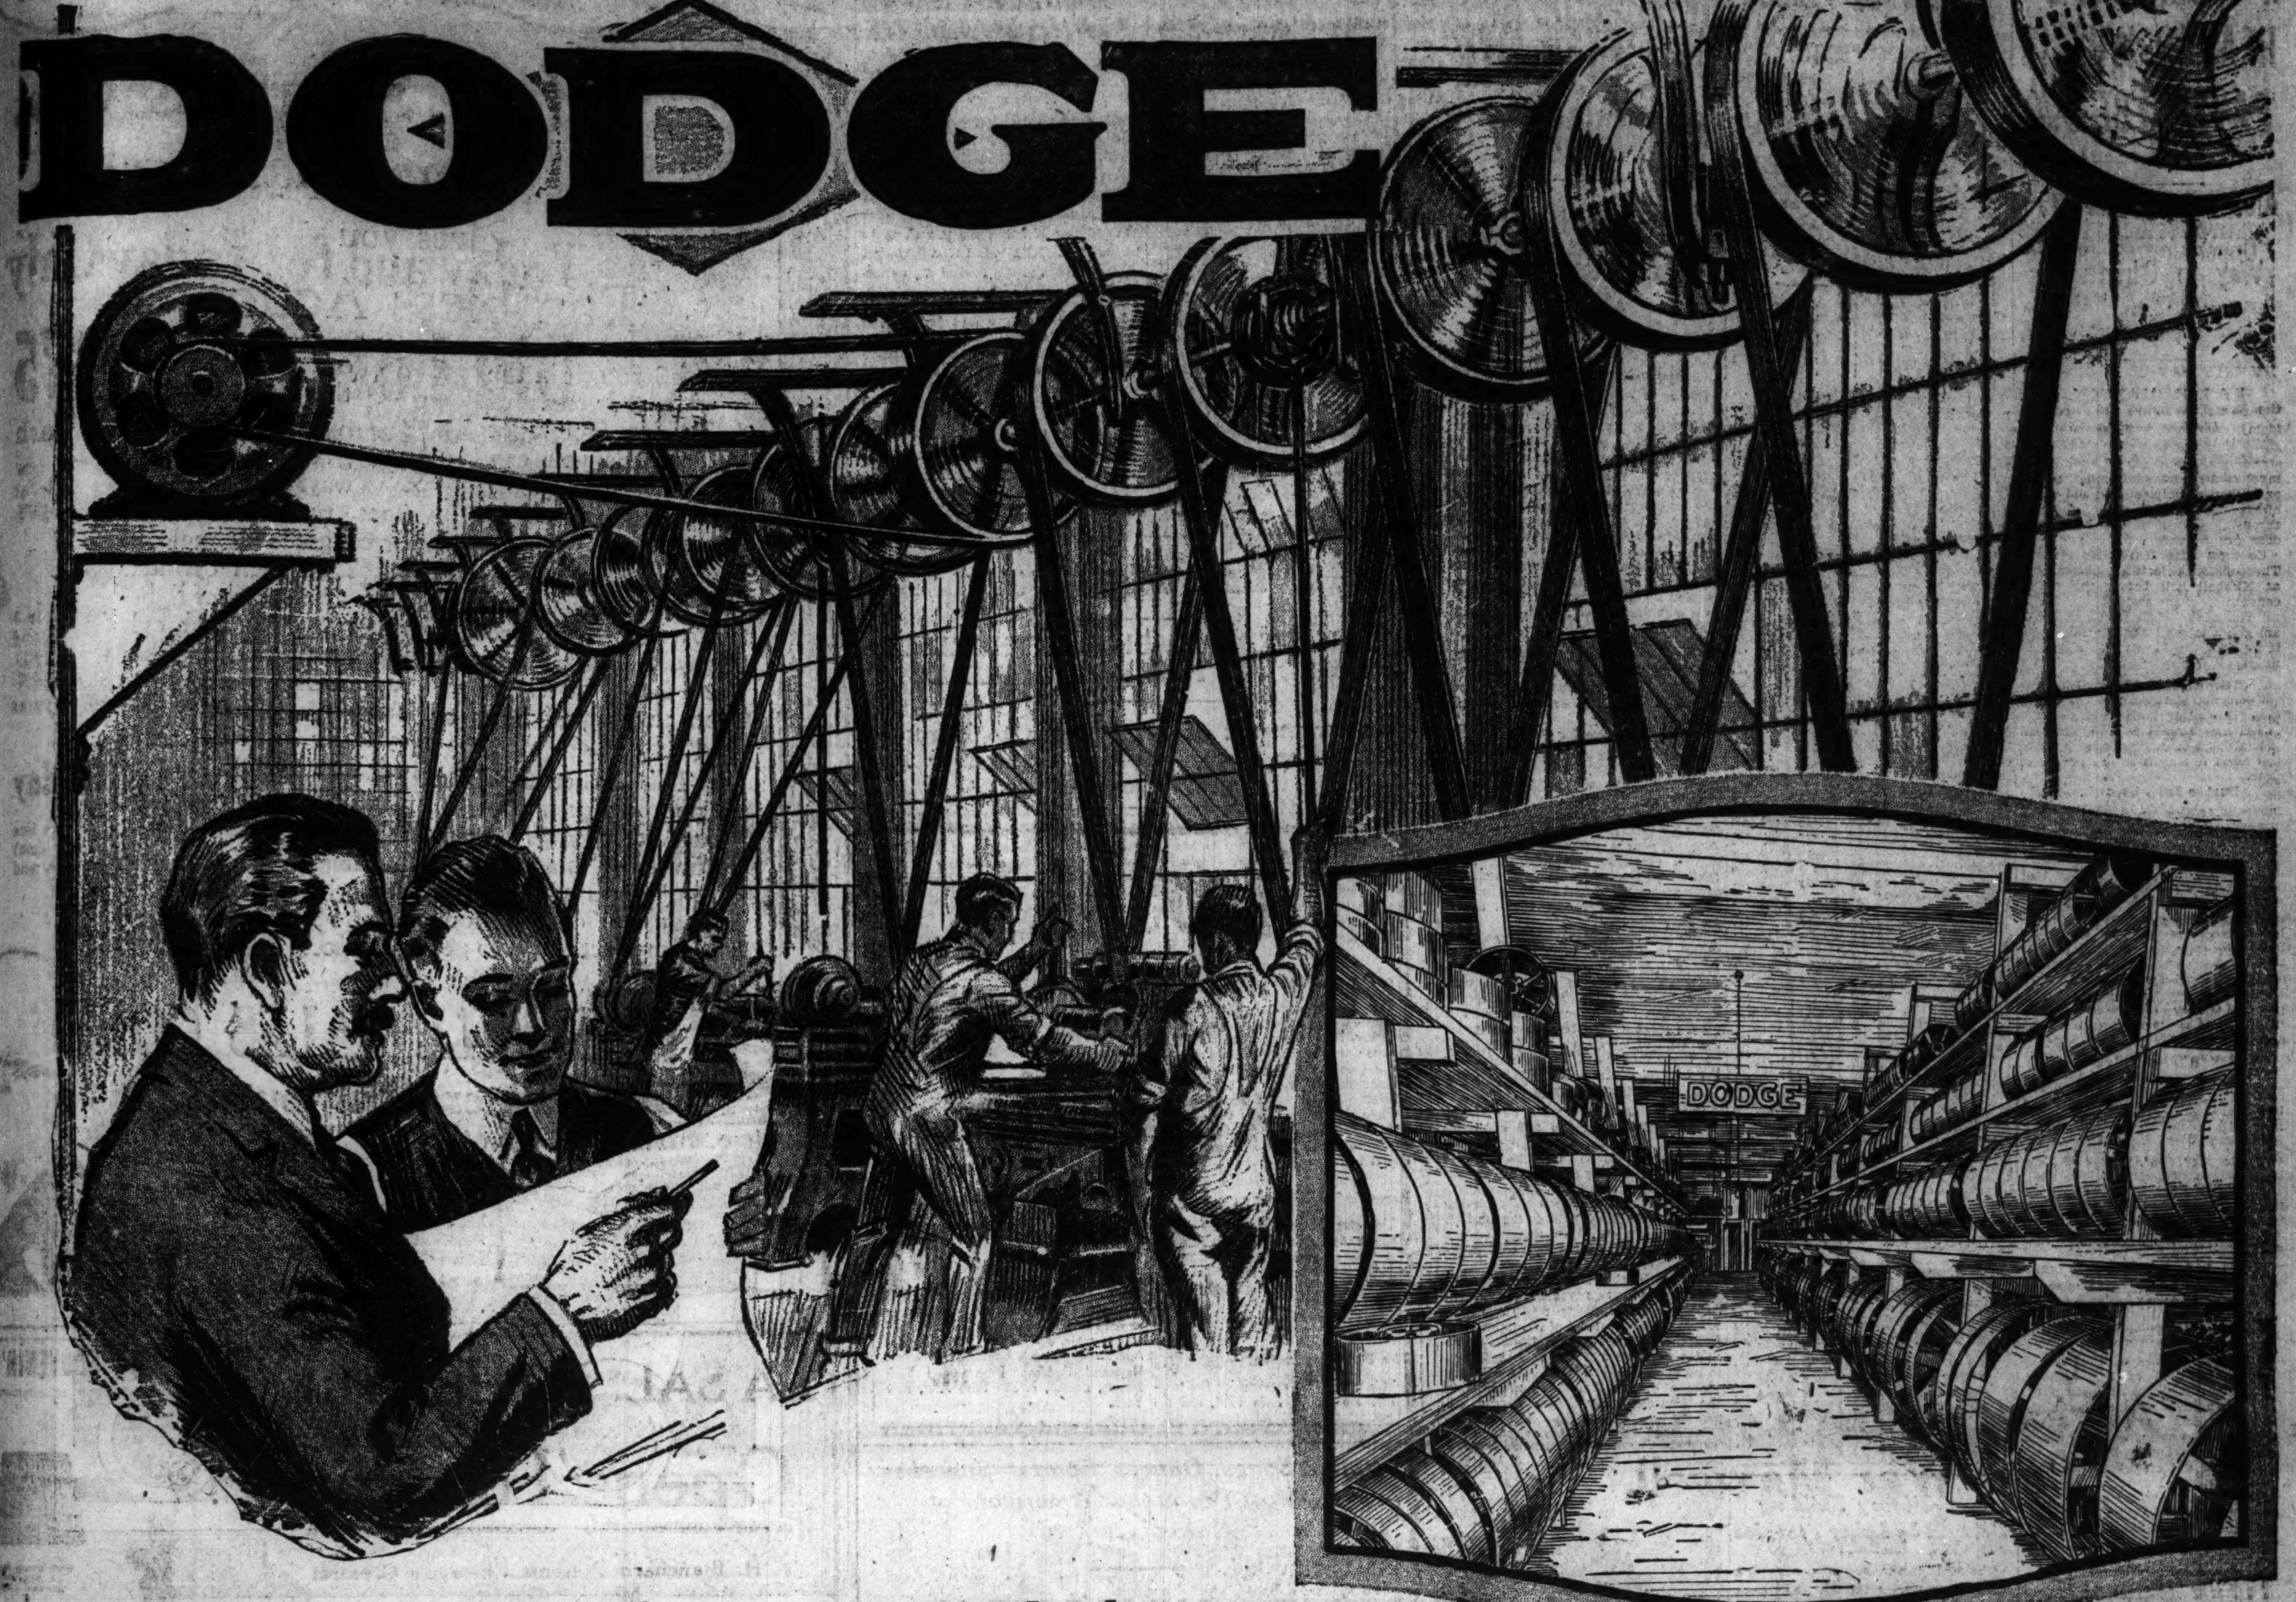
DODGE



Is "Dodge equipment" your shop-standard for power transmitting machinery?

In at least 90% of the finest equipped manufacturing plants in America, the line and countershaft method of power distribution still holds first choice of production managers as the really safe, simple and reliable means of operating machines at the lowest net cost per unit of production.

These men have recognized the prudence of adhering to standards of practice that years of experiences have proved trustworthy.

Particularly is this true in plants where Dodge is the shop-standard.

Low first cost, adaptability to present installations, minimum operating cost and absolute interchangeability from one use to another has made Dodge equipment the logical choice of the man upon whom continuous production depends.

In fact, it is generally known throughout industry that when equality alone is the consideration, Dodge Products are chosen without further investigation than to make sure of the presence of the Dodge, Oneida or Keystone trade mark on the goods themselves.

More often a second qualification is required; and when IMMEDIATE DELIVERY is vital, the buyer must of necessity turn to Dodge Dealers and Dodge Branches for service.

Immediate delivery at a guaranteed price

No other manufacturer of power transmission appliances distributes so complete a line over so great an area—none may offer the combined facilities of 500 mill supply dealers located all over America.

This ability to deliver stock products the same day the order was placed has time and time again saved thousands of dollars for a manufacturer.

A New Jersey manufacturer needed:

258—2 3-16x16 inch Capillary Oiling Hangers,
78—2 3-16 inch Keyless Couplings,
333—2 3-16 inch Collars.

The local dealer called the branch warehouse on the wire and the order was delivered from stock the next day.

A Pennsylvania dealer placed an order with a District Branch for 400—2 7-16 inch Keyless Couplings and 200—2 15-16x30 inch Ring Oiling Hangers; they were shipped from stock.

Your dealer has a stock of Dodge products—order from him

The illustrations on this page are reproductions from the actual photos in the Saturday Evening Post this week of standard Dodge, Oneida and Keystone dealers' stocks.

Thousands of tons of Pulleys, Hangers, Bearings, Couplings, Collars, Clutches, etc., in all sizes, are located in the industrial centers of America.

ONEIDA and KEYSTONE

Products are Dodge-built in Dodge shops

It is only necessary to phone your order to the nearest Dodge, Oneida or Keystone dealer; he will make immediate delivery at a guaranteed price.

Back of those dealers stands the finest system of district warehouses stocking transmission machinery in the country.

And behind these warehouses are the three great Dodge plants at Mishawaka, Ind., and Oneida, N. Y., with a daily capacity greater than the combined facilities of competition.

Your profits are concerned—are you?

Surely you want products of a recognized quality. Buy from Dodge.

Surely you want what you want, when you want it. Rely on Dodge.

If you are building a new plant, or extending your present one, specify Dodge equipment throughout; you will be insuring both production and profits.

If you are changing over the manufacture of one product to another, let Dodge engineers advise with you; they may save you time and money.

If you need one or a hundred Pulleys or Hangers or Couplings in a hurry, call your dealer on the phone; he will see to it that your order is filled promptly with guaranteed products.

In all cases excepting where rope drives, conveyors or jack shaft equipment is wanted, or when Engineering advice is necessary, place your order for Dodge, Oneida or Keystone products with your dealer—we very much prefer to receive all orders for stock products through him—he is a vital link in our chain of distribution and the stock he carries justly deserves your consideration.

For engineering service, for special equipment and for rush orders of odd sized products, call the nearest Dodge Branch on the phone collect.

If you have not received your copy of the new Dodge D-19 complete line catalog, let us know at once; this volume is necessary to every factory because it fully illustrates the application of Dodge, Oneida and Keystone products to each industry according to its requirements.

YANKEES BUILD MODERN HARBOR FOR OLD ATHENS

Primitive Methods to Give Way to Chicago Firm's Plan.

BY J. H. CLAYTON.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

ATHENS, Sept. 6. — Under the shadow of the ancient Parthenon and the Acropolis, American enterprise and American dollars are busy bringing to Athens and Piraeus American docking facilities, an American water system and American sanitary arrangements.

If you have visited Athens you will appreciate the work which is being done. If you have ever landed in the harbor of Piraeus, have fought your way through a hundred hawking, clamoring boatmen into your tiny rowboat, have watched your trunks make their perilous plunge from the ship's rail to the waiting boatman, have been crowded and cursed in the jam and and confusion of debarkation, you will know what it means to the people of Greece.

Harbor Deep Enough.

Nowhere in the world does a large city have such primitive facilities for debarkation and the unloading of merchandise. It is not because the water is shallow, for the outer harbor will accommodate the largest ship afloat, but because there has been no one with enterprise enough to fight through and obtain the concessions for building modern docks and warehouses.

Merchandise unloaded from lighters stands in the streets, poorly protected from the elements by tarpaulin. The cost of the transfer of goods from boat to shore is tremendous, but the consignees have paid, and as an English steamship owner said to me, "They pay me the cost. They are satisfied. Why should we pay out an immense sum for improvements which will not be received with thanks?"

Chicago Firm Takes Hold.

That has been the attitude of English, American, and French here until an American firm, Ford, Bacon & Davis, of Chicago and New York, took hold. They realized the fact that Athens put up with such arrangements only because she had no better, and during the war they had their engineering expert on the ground to study conditions and to make plans.

The American engineer's plans include docking facilities for thirty-two ships of 7,000 tons or over, and a warehouse with a capacity of hundreds of thousands of tons of merchandise. These docks will be placed in the outer port, where a depth of more than sixty feet obtains, and will give Athens a port capable of caring for all her needs for many years in the future.

This firm is not stopping with harbor arrangements, however. Included in their plans is a water system and electric power plant, which will provide Athens and Piraeus with sufficient water and electric energy at all seasons of the year.

K. P. Find Sparta, Wis., Man Not Missing Haverly

Representatives of the Knights of Pythias yesterday failed to identify a man held in Sparta, Wis., as Paul J. B. Haverly, accused of taking $52,000 intrusted to him during his term of office as grand keeper of the records and seals of the order. The man, who gave the name of J. B. Fazell, was arrested when his resemblance to Haverly was noticed by Sheriff C. S. Smith of Sparta.

Crerar Library Building Delayed by Labor Troubles

The new John Crerar library is still a castle in Spain. Although plans have been drawn for a beautiful fifteen story structure at Michigan avenue and Randolph street, just north of the public library, work has been indefinitely postponed on account of the building trades tieup. As yet no contracts have been let, according to Thomas D. Jones of the building committee.

The John Crerar memorial library fund, which originally totaled $3,500,000, has almost doubled in the thirty years since Mr. Crerar's death.

BRITISH, JAPS, VOTE TO MUZZLE SHANGHAI PRESS

China Britons Protest Renewal of London-Tokio Alliance.

BY JOHN B. POWELL.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Special Correspondence.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

SHANGHAI, Aug. 14.—Shanghai recently had a municipal election for the purpose of voting upon a proposed law to establish a permanent license and censorship over all newspapers and printing establishments in the city. Although practically every American, Frenchman, Dane, Swede, Spaniard, Portuguese, and many Englishmen voted against the measure, it was carried by a substantial majority due to a combination of Japanese and official British votes.

Before becoming a law the measure must now be approved by the consular and diplomatic bodies, composed of the official representatives in China of some dozen and more foreign countries.

No Love for Japs.

British in China have no love for the Japanese, but their official attitude toward the Japanese in China must be that of friendly coöperation, because that is the policy of the British government as dictated by the terms of the Anglo-Japenese alliance, which was signed originally on Jan. 30, 1902, revised and renewed on Aug. 12, 1905, and again revised and renewed on July 13, 1911. This agreement will expire on July 13, 1921.

The Anglo-Japanese agreement provides that each nation recognizes the status quo of the other in Asia and in case of difficulties with other nations each agrees to support the other. In practical terms this means that Great Britain recognizes the control of Corea by Japan and on the other hand Japan recognizes the control of India by Great Britain.

Britain and Korea.

Suppose America should propose to Great Britain that the two countries officially recognize the rights of the 15,000,000 Coreans to liberty and democracy. Under the Anglo-Japanese alliance, Great Britain could not coöperate. This will serve to show the significance of such private agreements which President Wilson sought to prevent for the future through the league of nations.

Although the Anglo-Japanese alliance has yet two years to run, the Japanese are already negotiating in London for a renewal of the pact. The British in China do not want this alliance renewed and are now saying so in no uncertain language. An editorial written by an English journalist in the Peking Daily News openly expresses this feeling.

Although the British subjects in China do not want an alliance with Japan, it is a question whether their opinion will carry any weight in London. British interest in the orient is concentrated in India. The Japanese are now casting longing glances toward the Indian market.

The Japanese plea for racial equality at the peace conference caused the Indians, especially those who are dissatisfied with British rule, to look toward Japan for assistance. The rôle of leader of the colored races is an attractive one in Japan—especially, when the plea is combined with an opportunity to supply the products of Japan's manufacturing industries to India's 300,000,000 people. For the last five years all the Indian seditionists who didn't go to the United States have found a refuge in Japan. Whenever an Indian seditionist becomes so obstreperous in Japan that the British ask for his extradition the Japanese government issues a warrant for his arrest and then officially informs the British ambassador that he "has escaped and cannot be found—very sorry."

MOTHER AGAIN DENIES MARJORIE WARD IS TO WED

Mrs. A. Montgomery Ward of 325 Wellington avenue repeated yesterday that she was not aware of any engagement existing betwen her daughter, Miss Marjorie Ward, and Commander Norman M. Smith. Mrs. Ward said she was sure her daughter would have notified her if she were intending to be married. Mrs. Ward also said that she would make the formal announcement whenever her daughter was engaged. Commander Smith is an old friend of the family and Mrs. Ward thinks that because he and her daughter, who is at Coronado beach, have been seen together frequently for the last seven weeks their engagement is suspected. Commander Smith is in command of the San Diego public works office of the Twelfth naval district.

Raymond-Whitcomb Ready for European Travel

STATE DEPARTMENT AUTHORIZES PASSPORTS FOR BATTLEFIELDS

Announcement of First Tours to Europe Since War Began—Sailing September 17 and October 4

The State Department's announcement that passports will be issued to tourists going to France, Belgium and Italy is followed by the announcement of Raymond & Whitcomb Company that they will send the first tour to Europe in five years, leaving New York September 17 and October 4.

Months of Preparation

This announcement is the result of months of preparation. Officers of the company have traveled extensively in Europe since the armistice, going over the entire ground and making all necessary arrangements. Through its extensive organization and its chief European office at 2 Place de l'Opera, Paris, the company is constantly in touch with the changing conditions as no individual traveler can expect to be.

Remarkable Itinerary

This exceptional tour will be from six weeks to two months' duration and will allow choice of several remarkable routes, including France and the Battlefields, Belgium, the French Alps, the Chateau country, the Pyrenees, Provence, the Riviera, Venice, Florence, Naples, Rome and Paris.

The First Anniversary

This is the first opportunity for tourists to see Europe since 1914, and the time is peculiarly appropriate, for the party will visit the scenes of American battles on the first anniversary of the great Argonne offensive—the greatest of all American victories.

The Last Opportunity

This is also the last opportunity to see the great Battlefields unchanged, before time and restoration alters them. The Raymond-Whitcomb Tour includes all the most important Battlefields, Chateau-Thierry, St. Mihiel, the Argonne, Verdun, Rheims, Ypres, the Marne, and the Hindenburg Line.

Assured Steamship Reservations

An advantage of the tour, which will appeal to all prospective travelers, is the assurance of steamship accommodations of the best class, which under present conditions are very difficult to secure.

Party Limited

The party is strictly limited by the steamship space available, and persons who contemplate taking advantage of this opportunity to visit Europe should write at once for the company's booklet, containing rates, dates and full information. Address Raymond & Whitcomb Company, Raymond Building, Beacon and Park Streets, Boston, or 225 Fifth Ave., New York.

A Hot Spot Chalmers gives you
Throbless Action

AS you sit in the rear seat of a Hot Spot Chalmers you can neither hear, feel, nor sense an engine in the chassis.

You have a feeling of some invisible monster towing you through space. There's no jerk, no throb, no vibration, no shaking of body or fender.

This is because Hot Spot predigests the raw gas after it leaves the carburetor—"cracks it up fine"—puts the low grade gas of the hour into perfect shape to get out all the power that nature put in.

Ram's-horn, greater in many ways even than Hot Spot, rushes the "powdered gas" an equal distance to each cylinder with the speed of lightning. So that each cylinder gets its share alike; no left-over, no foul gas being passed to any one cylinder as in so many engines.

Result: vibration is absent, throbs are impossible, and you get motoring de luxe such as you never before experienced.

Pneumatics Effect Big Savings For Westinghouse in Chicago

> "Our choice of Goodyear Pneumatic Cord Truck Tires has been thoroughly justified by our experience with them. We have found that this type of truck tire minimizes breakages of our lamps in transit, reduces delivery time over city and interurban distances, and is valuable for emergency work and winter hauling. Our Goodyear Cords are living up to their reputation for durability."—Mr. E. L. Callahan, District Manager, Westinghouse Lamp Co., Chicago.

IN the local distribution of Mazda Lamps by the Westinghouse Lamp Company the use of Goodyear Pneumatic Cord Truck Tires is a source of essential protection to the delicate cargoes and consequently a source of continuous saving.

The percentage of breakages, formerly occurring when the lamps were delivered in a truck on solid tires, has been minimized — with obvious benefit to the company and its customers in this vicinity.

Certainly the stopping of most of the load loss, previously caused by heavy jarring on the solid truck tires, holds important meaning for all who haul fragile wares as well as perishable foodstuffs and the like.

A further money-saving effect of the cushioning Goodyear Cords is observed in the fact that not more than $10 has been spent on the truck they equip during its service life; and it should be noted that this outlay was occasioned by an accident.

Westinghouse officials mention the truck's greater radius of operation on the nimble Goodyear Cords which reduce delivery time in both summer and winter, thus supplying an important advantage especially in cases of emergency orders for conventions and holiday events.

Such satisfying of distinct service requirements is not only a definite function of Goodyear Truck Tires—Solid, Cushion and Pneumatic—but also of Goodyear Truck Tire Service Stations.

Therefore, experience like that described, plainly indicates that if you are a truck owner you can well do more than read about Goodyear performance.

You may effect important savings in your hauling by using the type and size of tire which will be recommended by one of the stations listed here, plus its tire-conserving service.

CAPT. GREGORY PUTS ONE OVER ON BELA KUNISTS

Gets Barrel of Money but Food Goes to Archduke Regime.

BY FARMER MURPHY.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]

[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

VIENNA, Sept. 4, via Paris, Sept. 6.—The reactionary monarchists of Budapest now are being fed by bolshevist funds. One trainload of fats already has arrived, another is due tomorrow, and a third is on the way from Trieste—all purchased with money gathered by the Bela Kun outfit.

This huge sum, necessary for the purchase of three trainloads of pork, might have been spirited away when the Bela Kun government fell, except for the keenness of Capt. T. C. Gregory, American relief administration, who by a shrewd maneuver put the entente negotiators into the position of being able to offer relief, and at the same time forced the bolshevists to pay for their undoing. Cold American poker bluff won out where for four months entente diplomacy had only made matters worse.

Food Basis of Government.

It will be remembered that one of the most serious difficulties of the bolshevist régime was the provisioning of the city. Lack of food was damaging its cause more than anything else. When the entente representatives at Vienna began their negotiations with the disaffected bolshevists leading to the final overthrow of their régime, one of the first questions the bolshevists asked was if the entente had provisions.

This was a sticker. The American relief administration was about at the end of its existence, and had no provisions nor funds, but the British were in the same fix. Yet one of the rosiest unofficial promises danced before the eyes of the hungry Budapesters had been that they would get plenty of food as soon as they threw out the Reds.

Sir Thomas Cunningham, after talks with the bolshevist emissaries, brought this problem to Capt. Gregory. Capt. Gregory scratched his head in perplexity for a moment, then said to Sir Thomas:

"Go ask them to make a list of the kind of foods they want and how much. That will make them think we have got all kinds of food when their appetite will give them time to think."

Reds Sought Foods.

Capt. Gregory had been approached several times during the Bolshevist rule by one of their officials who buy American foodstuffs to ship into Budapest, but, of course, he had always turned the man down. He suddenly remembered this fellow and knew he had all kinds of money, which had been raked in by the Reds. He saw the man and told him the bolshevist régime was about to blow up, that there would be immediate need of food in Budapest, and asked him to turn over his money to him, Gregory.

The man, dazed by the boldness of this proposition at first demurred, and asked who would receipt to him for the money. Capt. Gregory wished to know what he wanted with a foolish little thing like a receipt, if he turned over the money to him for, and he put it back in the safe; whereas, if he kept it himself, his Bolshevist comrades were likely to take it away from him or the authorities would sieze it when the Red government fell.

Meanwhile, Sir Thomas had a memorandum of the kind of foods desired, and the request for it had just the effect Capt. Gregory suspected. The man who had the money, after thinking for some time, decided to turn it over to Capt. Gregory, who already had been reaching out in all directions to see where fats could be purchased. He found several large shipments available.

All Kinds of Money.

They counted the money. It was like sorting a wash basket full of cigar coupons, with here and there some real stuff. Asked what the total sum amounted to, the captain replied:

"I haven't the slightest idea what it was in real money, but there were 10,000,000 Austrian kronen, 2,235,000 Roumanian lei, 2,000,000 German marks, 612,000 French francs, £7,000 English, and $96,000, much of the brand new thousand dollar bills which never had been folded."

With the money in hand and the food located and ready to be bought, Capt. Gregory only waited until Kun actually got out to close the deal. Before the provisions could be shipped, however, the Roumanians had entered Budapest and had begun to strip it clean. It was then that Capt. Gregory delivered the ultimatum to the Roumanian generals that not an ounce of food would be shipped in until they had agreed in writing to accept the principles laid down by the entente, also to cease requisitioning food in Budapest. The Roumanians agreed, and the food was allowed to proceed. Nevertheless rports from Budapest indicate the Roumanians are as facile at lying in writing as by word of mouth.

OWEN CORD FABRIC SOLID TIRES

Tire Costs and Tire Values

You can't tell what a tire costs when you buy it. You learn when it wears out. The cost per mile of Owen Tires (fabric or cord) is exceptionally low, figured on the basis of first cost and the thousands of miles of service secured before an Owen finally wears out.

Owen Tires will average a much greater mileage than other tires due to the superb quality of the material used and the careful, painstaking workmanship. And that greater mileage is secured with greater comfort and with no trouble on the road.

It is a tire truism that Owen Tires are the most economical you can buy, figured on a mileage basis.

The Owen 30x3½ fabric tire is equivalent to the average 31x4. It enables the owners of small cars to enjoy that mileage economy and riding comfort usually found only in larger sizes for higher-priced cars.

True and Thrilling Narrative of the Story King and the World's Most Famous Bandit

O. Henry and
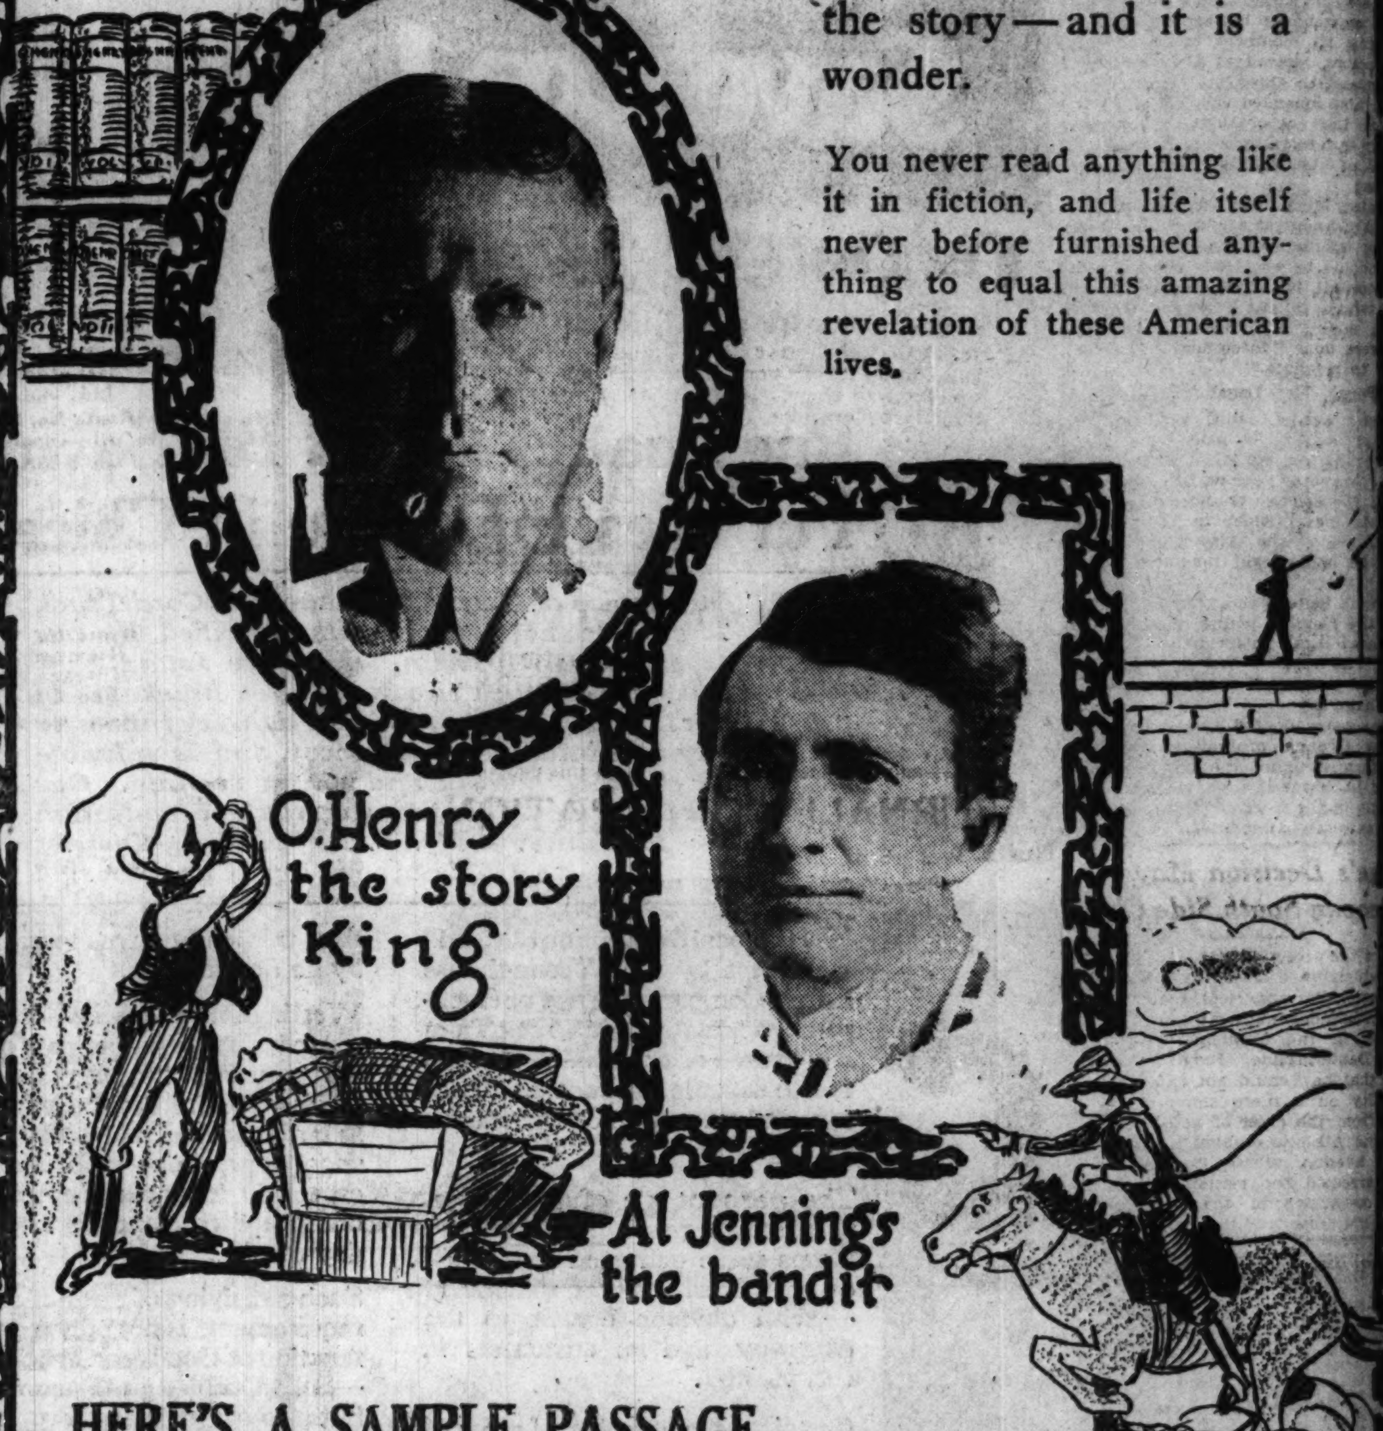
Al. Jennings



—The bandit tells the story—and it is a wonder.

You never read anything like it in fiction, and life itself never before furnished anything to equal this amazing revelation of these American lives.

HERE'S A SAMPLE PASSAGE FROM THE GREAT NARRATIVE

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE
(Copyright, 1919, by Al Jennings).

The deputy reared from me, his face ashen with rage. Like a tortured maniac, I sprang at him. The guards rushed forward, made a leap at me, stopped abruptly, livid and simpering as though suddenly stricken. If any one of them had touched me I could have torn him to pieces.

I was ready to be killed outright sooner than submit to the horrors of that "punishment cell." I had seen too much of it—the prison demon dragged out of solitary and whipped into bleeding insensibility a couple of times a week—other prisoners given the "water" until their faces were one red, gushing stream and the anguished screams filled the air.

The basement where these things were done was directly under the hospital. I passed above it and could look down on the way to the transfer office. Three weeks before a man had been beaten to death over that trough. The awful debauchery of that murder had seared into my mind.

Dead Man Held Secret of Jewels.

The man was a friend of mine and one of the most intelligent convicts in the prison. He was a diamond robber—the cleverest crook in the pen, a man of neat speech and cultured manner. He had stolen some of the most priceless gems in the state. All the detectives in the country had not been able to locate the jewels. The jewelers offered thousands in a reward for the recovery of the diamonds. No third degree, no punishment could force from the man the location of his treasure.

In the prison was an editor, sentenced for the murder of a rival newspaper publisher. This fellow would have crucified his own mother to gain an extra crust for himself. He was always worming his way into favor by snitching on convicts. For some strange reason—perhaps because of their intellectual equality—he and the diamond robber became friends.

One morning the newspapers carried blazing headlines. The stolen diamonds had been found. The robber's secret was out.

Suspense and a surcharged excitement held the prison in a grip. We knew the episode was not closed. We waited.

Betrayer Attacked by Cell Confidant.

The diamond robber said nothing. Restless curiosity sent its questions and suppositions across the "grapevine route" from one cell block to another. "Who had told?" "What would happen?"

The answer came in a sudden viciousness that revealed the whole betrayal. The robber sneaked one day down the corridor. He had a bottle in his hand. He had calculated his time. He fell into line just as the editor was going to his cell.

There was a frenzied scream, a moment's scuffle, a loud, prolonged, tormented cry. The editor lay on the corridor floor, one eye burned out and his face puffed and flaming with the carbolic acid that was eating into his flesh. When he came out from the hospital he was half blinded and his face, such a seamy mass of ugly scars, hell itself wouldn't own him. He had won the confidence of the diamond thief and betrayed him.

BILL PROVIDING FOREIGN BANKS CAUSE OF FIGHT

Senate Has Contest on American Trade Abroad.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 6.—Necessity for the stabilization of foreign exchange and the extension of credits abroad as a means of furthering American commercial interests was emphasized in the senate today when the export finance bill, introduced by Senator Edge, Republican, New Jersey, was taken up and a number of amendments adopted.

The bill, prepared by the federal reserve board and approved by Secretary Glass and a number of the leading financiers of the country, provides for the formation of banking corporations to do business abroad.

Opposition to the measure was expressed by Senators Smoot, Utah; Gronna, North Dakota; Lenroot, Wisconsin, and others. They objected to the powers granted to the proposed financial corporations and urged that they be subject to the banking laws.

Want American Directors.

The senate by unanimous vote adopted an amendment by Senator Smoot requiring all members of the board of directors, instead of a "majority," as proposed, be American citizens. The senate also amended the bill so as to require the corporations to engage entirely in foreign financial operations, instead of "principally," as originally provided.

Senator McCormick suggested that instead of Americans holding the "controlling interest" in the corporations they should be required to hold complete control, but Senators Smoot and Edge termed this as impracticable, the former adding that he was afraid if this were done "foreigners might attempt to retaliate."

Pound Not Legal Tender.

Senator Smoot called attention to proposals which he said have been made by British officials that, as soon as the league of nations had been approved, the English pound note should be made legal tender in the United States, while the American dollar would be made legal tender in England.

"I don't believe the time will come when the English pound note will be considered legal tender in the United States," he said. "We may pass a thousand leagues of nations, but we'll never have it."

The senate adopted amendments by Senator Gronna prohibiting corporations formed under the act from engaging in commerce or trade or interfering in the freedom of competition in the sale of commodities.

Judge's Decision May Reopen South Side Clubs

All of the athletic clubs on the south side, which were closed by Chief Garrity during the race riots, are expected to open Monday night as a result of a decision in the Municipal court by Judge Daniel Trude. Judge Trude decided that he "could not enter a fine of guilty on a mere showing of an order from the chief of police closing the Pine Athletic club of 4139 Wentworth avenue, whose members had been arrested for refusing to close their institution in accordance with the chief's order."

NEW COMMUNITY SERVICE AIMS TO COMBAT UNREST

Revive Neighborhood Spirit, Motto in U. S. Campaign.

When the leisure hour problem has been solved the spirit of industrial unrest will disappear. This is the theory on which the Community Service, incorporated, an outgrowth of the War Camp Community service, is proceeding in its national campaign. Organization has been completed for Illinois and plans for the establishment of the work are under way.

"In correcting the apparently unfriendly relations between capital and labor, Community Service believes it can perform a valuable work by reviving the neighborhood spirit," said Maj. A. A. Sprague, chairman of the executive-financial committee for Illinois, yesterday.

Tells Aims of Service.

"This can be done by teaching the foreign born the lessons of Americanization, directing the leisure of the people along instructional and educational lines, finding a stimulating substitute for the disappearing saloon, furnishing a gathering place with a healthy atmosphere, organizing the social, educational, and recreational resources of our communities on lines so broad and democratic as to win the support of all races, creeds, and classes.

"Community Service has been organized on a national basis and has elicited a ready response. Organization has been completed in Indiana, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Michigan, New York, New Jersey, and Ohio. Illinois is taking its place in the movement, which is thoroughly organized here. We believe it will be a beneficial factor in the life of the state."

Lowden Backs Movement.

Gov. Lowden is supporting the movement.

"We shall have some compensation for the cost and sacrifices of the great war," he said, "if we shall carry into the relations of peace some of the experiences we have had in the war. The War Camp Community service played a great and useful part in the army camps and cantonments. If, by continuance of its work, the spirit evolved by the War Camp Community service can be carried forward in peace, there will result a peace community service which will be as helpful in the years that lie before us as was the War Camp Community service during the fateful months of the war."

The service plans to give concerts, lectures and recitals; hold athletic meets; establish playgrounds, parks, municipal beaches, bathhouses, and swimming pools where no natural facilities exist, and supply public camping sites for vacations. Clubhouses will be built, at which community dances, movies, and dramatics will be given.

City Leaders at Helm.

John J. Mitchell is treasurer of the Chicago committee. The other members are H. H. Merrick, George W. Dixon, Marquis Eaton, Richard T. Crane Jr., Arthur T. Aldis, F. S. Peabody, and Joseph T. Otis. Among those interested in the national movement are Theodore Roosevelt, John Hays Hammond, Mrs. E. H. Harriman, Cardinal Gibbons, Hugh Frayne, John Mitchell, William Hamlin Childs, and John G. Agar.

PRONOUNCED SLUMP DURING WEEK IN REAL ESTATE MARKET

ONLY ACTIVITY MANIFESTED IS IN OUTSIDE LOTS

Business Fails to Respond to Better Labor Conditions.

As occasionally happens even under the most active conditions, the week's real estate market, so far as surface conditions indicated, developed a pronounced case of backsliding. There was practically only one redeeming feature, the continued large movement of cheap outlying lots bought for home purposes. Outside of this the market happenings, both in the way of reported transactions as well as those filed for record, with few exceptions were of a comparatively commonplace character.

The favorable turn taken by the general labor situation in the early part of the week aroused much satisfaction among real estate men, as the threatening outlook in this field has unquestionably operated to slow up the market, especially as concerned the operations of conservative investors, who generally are behind most of the large deals put over. The sharp advance in the stock market reflected the marked satisfaction with which it was received by large investors, but unfortunately this was practically offset by the threatening attitude of President Gompers and the executive officers of the organized steel workers toward the United States Steel corporation later in the week. There will undoubtedly be more or less of a halting in general business, including real estate, until this momentous issue is settled one way or another.

This undoubtedly had little to do with the week's real estate market, which simply indulged in one of those occasional slumps which are liable to happen at any time.

It frequently happens that an unusually active market is largely represented by negotiations instead of completed transactions, and this seems largely to have been the case last week, as it is known that several deals of the highest importance, while practically closed last week, were held over to this week, so far as concerns their announcement. One of these is in the new north side central business district and will be certain to arouse great interest because of its character, as well as those behind it.

Building Tieup Factor.

There seems to be little of promise in the continued tieup in the building trades, which apparently is as far from settlement, if not farther, than it was a month or more ago. At that time the opinion was quite general that a settlement might be reached at almost any time, but, despite the influential interests brought to bear on the situation, which included federal as well as local officials, nothing apparently has been accomplished.

Moreover, the season is so far advanced that, even were a settlement reached within a few days or more, there probably would be comparatively little building, as most of these persons who have been planning to build during the present year have abandoned their plans.

As most of these involved land purchases, it is only natural the market should suffer. And it does, in respect to practically every class of property, except these outside lots, which seem to be moving quite as freely as at any time during the year. This is of particular significance as marking the strong hold which the home owning movement has gained, and which refuses to be discouraged by adverse conditions.

Halsted Street Sale.

But if the week's market was lacking in the number of important transactions, it developed one of unusual interest in the sale of the property at the northeast corner of Halsted and Sixty-second streets, which netted the seller a profit of more than $21,000 in less than sixty days.

On July 11 last the property, which fronts 106¾ feet on Halsted by 124 feet on Sixty-second street, was purchased by Peter W. Meyer, a banker of Hammond, Ind., from the Josenhans heirs for $106,750, which is at the rate of $1,000 a front foot. An old two story frame store building occupies the fifty feet, while an old frame dwelling is on the remaining fifty-six and three-quarters feet, and were, of course, given no value in the transaction.

The fifty feet at the corner has just been sold to David Wine, a merchant of Kewanee, Ill., for $65,000, while the remaining fifty-six and three-quarters feet has been purchased by Phillip Sissman of the Sissman Printing company of Chicago and E. N. Babcock of Beverly Hills, at the rate of $1,100 a front foot, or a total of $62,425. The corner fifty feet were sold at the rate of $1,300 a front foot.

Plan $75,000 Building.

Mr. Wine lately has become associated with the City Furniture company, now at 6147-51 South Halsted street, and it is announced the company plans to improve with a modern four story and basement building to cost about $75,000.

Mr. Sissman and Mr. Babcock also will improve their holding with a two story building to contain three stores on the first floor, while the second floor will be occupied as a lodge and assembly hall for the Englewood lodge, Loyal Order of Moose, the building to cost about $43,000. All of the transactions were negotiated by the Halsted and Sixty-third Street bank.

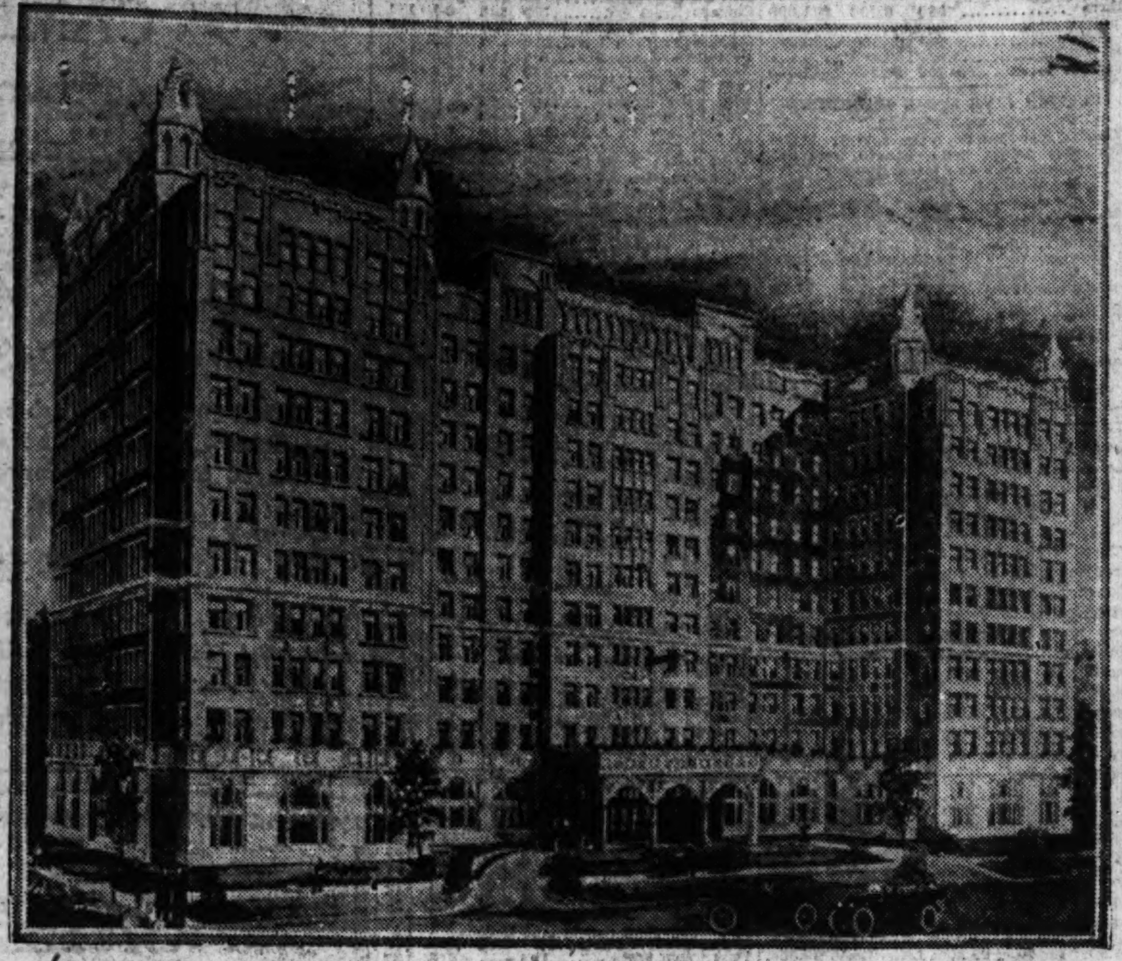
Other owners of property in that immediate vicinity are said to have been offered strong prices for their holdings, and to have marked up their selling prices sharply in some instances.

Only a few weeks ago THE TRIBUNE published the lease of property in the Wilson avenue district on the basis of a value of $130,000, which cost only $12,500 two years ago, the buyer having improved it with a building at a cost of $25,000.

These are only isolated instances of what is being done in many other sections of the city.

NEW HOTEL TO BE BUILT IN STREETERVILLE

Plans for 12 Story Structure Which Will Contain 500 Rooms and Is to Cost More than $2,000,000.



A new fireproof apartment hotel is to be erected on the southwest corner of Chestnut street and De Witt place. The building will be twelve stories in height, containing approximately 500 rooms, arranged in suites from one to five rooms, the majority being equipped with kitchenettes. The main floor is to be arranged in a number of visiting rooms and lounging and smoking rooms, artistically designed in Venetian and Tudor type architecture, large main dining room, and private dining room. On the roof there is to be a spacious solarium; also promenade and children's play yard. The building occupies a lot 235x108 feet, will cost in excess of $2,000,000, and was designed by Z. Erol Smith, architect for the Streeterville Hotel company, which is headed by Edward M. Bertha.

BUILDING SPACE LEASES FEW AND FAR BETWEEN

Standard Laboratories Rent West Side Quarters.

There were a number of fairly large loans reported during the week, but leases of building space were few and far between.

The most important covered the eighth, ninth, and tenth floors of the International building at the southeast corner of Jackson boulevard and Peoria street, which were leased by the International Tailoring company to the Standard Laboratories, manufacturers of pharmaceuticals, for a term of years at term rental of $80,000. Nauman & Steuer were the brokers.

Their Heitman Bond and Mortgage company has underwritten a bond issue loan of $175,000, seven years, at 6 per cent, to the Siegel-Nechinger Packing company, secured by their plant at Thirty-eighth and Gage streets, Thirty-eighth place and Morgan street. Part of the loan is for refunding purposes and part for contemplated improvements later on, which are expected to cost around $50,000.

Homan Avenue Loan.

Record was made of the trust deed given by Dante A. Raggio to the Central Trust company, trustee, securing a loan of $200,000, ten years, at 6 per cent, secured by the property at the southwest corner of Potomac and Homan avenues, recently acquired by the library bureau as a site for a new plant, which, together with the land, will represent an investment of about $250,000.

Archie S. MacFarlane has given a trust deed to the Chicago City Bank and Trust company securing a loan of $80,000, five years, at 6 per cent, secured by the property at the northeast corner of Thirty-sixth street and Wabash avenue, 375x130 feet, with fifty-one apartment building.

Borrows on Flat Buildings.

The Chicago Title and Trust company is trustee in a loan of $275,000, seven years, at 6 per cent, to Charles O. Race, secured by the property at the southeast corner of Kedvale and Belleplane avenues, 347x173 feet, and the southwest corner of Keystone and Belleplane avenues, 247x173 feet, improved with two large apartment buildings, one of 150 apartments, and one of fifty. It is understood that additions are planned when building conditions improve.

J. G. Kirk & Co. have leased for American Screw company to A. Becken & Co. and the American Dyestuff company the second, third, fourth, and fifth floors of the building at 225-27 West Randolph street, for a term from Sept. 1 at a term rental of $25,000. The lessors will spend about $3,000 for alterations.

Plan to Build Apartment 100 Feet Out Into Lake

A sale of north side vacant is of unique interest for the reason it is said to involve the erection of a big apartment building which is planned to extend about 100 feet into the lake.

It will be erected by Anton and Walter Wille on Sherwin avenue, 401 feet east of Sheridan road, and will occupy 141x153 feet, south front. It was purchased from Mrs. L. O. M. Taylor and husband, for a stated consideration of $30,000 and will contain sixty apartments of two, three, and four rooms and will cost about $250,000.

It will be three stories and English basement with an entrance on Sherwin avenue, which will lead to the various apartments. There will be water on three sides, with a twenty-five foot walk with grass, etc., along the east side of the building. It is planned to have every apartment face the lake.

SMALL ACTIVITY IN OUTLYING BUSINESS SITES

Outside business property, which made such a fine showing during the previous week, cut only a small figure in last week's market.

An interesting west side transaction was reported in the sale by Henry R. Hoffman to Herman Doktorsky of the property at the northeast corner of Western avenue and Thomas street, containing two stores and twelve flats, for a reported consideration of $40,000, subject to an incumbrance of $22,000. Blonder Bros. represented both parties.

There was filed for record the transfer by the State Bank of Chicago to Michael Espert of the property in West Lake street 168 feet west of Jefferson street, lot 56x79½ feet, south front, improved with a five story and basement warehouse building, for an indicated cash consideration of $45,000, according to the revenue stamps on the deed.

The property in Sixty-third street 227 feet east of Halsted street, lot 34x136 feet, north front, with business improvements, has been conveyed by Mary A. Hobbs to Samuel Segal for an indicated $25,000, subject to $2,000.

Garrett Institute Gets $300,000 Loan at 5 1-2

Garrett Biblical institute has obtained a loan of $300,000 for five years at 5½ per cent from the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance company, secured by the property at the southeast corner of Lake and Market streets, 140x180 feet, improved with a nine story building. The loan is for the purpose of refunding an existing incumbrance, formerly held by the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance company and recently by the Deering family.

FEW SALES OF FACTORY SITES MADE IN WEEK

Most Important Involves the Erection of $200,000 Plant.

There were a few noteworthy transactions in manufacturing property.

The most important involved the erection of a plant to cost with the equipment, around $200,000. It was the purchase by the William R. Johnston Manufacturing company, manufacturers of curtain windows, from the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee, of the property in Crawford avenue, between Fullerton and Wrightwood avenues, having an east frontage of 150 feet and depth of 750 feet. The property contains an aggregate of about 100,000 square feet, for which a cash consideration of $50,000 was paid, according to the stamps on the deed.

Will Have Switch Track.

The property will have switch track connections with the St. Paul road, and as soon as building conditions warrant the company will improve with a building of the most modern type, having about 50,000 square feet of floor space to cost $200,000.

The company, which is now located at 359 East Ohio street, is said to largely control the business in this country of placing plate glass windows in auto tops, starting this line in Los Angeles, and later moving to Chicago, owing to the rapid increase of their business, which has now necessitated larger quarters here. The sale was negotiated by Edwin J. Bowes Jr. & Co. Frank D. Chase, Inc., is preparing the plans.

Downey Buys Building.

A notable deal in west side manufacturing property, made a matter of record, was the purchase by Joseph Downey from Fridolph Ogren et al of the property at the northeast corner of Chicago avenue and Sacramento boulevard, for an indicated consideration of $111,000, subject to an incumbrance of $55,000. The lot is irregular in shape, fronts 150x176 feet, with 203 feet on the northeast front, and an east depth of eighty-five feet. It is improved with a four story factory building, formerly occupied by the Ogren Automobile company, and at present by the All-American Truck company.

BIG INCREASE IN BUILDING WORK IN MIDDLE WEST

The building contracts awarded during the month of August, 1919, in the territory north of the Ohio and east of the Missouri rivers, according to statistics compiled by the F. W. Dodge company, amounted to $267,261,000. This figure, although 13 per cent under the total for July, 1919, indicates an increase in building activity of 63 per cent over the average for August of the five years previous to 1919.

The August figures bring the total amount of contracts awarded during the first eight months of 1919 up to $1,565,489,000, which is a greater amount than has been recorded for the same period of any previous year. This figure is 40 per cent in excess of the average figure for the first eight months of the five years previous to 1919, if figures for those years be estimated in terms of 1919 building costs.

The figures for contract awards up to Sept. 1 indicate a banner year in building operations. The crest of the curve was passed in July, but delays in operations, due to labor troubles, shortage of materials in certain localities, and other causes have occurred. Consequently, it appears likely that actual construction has yet to reach its maximum volume and that the building season will be necessarily prolonged as far toward the close of the year as weather conditions will permit.

MANY SALES OF APARTMENTS OF MEDIUM GRADES

Aggregate Movement in This Class of Property Large.

The week's business in apartment property was of an unusually unimportant character. The aggregate movement was large, but it was almost entirely confined to the cheap and medium priced properties, there having been no transactions of any particular magnitude.

W. F. Pape of the International Harvester company has purchased from Henry B. Burckhart and Emanual M. Chirigos the high grade apartment building, containing seventeen apartments, at the northeast corner of Jonquil terrace and North Ashland avenue, for a reported consideration of about $70,000. The building was erected about two years ago.

Ainslie Street Sale.

Record also has been made of the acquirement by Archie S. MacFarlane from Walter C. Everson of the apartment property in Ainslie street, 588 feet east of Sheridan road, lot 69x111 feet, north front, for an indicated consideration of $47,500, subject to an incumbrance of $17,500.

R. J. Paul has conveyed to Catherine Shanley the flat property on 60x125 feet of ground in Airdrie place, 100 feet west of Broadway, north front, for an indicated consideration of $30,000, subject to $19,999 incumbrance.

The eighteen apartment building, with 66x150 feet of ground, at the northwest corner of Chase and Ashland avenues has been conveyed by Mrs. E. M. Frisbee and husband, Geo. L., to Mollie Barnhart for an indicated consideration of $65,000, subject to $31,000.

Diversey Parkway Deal.

The apartment property at 1555-57 Diversey parkway, being the southeast corner of Ashland avenue, with 52x116 feet of ground, has been conveyed by F. J. Happy to Paul J. Mendelsohn for an indicated consideration of $37,000, subject to an incumbrance of $17,000.

George F. Stange has purchased from R. Guenther the apartment property in Margate terrace, 394 feet east of Sheridan road, lot 60x118 feet, north front, for an indicated cash consideration of $31,000, according to the revenue stamps on the deed, no incumbrance showing.

The fifteen apartment building at the northwest corner of Fifty-third street and Prairie avenue, lot 50x170 feet, has been transferred by George Bertrand of Detroit, Mich., to Edmund Kusik for an indicated consideration of $57,000, subject to an incumbrance of $32,000.

Evanston Flats Sold.

The six flat building, lot 33 1-3x150 feet, east front, in Sheridan road, 200 feet north of South boulevard, Evanston, has been conveyed by Marion Bouchard and husband, Louis, to Mary Pearl Glenn for an indicated consideration of $27,500, subject to $14,000 incumbrance.

Charles W. Elmes has sold to George A. Osgood the apartment property in Racine avenue, lot 50x150 feet, east front, 216 feet north of Wilson avenue, for an indicated cash consideration of $23,000.

The apartment property in Leland avenue, 418 feet west of Clarendon avenue, lot 50x124 feet, has been conveyed by John A. Peterson to Morris Schlensky for an indicated consideration of $26,000, subject to an incumbrance of $10,000.

The apartment property in Columbia avenue, 138 feet east of Lakewood avenue, lot 37x139 feet, north front, with flat improvements, has been conveyed by R. E. Cobiskey to Nathan J. O'Brien, for an indicated consideration of $29,000, subject to an incumbrance of $9,000.

Vacant Lot Transferred.

Record was made of the transfer by Samuel D. Olin to John C. Updegrove of lot, 55x143 feet, west front, in Sheridan road, 110 feet north of Ainslie street, with flat improvements, the deed bearing $25 worth of stamps, no incumbrance showing.

The flat property in Leland avenue, 418 feet west of Clarendon avenue, lot 50x124 feet, south front, has been conveyed by John E. Peterson to Morris Shlensky for an indicated consideration of $26,000, subject to $10,000.

Seriousness of Building Strike Seen in Permit List

Building operations for August as reported by the city building department indicate how seriously the tieup in the building trades is cutting into building operations. Thus, there were only 288 permits issued, with a total cost of $1,960,400, as against $7,000,000 to $10,000,000 under normal conditions.

For August, 1918, there were 247 permits issued, with a total cost of $4,635,900, but operations were on a greatly reduced scale because of the war.

A comparison of operations for the eight months of the year make a better showing, with a total of 4,219 permits, costing $44,215,450, as against 2,022 permits with a total cost of $28,897,850 for the same period a year ago.

Byfields Sell Residence on Michigan Avenue

Record was made of the transfer by Fannie G. and Joseph H. Byfield to Alexander Meletio of the residence property in Michigan avenue, 40 feet north of Forty-fifth street, 40x160 feet, west front, and 31x40 feet in Forty-fifth street, 129 feet east of Michigan, for a stated consideration of $15,000.

ESTABLISHES SHIP PAPER.

Chairman Payne of the shipping board has taken steps to establish ship paper with financial interests on the same basis as mortgages and other good paper handled by investment houses. The shipping board has named Allen B. Forbes of New York head of the bankers' committee to interest bankers in enabling private concerns to purchase salable shipping board vessels.

Beware of Inflated Land Values.

The present situation of the market for farm lands all over the west is such as to require more than ordinary care in the making of investments in mortgages. The extraordinary prices of farm products for several years have brought a veritable boom in land.

This started with purchases of more land by successful farmers for the profits to be made from tilling it. Oftentimes when a farmer had bought a tract from a neighbor and was making plans for cultivating it to the best advantage he received an offer of more money than he had paid and accepted, thus getting his profit at once, in a lump sum. Then sometimes the second buyer received a still better offer and gradually in some localities farmers became speculators in land, making larger profits than by farming and without any hard work.

Now, land that was formerly valued at $100 an acre may be held at $250 or $300 and tending to advance still further. Of course, the land is just as good as ever and a mortgage based on the old valuation is better than before, but a mortgage of 50 per cent of the present market value may be unsafe.

At this point care is needed on the part of the investor. The testimony of neighbors that a farm can be sold readily for $350 an acre proves that a mortgage of $175 an acre is safe for a month or two, but it does not establish its standing five or seven years in the future when the loan matures.

Insurance companies that place farm mortgages on a large scale are fixing arbitrary limits on loans that seem very low. If the private investor follows the same plan he will not lose money.

Chicago and West Towns.

L. Z., Oxford Junction, Ia.—The Chicago and West Towns railway has a bonded debt equal to only about 140 per cent of its average annual gross earnings for the last four years. Notwithstanding the great increase in operating expenses last year, bond interest was covered two and a third times. The bonds are exceptionally well secured.

Brief Answers.

H. O., Fort Madison, Ia.—Standard Oil of New Jersey new preferred stock is an attractive investment. The company has no debts, but current accounts and earnings last year equaled 57 per cent on the new stock. The average annual earnings for the last seven years are over 54 per cent on this stock.

Moir Purchases Control of Hartford Building

Harry C. Moir, president of the Morrison Hotel company, is understood to be the purchaser of the controlling interest in the Hartford building and leasehold interest at the southwest corner of Madison and Dearborn streets. This gives him the control of the entire north frontage on Madison between Clark and Dearborn streets.

REFINANCING OF OSCAR MAYER HOUSE IS TOLD

Plans for recapitalization and expansion of Oscar F. Mayer & Brother, Chicago packers, were announced yesterday. The corporation has been reincorporated under the Illinois laws as Oscar Mayer & Co., Inc., and has bought a farmers' coöperative packing plant at Madison, Wis.

The company will have $2,000,000 7 per cent cumulative first preferred stock, $1,000,000 8 per cent cumulative and participating second preferred, and 120,000 shares of common stock, no par value. Of the preferred stocks $600,000 of each class will be sold publicly by a syndicate of Chicago banking houses beginning today. The old company had outstanding $300,000 preferred stock, $400,000 common stock, and $400,000 bonds, which will be retired. Both of the new preferred stocks will be offered at $100 a share and interest from Sept. 1, but with each share of the first preferred will go half a share of the common stock.

The company reports net earnings before federal taxes for 1918 of $306,046, and for the period from Jan. 1 to June 14, 1919, of $296,253, or at the rate of $541,881 a year. After giving effect to the reorganization, the company reports fixed assets of $1,464,664, current assets of $2,058,604, and current liabilities of $773,148. Total assets and liabilities are each $3,608,873, of the latter item $1,650,724 being represented as surplus.

Rogers Park Property Bought for Apartment Site

There was filed for record the transfer by G. L. Nelson to Charles A. Ackley, president of the board. The Dolan Cigar shops have donated a meerschaum pipe.

Golf Big Feature.

As usual, golf will be the leading feature, with tennis a close second, while the program will include the usual baseball contest between the "Cubs" and "Sox," and all sorts of other athletic events, in which foot races will play a prominent part.

The outing committee consists of John A. Carroll, president of the Hyde Park State bank, chairman, and Adolph F. Kramer, Harry F. Prussing, Fritz Steinbrecher, and D. Harold Hoffman. Executive Secretary Herbert A. Cole will be master of ceremonies.

Special Train for Fete.

A special train will leave the Randolph street station of the Illinois Central at 10:39 o'clock and will make stops at Van Buren, Fifty-third and Sixty-third streets. A luncheon will be served about 12:30 o'clock, and a chicken dinner at night.

EVENING UP FOR WEEK INCREASES PRICE OF GRAIN

Greater Disposition to Buy and Heavy Selling Is Absent.

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

In the absence of heavy selling and the presence of a greater disposition to buy despite the break in foreign exchange, an evening up for the week brough better grain prices yesterday.

September corn gained 2⅛c and was only 2½@3c under the cash at the close, while December gained ⅛c and May lost ⅜c. A better feeling developed in oats, with the close ⅛@⅜c higher. Provisions had support, particularly lard, but the close was unchanged to 5c higher. Pork, neglected most of the way, was marked up $1.75 for September at the last, while October finished 12½c lower. Short ribs were 12½@22½c lower.

Southwestern corn markets were irregular and closed ⅛c lower to ¼c higher, the May showing weakness. Oats were unchanged to ⅛c higher, with St. Louis leading. In Minneapolis oats gained ½@⅝c and Winnipeg ⅛@½c. Rye and barley markets were sharply higher both here and in the northwest, particularly the latter.

The bears had a good week in grain, the lowest prices on the crop being made for corn, September losing 13¾c as compared with a week ago, while distant months were only off 4⅞c. September oats finished ½c higher on buying by cash houses, who sold the December, which was ¼c lower at the last. May lost 2c. Rye finished 2½@5½c lower, and barley ¼@6c higher. Provisions were erratic with September pork up $3.00 and October $1.62½ higher. Lard is off 17½@55c and short ribs 32½@50c higher.

Stronger Tone in Corn.

A better feeling prevailed amongst traders toward the buying side of corn, and while there was a sharp break after a small bulge early due to selling by some of the best buyers of the previous day, the offerings were readily absorbed by shorts and commission houses on resting orders. The pit element were disposed to sell early, but started to cover toward the last, making a bulge of 2⅝@3½c on the active deliveries, with the finish on a fair reaction due to week end evening up. September closed at $1.64¼, December $1.31⅞, and May at $1.28⅝.

The bulge was entirely the result of pit conditions, and the market was oversold to a greater extent than generally believed. There has been a great change in sentiment in the last two days, and more disposition is shown to take the buying side on the breaks. It is the general impression that the edge is off the bear side for the time being.

News developments are featureless. The government report due after the close Monday was expected to show little change during the month of August from the 2,788,000,000 bu suggested in the last report. Eastern shipping demand fairly active, with sales of 165,000 bu. Sample values ½@1c higher, with receipts 163 cars. Outside markets were stronger.

Good Demand for Cash Oats.

Eastern demand for cash oats showed no signs of letting up, sales aggregating 215,000 bu, making well over 1,000,000 bu sold for shipment during the week. The removel of hedges against this grain and the strength in corn made an active and higher market for futures. Prices advanced 1⅛@1¼c from a small dip early, and closed within ⅛@⅜c of the top, with September 70c, December 72⅛c, and May 75⅝c.

The country shows no signs of parting with its cash grain, and the movement is far below the average for this season. Receipts, 78 cars, with sample values ½@1½c higher. For the week local arrivals were 2,227,000 bu, and shipments 1,602,000 bu. Last year receipts were 4,219,000 bu, and shipments 2,424,000 bu.

Spot Barley in Demand.

Malting demand for barley had broadened materially, and prices in some instances were quoted 1@2c higher. Milwaukee and Minneapolis were up a like amount. Bullish sentiment has been intensified by the belief that brewers will make old style beer as soon as the demobilization of the army is officially declared completed. Indications are for a small run. Spot sales were at $1.20@1.36. Receipts, 26 cars. A feature in the future market was the buying of 250,000 bu December by a leading cash house.

There was little pressure on rye futures, and prices advanced readily on scattered buying. The trade had a report of export sales of 500,000 bu, but this was believed to be the same business as the buying of a like quantity of futures the previous day. The close was 1½c higher. No. 2 on spot sold at $1.39@1.40½. Receipts 10 cars.

Timothy seed easy. Country lots, $8.00@11.00 per 100 lbs. Clover seed easy. Country lots, $30.00@40.00 per 100 lbs.

Provisions Irregular.

Provision values moved irregularly. The interest centered largely in lard, which was bought freely for October by Armour, and prices advanced 15c, but they slid off later with the close about the same as the previous day. There was less selling pressure on the whole, with no particularly new features. There was said to be an inquiry for cash lard, and deliveries were 100,000 lbs. Shipments of lard and meat for the week, 34,195,000 lbs, or slightly more than the previous week, compared with 16,324,000 lbs last year. Hogs were higher with receipts light. Prices follow:

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

The government report on all crops is to be given to the trade on Monday at 1:15 p. m., Chicago time. The main feature in which the trade is mostly interested is corn and oats. Estimates based on the government's acreage on corn are 2,775,000,000 to 2,800,000,000 bu. Last month it was 2,788,000,000 bu, and last year 2,583,00,000 bu, while the five year average for 1913-'17 is 2,749,000,000 bu. Condition last month was 81.7. On the basis of 77 there would be 2,770,000,000 bu, and of 80 would be 2,883,000,000 bu. Last month's returns were made before the rains came in a number of the largest corn sections, but there is said to have been enough losses elsewhere to offset the gain of 1.6 bu per acre, or equal to around 160,000,000 bu, to offset the gain that this would make. Spring wheat estimates are 195,000,000 to 205,000,000 bu, against 225,000,000 bu last month and 325,000,000 bu last year. Winter wheat is not to be reported on. Last month was 715,000,000 bu, and total wheat is estimated at close to 915,000,000 bu, against 940,000,000 bu in August and 917,000,000 bu last year. Oats figures are to be lowered and estimates are 1,206,000,000 to 1,245,000,000 bu. Last month's was 1,266,000,000 bu, and last year's 1,538,00,000 bu.

Leading grain traders are disposed to take a more sober view of the situation. They say there has been enough decline and that liquidation has apparently spent its force for the time being in both grains and provisions. They are not disposed to follw the selling side with the same vigor as a few days ago and look for a moderate advance, although the market on Monday is not expected to do much preparatory to the evening up for the government crop report. Some of the specialists predicted a break on the theory that the short interest has been greatly reduced.

Receipts of all grains at Chicago last week 8,770,000 bu, all showing decreases week were 8,770,000 bu, all showing decreases except corn, which increased 475,000 bu over the previous week, while the total of all grain decreased 289,000 bu. As compared with last year all grains except wheat decreased, the latter increasing 1,030,000 bu. The total of all grains was 1,305,000 bu under last year's, but slightly above the average for the five years. Railroads are all short of cars, but during the month of August moved 116,375 cars in the northwestern and central western zones compared with 113,242 cars last year for the week ended Sept. 2, roads in the northwestern region handled 14,222 cars of grain against 16,971 cars last year. Total of all cars handled was 158,301 cars, an increase of 10,983 cars over the previous week and an increase of 3,717 cars over last year.

Bids of December price were made for new No. 3 yellow corn to arrive by Chicago handlers, shipment by Dec. 15. New No. 4 yellow was 2c under December.

Two Board of Trade memberships sold the last two days at $9,300 each net to the buyer.

Receipts of wheat at primary points for the season to date aggregate 132,511,000 bu, corn 158,977,000 bu, and oats 30,310,000 bu. Last year receipts of wheat were 137,947,000 bu, corn 255,641,000 bu, and oats 59,561,000 bu.

CASH GRAIN NEWS

Shipping sales of grain at Chicago were 165,000 bu corn, and 215,000 bu oats.

Demand for good winter wheat was fair, with the bulk of sales at ½@1c over the basic, while line grades went at the basic figures. The government took the poorer kinds and the smutty. Springs sold readily at full prices. Receipts 292 cars. Minneapolis was firmer on choice and easy on the ordinary kinds. Arrivals there were 537 cars, against 600 cars a week ago, and 493 cars last year. Dark hard winters at Kansas City were off 1@2c, and red unchanged to ½c lower. St. Louis unchanged at the basic prices.

Offerings of corn were rather liberal, 163 cars, but sold readily with prices ½@1c higher. Shippers took the bulk of the grain. At the last No. 2 mixed was 2½c over, and No. 2 yellow 3c over September, the narrowest spread in some time. Outside markets were stronger than Chicago. St. Louis gained 1@3c, Omaha 3c, Peoria 3@4c, and Milwaukee 2c, while Kansas City was weak and 1@2c lower.

Heavy weight oats were in good demand in all markets. Prices here were up ½@1½c, with recepts 78 cars. St. Louis advanced 1@1½c, Omaha and Milwaukee 1c, and Peoria ½@1c. Kansas City was unchanged.

CORN CONSUMPTION.

Hogs consume 26.8 per cent of the corn crop of the United States, and horses and mules 27 per cent. Many theories regarding consumption of corn have been out of late. The department of agriculture recently made an estimate based on the 1917 crop. It shows that 2,312,000,000 bu, or 85.6 per cent was consumed for the year. Details follow:

A famine sized hog supply with a demand exceeding the offerings caused a 25@50c upturn in values. Top hogs at $20.25, were 25c higher, while the average price at $19.15, was 65c higher, due to improved quality, and highest since Aug. 27. Shippers were unable to get all the hogs they wanted, several orders going over unfilled, which makes the situation look healthy.

A feature of the trade was the contraction of the price range, there being a spread of only $1.10 between the top and average price, or the narrowest range since Aug. 13. The Armour drove of hogs figured $1.60 higher than Friday, they getting a much better class, including seven loads of Texas bred hogs at $20.25. The top was only 15c higher than previous Saturday, while the average was $1.15 higher than that day when packing grades were plentiful.

All Receipts Small.

All markets had small hog receipts, the eleven points receiving only 21,000, against 24,000 previous Saturday, and 23,000 a year ago. Total for the week at eleven markets was only 236,000, being 111,000 less than previous week, 77,000 less than a year ago, and 27,000 less than the ten year average for corresponding week. While receipts for the week were smaller, estimated average wight of hogs at Chicago at 255 pounds was 3 pounds heavier and only 1 pound less than two weeks ago, when the weight was heaviest since October, 1910.

Cattle receipts of 2,000 included about 1,000 western rangers that were delayed in arriving. Yesterday's offerings sold at steady prices. Quality of cattle during the week was poor, pulling the average price of good beef cattle down to $15.75, despite the fact that the market closed higher, the average being 15c below previous week and 50c lower than a year ago.

Outside Demand Good.

Outside demand was largely responsible for the strong close to the cattle trade, country feeder buyers taking a large number of catle. While receipts for the week were 22,100 less than previous week and 30,700 less than a year ago, shipments were only 1,000 less than previous week and 4,000 more than a year ago. This left a net supply of only 28,978 for the packers, against 50,036 previous week, and 63,854 a year ago.

Sheep receipts totaled about 5,000, including 1,000 forwarded to packers. The market was strong for those on sale, some lambs selling at $15.50, or the high point of the week. Like in the cattle trade, the improved demand for feeding stock has been a factor in strengthening the trade.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 20,000 cattle, 30,000 hogs and 30,000 sheep, against 17,374 cattle, 11,751 hogs, and 29,093 sheep, previous Monday, and 28,206 cattle, 13,371 hogs, and 44,348 sheep a year ago. Next week's estimated receipts 72,000 cattle, 90,000 hogs, and 140,000 sheep.

COTTON LOWER; BUYING LIGHT

New York, Sept. 6.—COTTON—Prices dropped after a higher opening and closed around the lowest for the day with losses of 30@64 points. Pressure was more noticeable from the professional and bearish element, and the only buying seemed to be profit taking on short sales. The imminence of the new crop movement in the face of a disappointing export trade is impeded largely by the weakness in foreign exchange. Prices follow:

FINANCIAL NOTES

The New York stock exchange and the New York consolidated stock exchange will be closed next Wednesday, which will be "Pershing day" in New York. It is expected the Chicago stock exchange and the New York cotton exchange tomorrow will consider similar action.

Louis L. Emmerson, secretary of state, is receiving hundreds of requests for anti-trust affidavits, which the corporations evidently think should be filed in September. The new corporation act, which became effective July 1, 1919, repealed that portion of the old anti-trust law requiring anti-trust affidavits to be filed in September of each year and it appears that the corporations have overlooked this fact. Under the new act the anti-trust affidavit will be combined with the annual report, which will be required of every corporation during the month of February of each year, which annual report will form the basis of determining the amount of franchise tax which all corporations will be required to pay during the month of July of each year, beginning July 1, 1920.

The federal reserve bank of Chicago reports weekly movement of credits as follows: Debits to individual deposit accounts for the week ending Sept. 3, reported by 136 banks in twenty-three leading clearing house cities in the seventh federal reserve district, aggregate $852,15,000, compared with $936,414,000 a week ago. Aggregate debits to individual deposit accounts in eighteen of these clearing house centers were $808,238,000, compared with $632,117,000 for the corresponding week of last year.

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Iowa Central railway, William Shillaber, Newman Erb, and Henry A. Gardner Jr. were reëlected directors for a term of five years.

All dividends accumulated on the preferred stock of the International Products company to June 30 last have been declared payable to stock of record Sept. 9.

R. G. Dun & Co. report 85 failures in the United States last week, against 99 in the preceding week and 136 in the corresponding week last year.

West Town State Bank Gives Bonus to Workers

The directors of the West Town State bank have voted to give all employés a salary bonus to be based on compensations paid during the present year. The minimum is to be 10 per cent of the year's salary, with a graded scale ranging up to 15 per cent, depending on the length of service.

NEW YORK BANKS BREAK RECORD BY WEEK'S LOANS

Total of More than $5,095,000,000 Shown in Statement.

The New York bank statement made a record in the matter of loans yesterday, with a total of more than $5,095,000,000. This was an increase of $105,600,000 over the previous week. The loans have previously risen above the $5,000,000,000 mark, but not to the size of yesterday's figure.

Although there was an increase of $5,057,000 in demand deposits, thus increasing the required reserve, there was shown a gain of $5,517,000 in cash, with the net result that the excess reserve decreased but $1,010,270. The item now stands at $32,026,200.

Figures for Week.

The treasury department increased its deposits by $48,293,000. The entire exhibit, barring the unexpected loan expansion, reflected an average money situation in New York. The figures follow:

CHICAGO STOCK TRANSACTIONS

Chicago stocks were rather dull. Union Carbide sold off to 81. The decline was due to apprehension of traders over the probability of no change being made in the dividend rate. The selling was not regarded as being significant.

The packing house shares were irregular. Swift & Co. was up 1 point, while International held steady. Armour & Co. preferred was fractionally higher.

Pneumatic Tool showed a gain of 1½ points, and John R. Thompson common was up 1½ points from the previous session. Connecting Railways preferred held steady at 15½, with a moderate amount of buying.

STOCKS DECLINE WHEN TRADERS REALIZE PROFITS

Most Issues Drop All Gains Made Friday Afternoon.

The New York Times

New York, Sept. 6.—[Special.]—Stocks moved downward in today's short session in a fashion which indicated sales of shares acquired during the early decline of Friday.

That is, the trend of business showed that professional traders were active realizing profits, and after this process was completed, around 11 o'clock, trading became rather dull, with price changes of the unimportant order. There were many fractional declines and quite a number among the industrial list, which reached one and two points. Generally speaking, the more prominent industrial issues dropped about all their gain of Friday afternoon.

Week Shows Contrast.

The last week displayed a curious contrast of speculative forces in the first half, as compared with the second. To and including Wednesday, the fore part was marked by enthusiastic buying of speculative stocks, which carried the average price forward five points or more, with some extraordinary gains among a few shares.

On Thursday the market structure became quickly underlined by influences, which have not yet become clear in entirety, although the street believes there was basis for the rumors of private settlements of a number of short contracts in high priced stocks at least in one issue.

Week Ends With Promises.

The week ended with promises, supplied in late news, of further grapplings between conservative and radical union men within a short time, while the president's position in respect to the steel workers and the Steel corporation was left in a status to become a factor in the coming week.

Foreign Exchange Falls.

A further drop in the foreign exchange market occurred today and took all of the continental allied exchanges down to new low records, while sterling fell to within 1½ cents of the low record of $4.12¼, made on Aug. 20.

Before the close of the day's business the market for the continental rates improved slightly, with francs quoted at 8.34 and lire at 9.74, against early low records of 8.37 and 9.78, respectively. On the week sterling lost an even 5 cents in the pound, francs declined about 20 centimes, and lire fell from about 9.65 on Tuesday to 9.78 today.

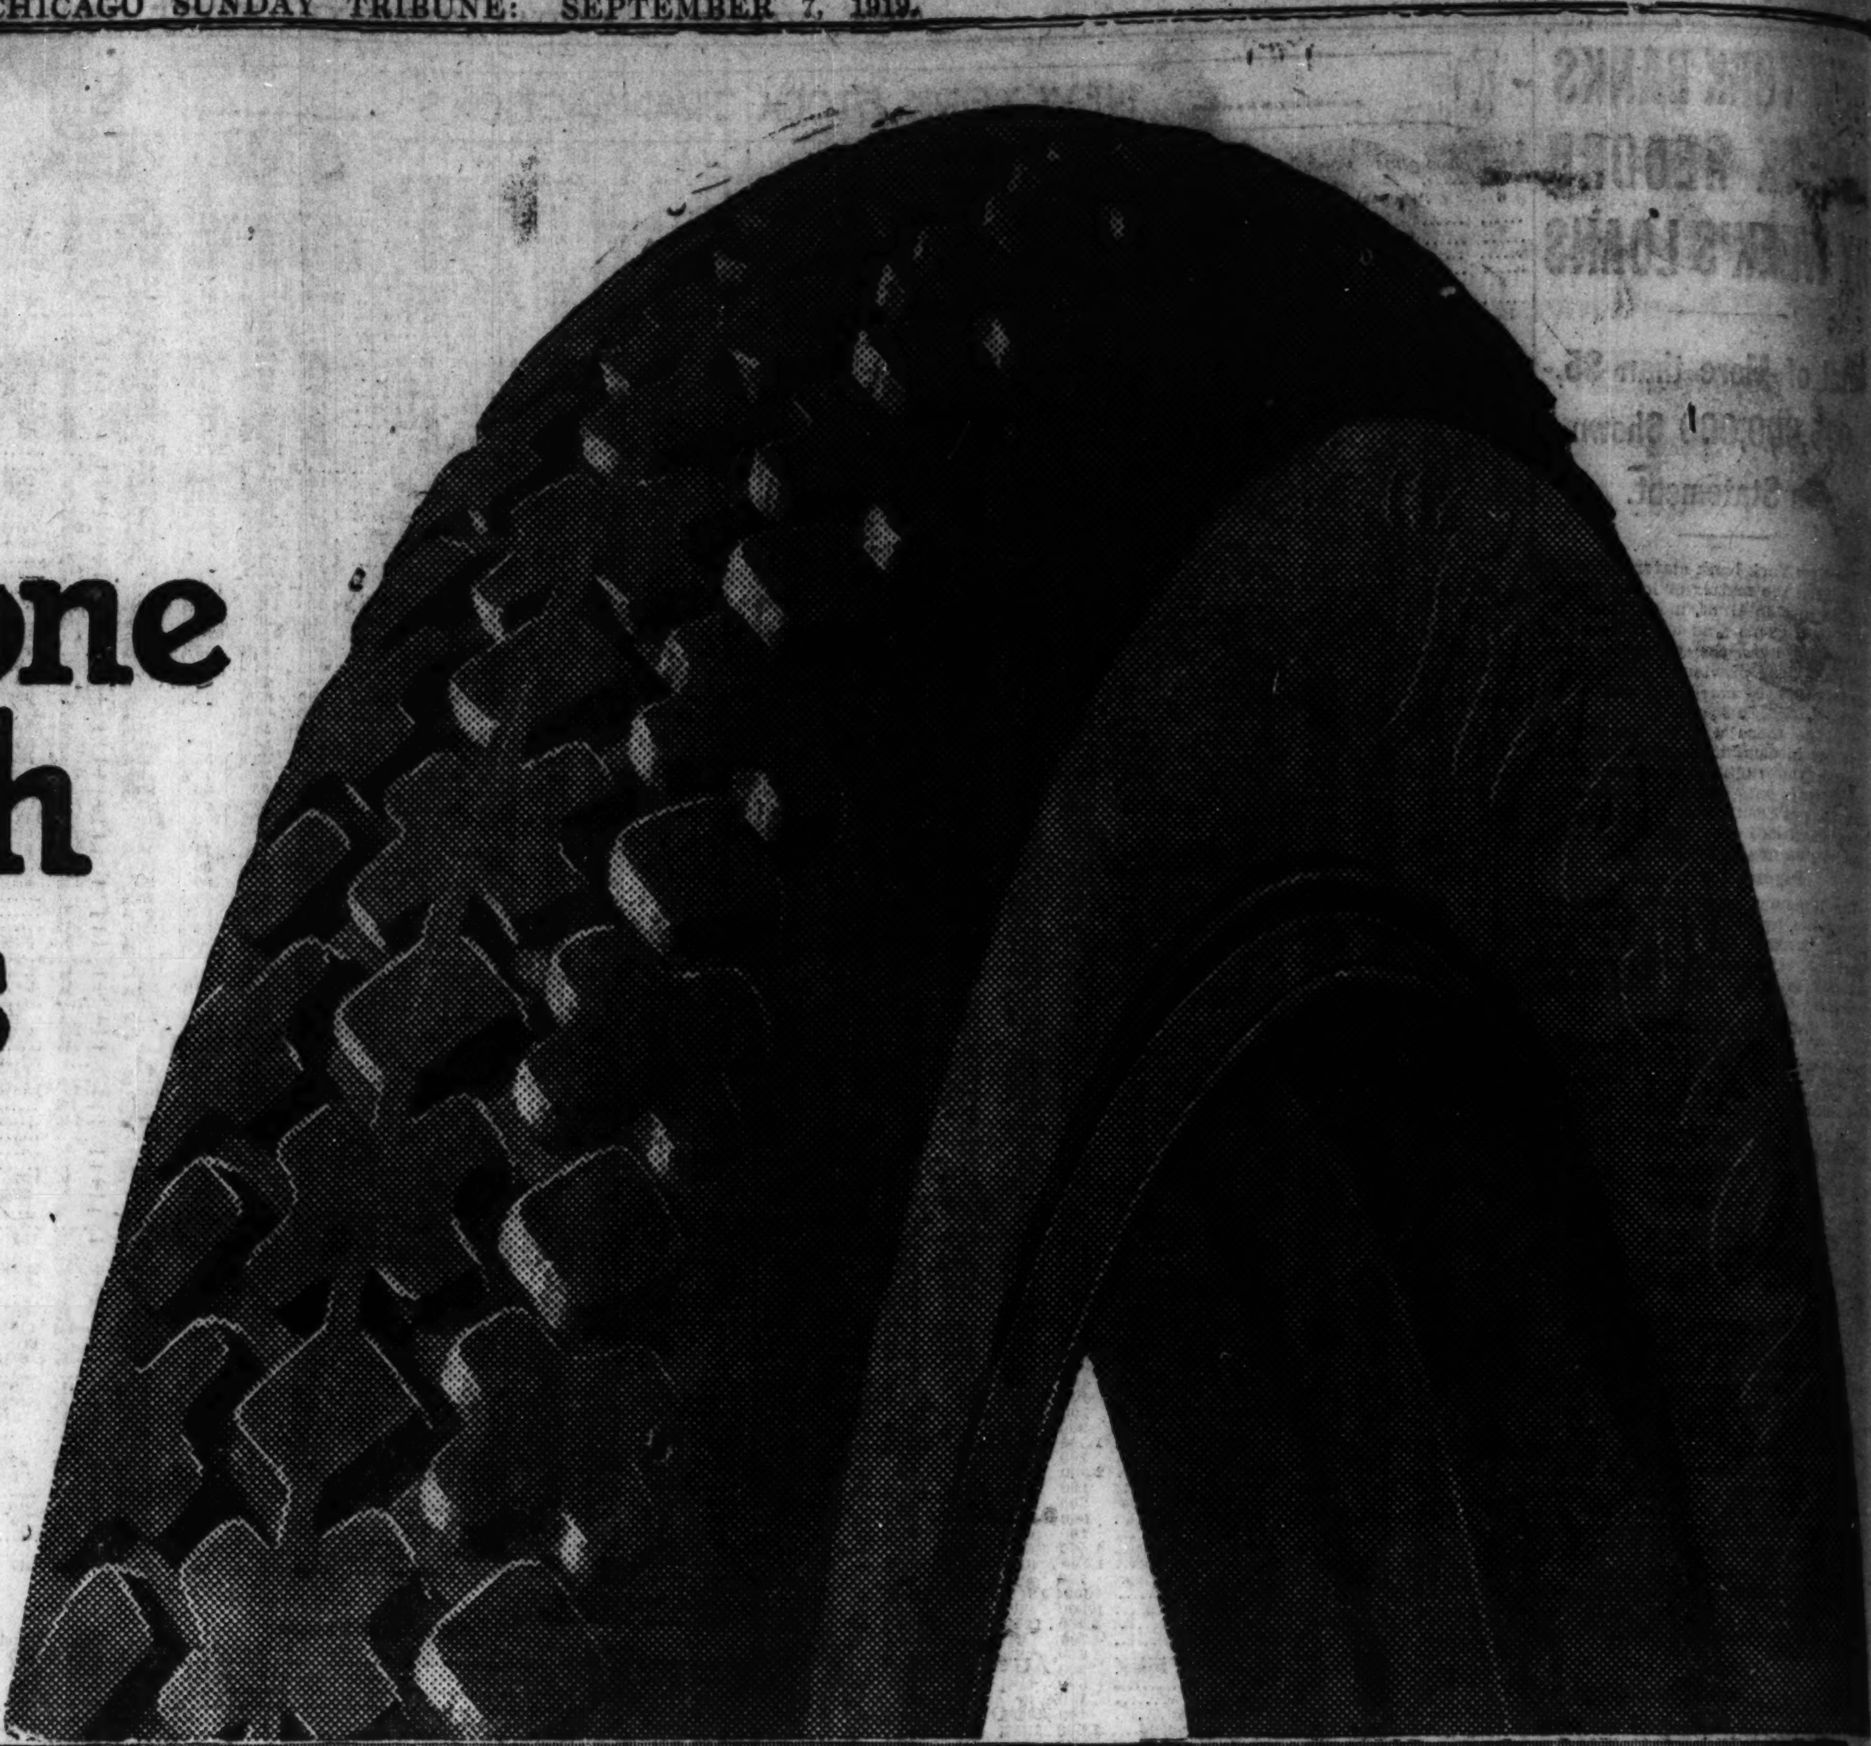
Why Firestone gives much more in this Cord Tire



THE dealers say there is no argument—the Firestone Cord, compared side by side with any other, sells itself.

No wonder. It is so much bigger. It is built to the largest standard oversize of the industry. For example—

It has much greater air capacity than the average.

It contains much more material than the average.

And it delivers extra mileage in proportion.

The thicker, heavier tread that looks and feels the part of its extra mileage is another reason why it sells itself.

So if you are not "in the know" about the mileage Firestone Cords are giving, don't buy another tire until you find out.

They are built like the Firestone Giant Cord Tire for trucks, only more supple, more resilient, tensioned exactly to the character of the car that their size is intended for.

This Cord is not only the largest standard oversize, but it has a thicker, heavier non-skid tread, good for thousands of extra miles of travel.

And that tread is as good as it looks from the standpoint of preventing skid, slide or spinning of wheels. It has a tractive power never before equalled in a rubber tread, yet it has no inclosed hollows or suction features to be a drag on speed or a drain on power.

The cords are treated and the tire is built by the same methods used in the Firestone Giant Cord. And this Giant Cord is one of the reasons why over half the truck tonnage of America is carried on Firestones.

That indicates what Firestone has done for Cord Tires.

The buying of tires for trucks is a cold-blooded business proposition. Mileage must be the answer. And Firestone gets the business.

Business men who operate trucks have Firestones on their passenger cars. Profit by the experience of those who make a business of buying tires.

Firestone has built an organization that is known as the dynamo of the industry.

Firestone has done the things that attract the men who think, and a Firestone man is so situated that he thinks clearly and intensively on the job. He is getting more out of life than the average man, his future is more assured.

Over 90% of the Firestone workers own stock in the Company. Firestone men have homes of their own in Firestone Park. There is a Firestone insurance fund, a Firestone bank, a Firestone clubhouse.

These are reasons why Firestone gives more.

Firestone men have established themselves in Singapore to buy rubber at a saving for you. They established a fabric mill to save more for you. They built a separate factory and designed special machinery for it to make a big saving for users of 3½-inch tires—enabling the main plant to concentrate on this new standard oversize Cord Tire.

Get the benefit of this Firestone man power and Firestone resources. Ask your dealer for Firestones—he has the size and type you want.

This is the Firestone year

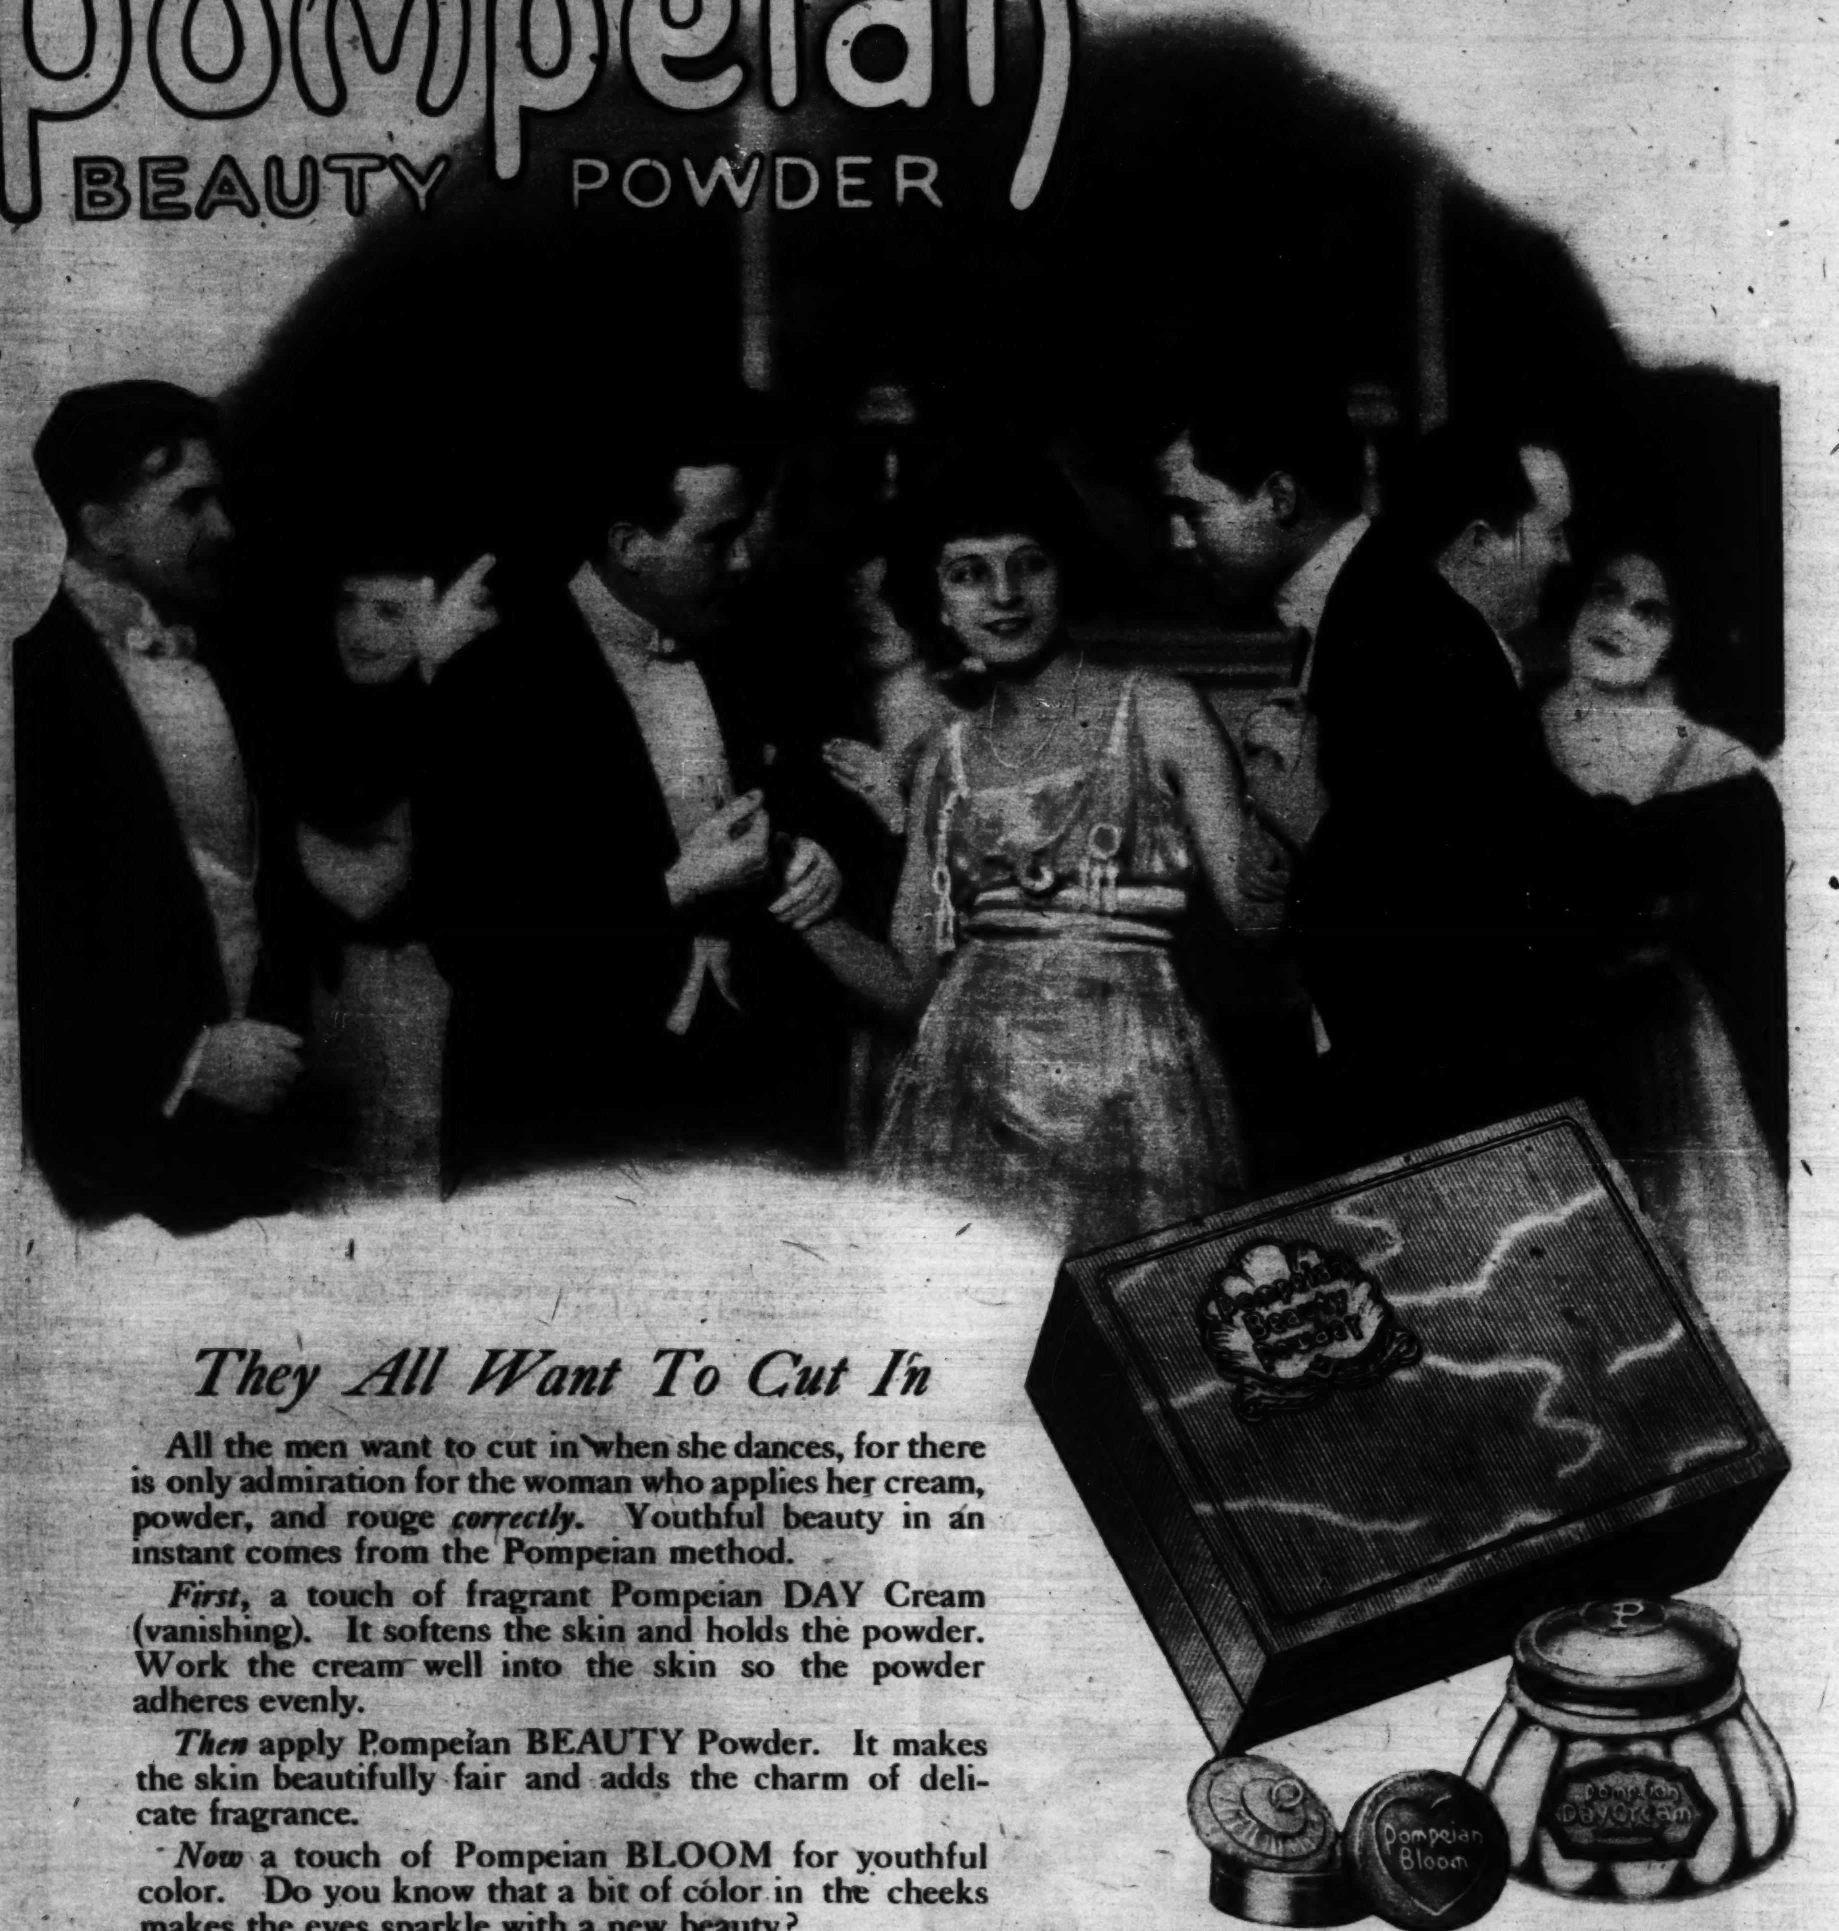
Pompeian
BEAUTY POWDER



They All Want To Cut In

All the men want to cut in when she dances, for there is only admiration for the woman who applies her cream, powder, and rouge correctly. Youthful beauty in an instant comes from the Pompeian method.

First, a touch of fragrant Pompeian DAY Cream (vanishing). It softens the skin and holds the powder. Work the cream well into the skin so the powder adheres evenly.

Then apply Pompeian BEAUTY Powder. It makes the skin beautifully fair and adds the charm of delicate fragrance.

Now a touch of Pompeian BLOOM for youthful color. Do you know that a bit of color in the cheeks makes the eyes sparkle with a new beauty?

Lastly, dust over again with the powder, in order to subdue the BLOOM. Presto! Such beauty and cool freshness in a few moments!

Note: Don't use too much BLOOM. Get a natural result.

These three preparations may be used separately or together (as above), as the "Complete Pompeian Beauty Toilette." Pompeian DAY Cream (vanishing), removes face shine. Pompeian BEAUTY Powder, a powder that stays on—flesh, white, brunette. Pompeian BLOOM, a rouge that won't break—light, dark, medium. At all druggists, 50c each. HAND BRUSH No. 400

Do you think enough of your hands to pay a dollar for the most wonderful hand and nail brush in the world? Just read here why a townsman of yours willingly paid a dollar for his and would even more willingly do so again:

> "A dollar Pro-phy-lac-tic Hand Brush has performed yeoman service on my hide for nearly four years. It has removed grime and proved first aid to skin invigoration with unabated efficiency all that time.
> "Today—this very morn, in fact—as I looked it over there was no sign of senile decay—no evidence of weakness—apparently it was there in all its youthful sturdiness.
> "I never analyzed its make-up nor pondered on the why of its vitality. But I do know that many other brushes, not nearly so satisfactory, came and went ere its coming. We never really got to know them, but this fellow has become a household friend, as permanent as my easy chair and reading lamp, and we have grown to regard it as a lifetime investment."

MARGUERITE SNOW is a name familiar to all of us since the time when this dark haired, brown eyed lady played the villainess in "The Million Dollar Mystery." In real life Miss Snow is Mrs. James Cruze, and she is the proud owner of a small replica of herself, aged about 4, called Julie. In 1892, at Savannah, Ga., Miss Snow first winked at life. She received most of her education in Denver, Colo. Her stage career started in 1907, with James O'Neill in "Monte Cristo." Her screen career began with Thanhouser, and for this company she played "The Million Dollar Mystery," doing the best work that she has ever done. We will see her shortly supporting Hale Hamilton in a Metro release. Miss Snow is 5 feet 5 inches tall, weighs 105 pounds, motors, rides, golfs, takes care of her baby, and gets supper on Thursday when the cook's out. I never met anyone who has known her who wasn't her friend.—MAE TINEE.

MADLAINE TRAVERSE is Fox's big girl. She's one of the few large women who know how to put grace and expression into their movements. She's an eastern girl. Born in Boston in 1887. Educated in Europe. Since 15 years of age she has been on the stage—more poetry—or screen. Her first work for the latter was done in the interests of Reliance. Then she went to Famous "For the Love of a Man," but Kleine proved "The Money Master." Then Pathé sought her in "The Closing Net." World, however, lured her with "Fruits of Desire," but Ivan showed her "The Sins of Ambition"—so she went to Fox, where she is now. She has dark hair and eyes, but I don't know her height and weight. That's something she doesn't tell.—MAE TINEE.

EUGENE O'BRIEN always gets a hand from matinée girls, with his sad, sweet smile and the general impression he manages to get across that he WILL smile no matter if a fox is gnawing at his vitals. He's soon to be starred in "The Perfect Lover" by Selznick. Plenty of feminine fans there be to swear he is perfect! Here are some facts concerning him: He was born in Colorado in 1884 and educated at the University of Colorado. He has been on the stage with the Frohmans, Elsie Ferguson, Ethel Barrymore, Margaret Illington, Ann Murdock, and Fritzi Scheff. His first screen work was done in Chicago for Essanay. His progress on the shadow stage has been rapid. He has played for Metro, Famous Players, Artcraft, Select, and now Selznick will feature him. He is 6 feet tall, weighs 160, has light brown hair and blue eyes and swims, rides and motors. If you must write him, address him in care of the Players' Club, New York.—MAE TINEE.

JUNE CAPRICÉ started her screen career with Fox, and there was a time when some folks thought she might be a second Mary Pickford. With the mouths, however, the resemblance rather faded and her work has proved itself not on the same order at all. Miss Caprice was born in Arlington, Mass., in 1899 and educated in Boston. Her first picture was "Caprice of the Mountains." After that she was featured in a number of pictures that called for curls and blue eyes and some one who could run fast and climb a fence when occasion demanded. Most of her work has been done for Fox. At the present time she is with Albert Capellani. She last appeared in "O Boy." Miss Caprice is a little girl 5 feet 2 inches tall and she only weighs 105 pounds—but she can swim, ride, and play tennis with the best of them—MAE TINEE.

LIKE A CUBIST PAINTING—THE STOCK OF AMERICAN WAR MATERIALS IN FRANCE—This photograph, taken from an aeroplane flying at a low altitude, gives an incomplete idea of the enormous amount of war machinery which the French government is to acquire from the United States army. The materials include lumber, oil tanks, wagons, field kitchens, ammunition carts, caissons, automobiles, ambulances, railway cars and engines, canvas, tents, etc. The sum has not been determined, but it is estimated that the French will pay for this material between one and two billions of francs.

The Bedspring Luxurious

THE ORDINARY kinds of woven wire, or coil, or box bedsprings are not designed right, from the standpoint of the needs of the human body.

These ordinary bedsprings demand that the body should conform to their limitations, whereas the correctly designed bedspring should conform to the lines of the body.

The only bedspring which fully meets all the demands of the human anatomy insofar as healthful, restful, and relaxed sleep is concerned is the De Luxe Bedspring. The mattress or the bed have nothing to do with it.

The De Luxe conforms absolutely to the lines of the body and supports the lighter parts of the body equally with the heavier.

New Way to Wash Your Face Beautifies Your Complexion

Beauty specialists agree that the secret of a perfect complexion is a thoroughly clean skin. A specialist has perfected a new substance, Ara-Mara, which is not only excellent for washing the face, but it cannot injure the most delicate complexion. It will not, cannot grow hair. All you do is to gently massage it into the skin and wash with plain warm water. It not only cleanses thoroughly, but it lightens the complexion much better than lemon juice or face bleach. It is surprising to see how fresh, clear and wholesome the skin becomes, even after only one proper treatment. Those who use it declare it has done more real good than any complexion treatment they ever used. It's a wonderful treatment for enlarged, clogged pores and irritations. It certainly is a great blessing to those who are afraid of wrinkles and who have dull, sallow, lifeless complexions. You can always get Ara-Mara at any big store. If you live out of town and your home dealer has not got it, you can order fifty cents' worth of Ara-Mara by mail of Herbert Roystone, 16 East 18th Street, New York.

The Best Way to Use Rouge

The specialist who created the wonderful La-may Face Powder has invented a new rouge. The rouge is inside the puff. All you do is to rub the puff on your face. It comes through the puff just as you need it. It goes on splendidly and stays on the face until you wash it off. The puff is in a dainty metal box. The box cannot break and the rouge will not crumble like the old-fashioned kind. This newly invented rouge is called La-may (French, Rouge L'Ame). It gives a beautiful color that looks natural under the strongest light. There are two colors—medium and dark. The fifty-cent package will last six months, yet the box is small enough to fit your purse. When you use this pure, harmless rouge and see how much more convenient it is and how much better it stays on, you will understand why thousands of women say it is the best they have ever used. Because La-may Rouge is so new, your dealer may not have it yet, but he can easily get it. If your dealer refuses to get you a package, you may order by mail from Herbert Roystone, 16 E. 18th Street, New York. Save this notice.

Radium and Beauty

FROM the land of fairest complexions comes the finest of face creams. Out of the experience of English women comes the most grateful praise of Radior Poudre de Velour.

Shall one attribute this to the exquisite purity of its ingredients? Or to the delicate suggestion of its perfume? Or to the content of real radium—which acts upon the skin so that it blooms forth in fullest youthful loveliness?

But reasons are unfeminine. It is enough that here at last is a face cream that serves beauty gently and completely and worthily. Choose Radior Vanishing Cream and Radior Face Powder! They also combine ingredients of highest purity with the health-building, beautifying power of radium.

Successful Cake

Flour is more important than luck in baking cake and pastry. The use of bread flour causes most cake failures, as Domestic Scientists know. Special cake flour with a great part of the heavy gluten removed makes such cakes as cannot be made at all with bread flour. Roxane Cake Flour is just the softest, lightest, whitest part of the wheat. A bushel (60 lbs.) of wheat yields only 10½ lbs. of Roxane, and the wheat is the finest for home use of any grown—soft, southern Indiana winter wheat. Such flour makes amazing cakes. We will send you, in care of your grocer, an introductory sample of

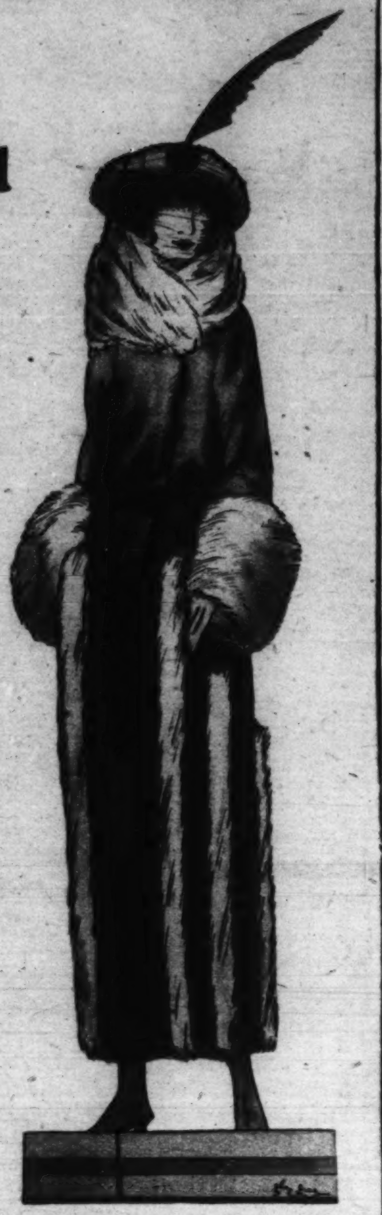
$5 Invested in Vogue

a tiny fraction of your loss on one ill-chosen gown

Will Save You $500



French blue duvetyn—gray squirrel—blue silk cords with a touch of metal—there you have one of the newest of the new coats. If you don't want the coat as it stands, the lesson of it is that collars are huge, fur is used in strips, and belts do things unheard of until this very season.

THE instant the war was over, Paris began to dance, and, curiously enough, the dance has determined the mode of even the most sedate autumn street frock. In repose, the silhouette remains slim. But the instant one moves—walking, dancing, crossing a room—it must have grace and flow of line.

How can you get that floating effect? How should you stand when you wear it? How can you know the favored colors? How can you assure yourself added distinction of dress and save yourself from misguided or haphazard buying?

The secret is not more money. It is Vogue's authoritative, advance fashion advice.

The gown you buy and never wear is the really expensive gown. Gloves, boots, hats that miss being exactly what you want are the ones that cost more than you can afford.

AFTER SEPTEMBER 1

CROWN PRINCE'S PERISCOPE EXHIBITED AT WEST POINT—This towering periscope was used by the former German crown prince while he viewed the battle of Verdun from a remote and safe position. The plate on the periscope reads: "Captured by the Third Division, 3rd Army Corps, at Montfaucon, Oct., 1918." The relic was displayed at West Point during the final review of cadets before the breaking up of the summer camp.

SHIP TIPS TO 73.8 ANGLE AND RIGHTS ITSELF—A ship usually capsizes if it tips to an angle of 60 degrees. This photograph, taken at the extreme point of the tipping, 73.8 degrees, of the "Lake Fugard" when it was launched at Buffalo. It slid from its docks, tipped, and, aided by rebounding waters, righted itself in seven seconds. The vessel was one of the last of the emergency fleet boats launched.

THE TEENIE WEENIES.

NO MORE TOMATOES FOR THE DUNCE.

BY WM. DONAHEY.

THE tomato plant the Teenie Weenies had set out early in the summer had grown to a very great size and a huge tomato hung near the top.

"I think our tomato is about ripe and we ought to pick it soon," said the Old Soldier one morning after a trip to the garden.

"There's no time like the present," said the General. "And when the Cook is ready we can bring it over."

"You can get it here any time you like," put in the Cook. "I'll be ready tomorrow morning if that time will suit you."

"Oh, s-s-say!" exclaimed the Dunce. "Wait until the next day, because the Cowboy and I are going out to hunt caterpillars. We want to get some skins for fur caps next winter."

"Well, Dunce, I guess you'll have to put off your hunting trip until later, for that tomato ought to be brought up so the Cook can put it in cans for the winter," said the General.

Bright and early the next morning the little folks set out for the garden where they proceeded to pick the tomato. The tomato was very ripe and it was necessary to lower it to the ground with ropes. The Sailor climbed up the plant with a hatchet, while the Dunce followed with the rope. The two Teenie Weenies were good climbers, so it took them but a short time to reach the tomato.

The Sailor climbed to a branch above the tomato where he could tie the rope onto the stem, and just as he reached for the rope, which the Dunce carried over his arm, he saw a great tomato worm crawling towards the Dunce.

"Look out, Dunce!" he shouted.

"W-w-w-where? What is it?" asked the Dunce, and turning his head he saw the big worm."

"O-o-oh, g-g-g-gosh!" he yelled, and in his hurry to slide out of the way the poor Dunce caught his foot in the rope and pitched headlong toward the ground.

Fortunately he was able to grab a lower branch, which broke his fall, and if he hadn't caught it he might have been seriously injured.

The Sailor struck the worm over the head with his hatchet and knocked it to the ground where the rest of the Teenie Weenies soon made short work of it.

"Well, I'm through with tomatoes for good," said the Dunce when he found he had not been hurt by the fall. "No more tomatoes for me."

"You'll eat 'em, won't you?" asked the Cook.

"Well, yes, I'll eat 'em," answered the Dunce, "but you can bet your last raisin seed I'm through climbin' tomato plants. J-j-j-jimminie f-f-fish-hooks, that worm looked as big as a rabbit."

THE TEACHER FOLD-A-WAY DOLL.

It Couldn't Have Happened Again to Any One But Natalie.

MISS NATALIE CHAMBERLAIN wiped her rose red lips, sipped a farewell drop of water, and beckoned to the waitress of the little Twenty-eighth street restaurant.

"My check, please," she requested. The waitress nodded and made it out.

"Ninety-five cents, miss," she announced. She waited for an instant for her tip of something over 10 per cent. She did not get it. Miss Natalie Chamberlain's face had turned for the instant quite as red as her rose red lips. She fumbled nervously in her little purse.

"Dear me," she exclaimed, "what am I to do?"

"That desk there," said the waitress, "is the place to pay the check."

"I know where to pay the check," wailed Miss Chamberlain; "the difficulty is, I haven't anything to pay it with."

An instant later she found herself hastening toward the cashier's desk, the cynosure, so she supposed, of all eyes in the eating place.

"I—I only have a 5 cent piece," she explained, still rosy red, to the masculine cashier. "I—I was sure that I had a five dollar bill or more."

The cashier looked her over. Miss Chamberlain was without jewels, for simplicity in dress was her strong card, after all. The cashier told himself she was a stunner, no mistake. However, business was business. The little Twenty-eighth street restaurant was on the outskirts of the Tenderloin, and it was not the first time that it had fed the denizens of that locality for nothing. Of late there had been a deluge of dead beats, both sexes. The cashier was financially interested in the business. He had made up his mind that in the matter of dead beats the camel's back was already put to an overheavy strain. Miss Chamberlain was the last straw.

"Now, that's all right," said the cashier of the restaurant; "that's all right, but that sort of thing don't go here. Ninety-five cents' worth, eh? Say, you! You must think we're easy marks, eh? Say, you fork over that 95 cents, or——"

Miss Natalie Chamberlain flashed a belligerent look at the cashier—a glance that would have shriveled up an ordinary man.

Then she spoke. "My name," she said, "is Chamberlain. Miss Chamberlain. I reside in Yonkers. I am telling you the simple truth. I supposed that I had ten dollars. I have practically nothing. If you will give me a piece of paper I will write down my name and my address. I shall mail you a dollar bill this very night. I——"

She stopped. The cashier was not an ordinary man and he had not been shriveled up by her preliminary glance, nor was he convinced by her simple statement.

"Aw," he insisted, "what you givin' us?"

He came around from behind his desk and stepped up to Miss Natalie Chamberlain and took her by the arm. He led her ostentatiously to the front of the store and pushed her through the front door.

"Now, you git!" he yelled. His voice might be heard for half a block. Miss Chamberlain remembered that much. The rest was vague. She had stood somewhere in a doorway for half an hour, trembling, sobbing as though her heart would break; hysterical, unstrung. Then she pulled herself together, used her nickel for car fare to the Grand Central, found her ticket, and went home. For she was Miss Natalie Chamberlain of Yonkers. She was the daughter of Peter V. Chamberlain—and everybody knew Peter V. up there. And as a matter of fact, she didn't belong in the Twenty-eighth street restaurant. She had stepped in there because she was in a hurry. Natalie was always in a hurry. It had looked neat and quiet. And as a matter of fact, it was neat and quiet. The cashier, too, was ordinarily neat and quiet. But, he had jumped at conclusions, and the beast in him had come, unjustly, to the fore. He had been swindled until he was tired. But Miss Chamberlain couldn't know that. All that she knew was that she had been terribly disgraced; horribly insulted. The incident had left a mark upon her never to be effaced—she has never forgotten it.

And when it was too late, there occurred to her things that she might have done—she could have telephoned; could have left her leather purse; her coat; her umbrella—anything to appease the wrath of the contemptible cashier and to act as security for the bill. But, of course, she hadn't thought about it—and that was another trouble with Natalie; she didn't think enough.

"At any rate," she told herself, "I won't send him the 95 cents and I will let him think that I meant to swindle him. If I had the chance I'd do it again. But I must never, never go anywhere any more without being sure that I go where I'm known, and I must never, never go out any more without being sure that I have lots of money in my pocket. It's a good lesson to me, after all."

Well, that experience of Miss Chamberlain's happened some two years ago. There were times when she remembered it and shuddered, times when she forgot its horror, and only laughed; times when its memory was absent months at a time. In two years in the life of Miss Chamberlain things happened; things of more importance than ejection from a restaurant; there were dances; motor car whizzes across a continent; bridge whist; cooking classes; Lenten devotions—so very many things to think about, and, after all, Miss Chamberlain thought about a good many things.

It was while the Chamberlains were at Spring Lake that Natalie touched her mother on the arm one evening.

"I've got to go up to New York tomorrow," she announced. Her mother acquiesced. If it came to such a pass that Natalie had "got" to go, there was nothing to be said. Natalie went. She made a flying trip, shopped for dear life, and put off dinner until the last moment.

She went into Raphael's, on Sixth avenue. Now, she didn't know Raphael's as New Yorkers knew it. She had never even heard of Raphael's before; but she took Raphael's on the strength of its good looks. She was making no mistake. The New Yorkers who patronized Raphael's sought the best, and found it.

"This is all right," she said to herself, as she noted crowded tables, crowded with well dressed men and women; people of her kind. "I want something good, and lots of it." Miss Natalie was living in an age when the virtue of good food was properly understood; when Miss Natalies all over the world were more beautiful than ever because of sun and air and appetite. The angels don't eat angel food today.

Raphael's was crowded. She took the only vacant seat in the place, opposite a tall young man, smooth shaven. Natalie glanced at this young man out of the corner of her eyes. She knew men when she saw them and she was glad to note, without any particular occasion for it, that the young man was of her kind.

"Everything on the bill of fare, almost," Miss Natalie whispered to the waiter; "my, but I'm hungry!"

The young man opposite was evidently not hungry. Before him were ranged a large cup of coffee, some crackers and some cheese—a simple, decent, funereal lunch.

"U—m—m," thought Miss Natalie, when her waiter got busy, "u—m—m, such mock turtle soup! Such an oyster cocktail!"

She was right. Raphael knew how. She had one of his soft shell crabs—a thing that melted in her mouth; a sweetbread; peas from the garden of the gods. And salad, such salad!

In the midst of it, Miss Natalie Chamberlain became aware of the fact that the young man opposite was looking at her. He was doing it in a very decent way, for when she looked at him he turned aside his head. He was not staring, at least he didn't stare when she looked. But, nevertheless, Miss Natalie's sense of propriety came to her aid.

"You'd better stop that, young man," she thought to herself. And she did stop it, herself, by degrees. By degrees, it became quite manifest to the young man, from Miss Natalie's manner, that Miss Natalie was not there to be stared at. She was there to eat. And when the fact was finally borne in upon the young man that she considered him a bit rude, though she didn't, he took a hint and buried his nose, aquiline and regular, in his daily paper. But—and she took quick note of this—he spent a great deal of time over his large cup of coffee and his crackers and cheese.

"Anything else, mademoiselle," finally asked the waiter. He liked young women with large appetites; they were apt to be liberal. Natalie held out her hand for the check, for she had noted on the menu Raphael's command: "Please pay at the desk." Raphael had adopted democratic American methods in his business.

"Nothing more," said Miss Natalie Chamberlain. She moistened her fingers delicately in a finger bowl and started to draw on her gloves. The waiter waited.

"O," said Miss Chamberlain. She plunged her hand into her wrist bag to find a coin. There was a half dollar there. It was too large.

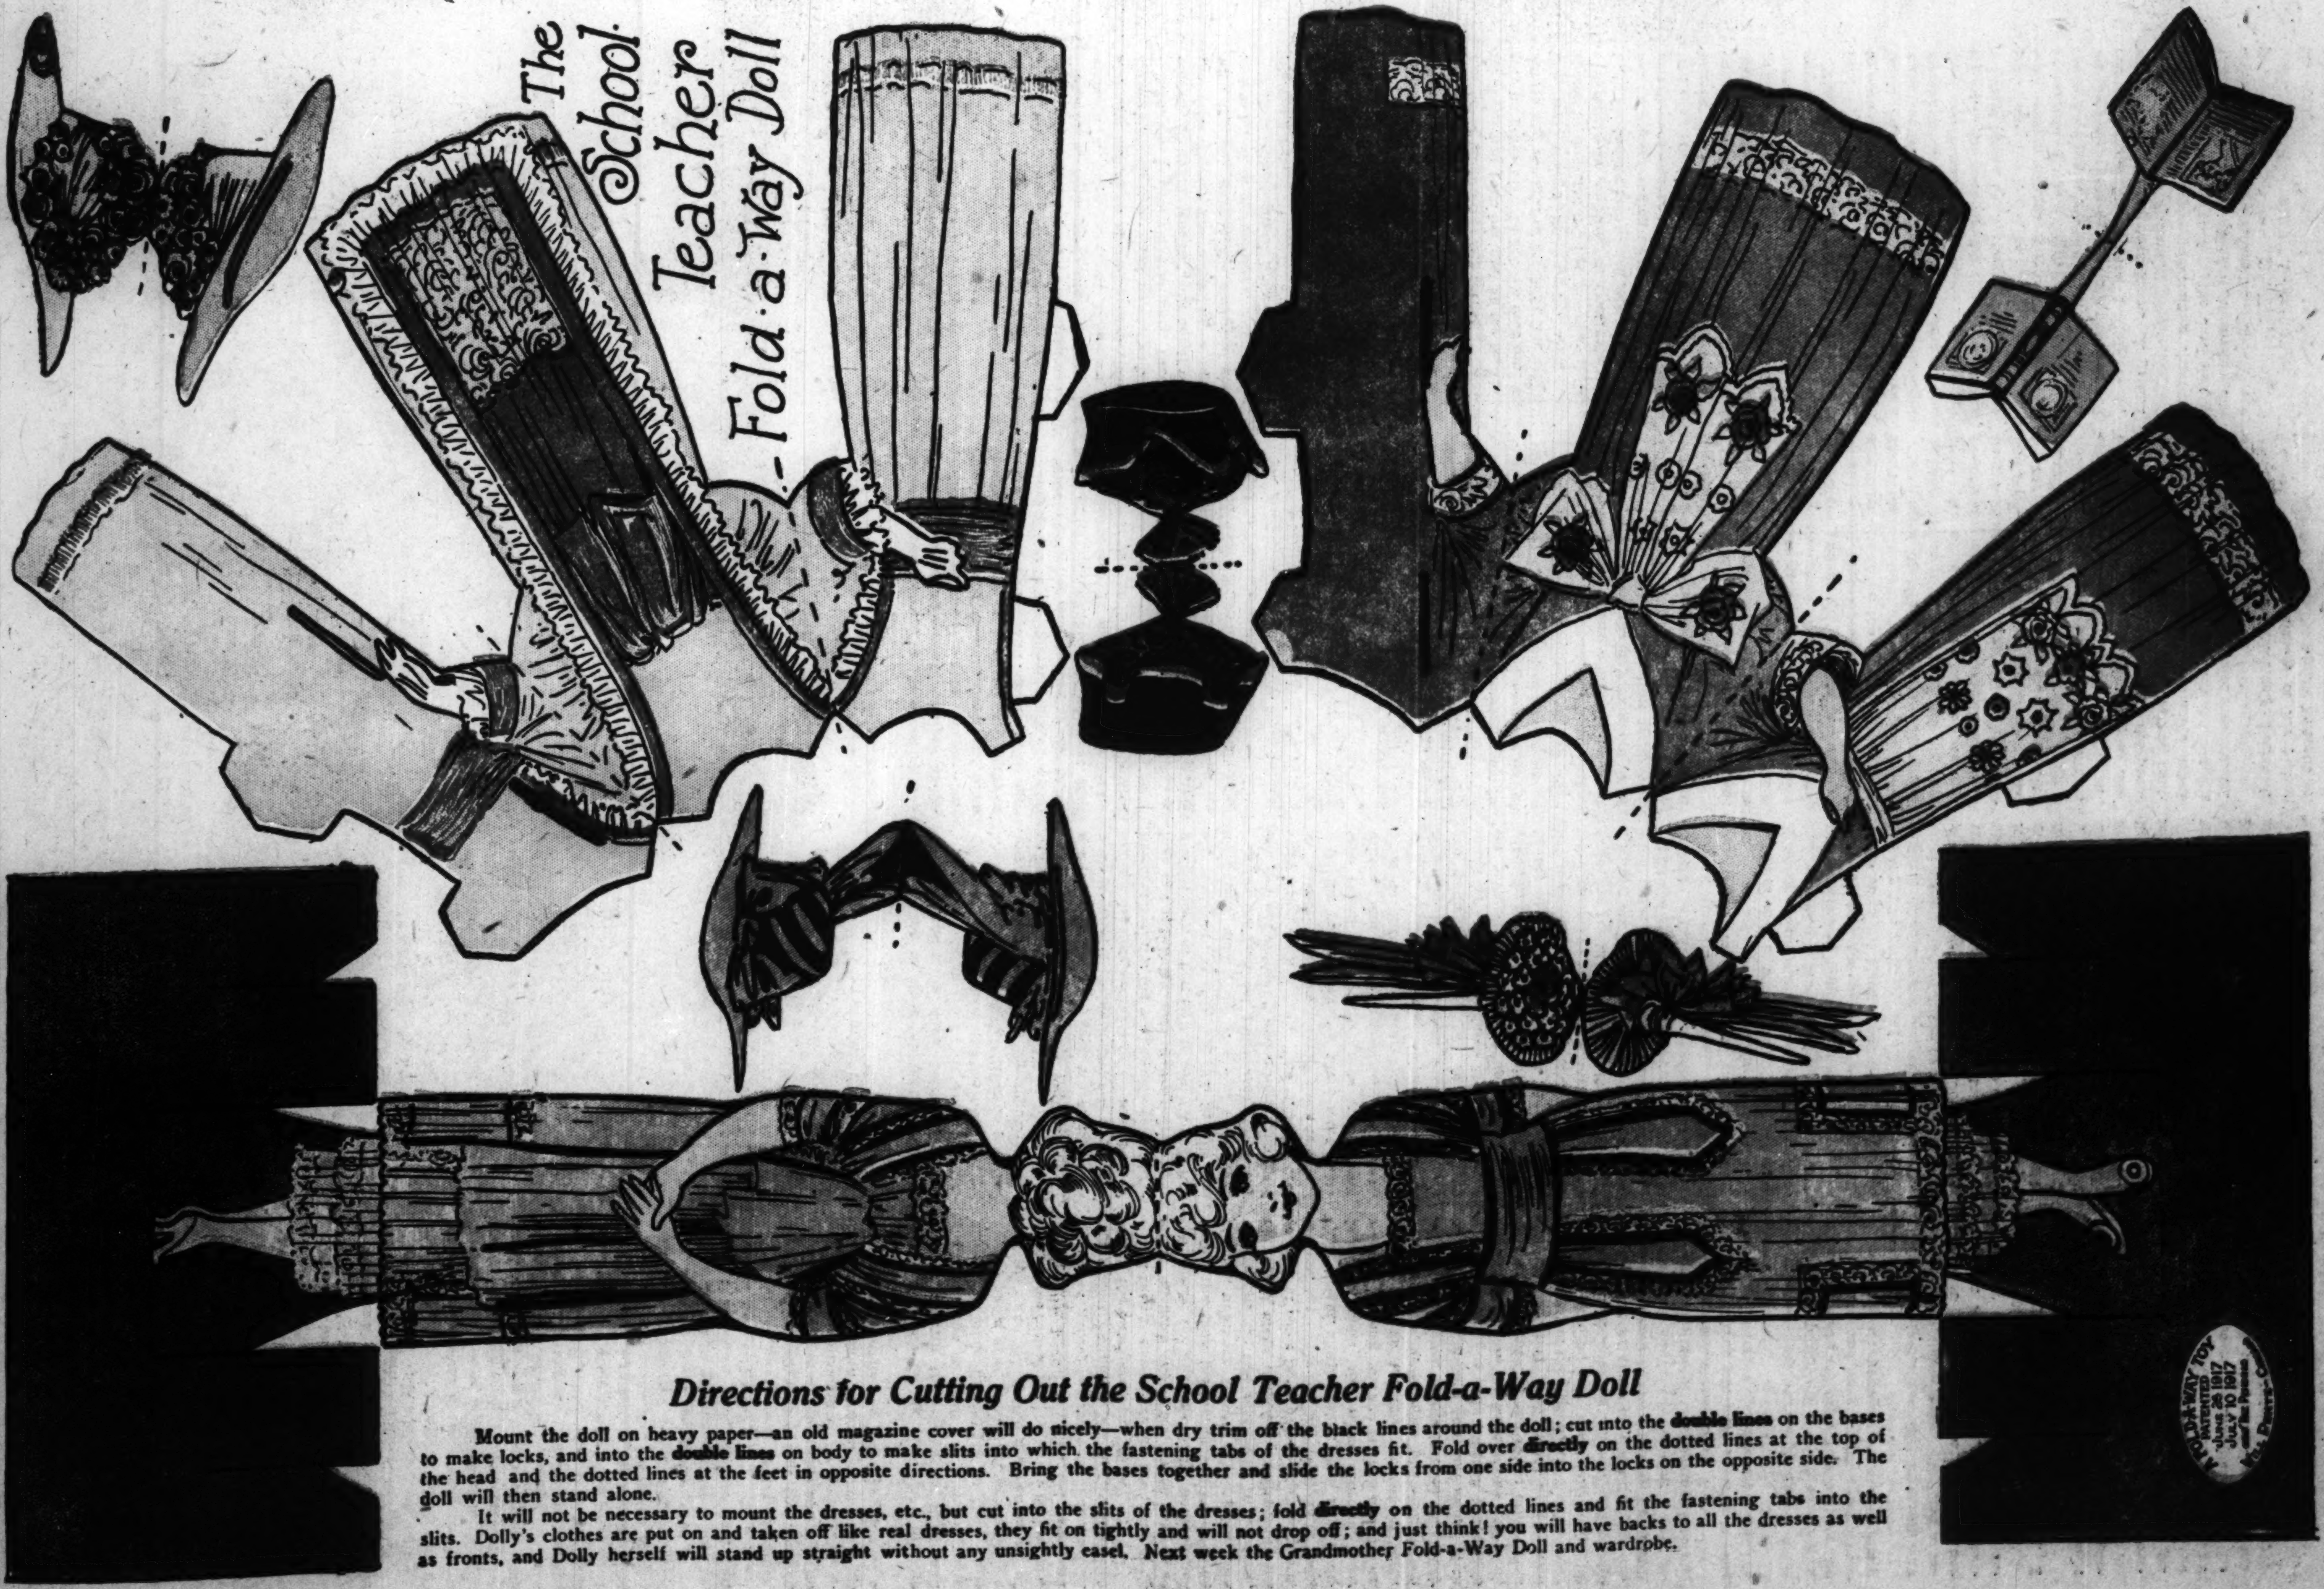
"I've got to get some change," she told the waiter. The waiter nodded. Miss Chamberlain casually kept on searching.

And, suddenly, horror clutched her very soul. "Good heavens," she exclaimed. What had happened? Nothing, save that the cycle had rolled round. History had repeated itself.

"I forgot—forgot that I paid for that silk at Satterthwaite's," wailed Miss Chamberlain to herself, "50 cents. It's all I've got."

She sat, stiff and straight, and staring. In fact, she was staring at the young man opposite, though she did not know it. He knew it, and, supposing it was by way of rebuke on her part, he kept his head well in his newspaper. She shivered. The whole terrific memory of that Twenty-eighth street

The School Teacher Fold-a-Way Doll



Directions for Cutting Out the School Teacher Fold-a-Way Doll

Mount the doll on heavy paper—an old magazine cover will do nicely—when dry trim off the black lines around the doll; cut into the double lines on the bases to make locks, and into the double lines on body to make slits into which the fastening tabs of the dresses fit. Fold over directly on the dotted lines at the top of the head and the dotted lines at the feet in opposite directions. Bring the bases together and slide the locks from one side into the locks on the opposite side. The doll will then stand alone.

It will not be necessary to mount the dresses, etc., but cut into the slits of the dresses; fold directly on the dotted lines and fit the fastening tabs into the slits. Dolly's clothes are put on and taken off like real dresses, they fit on tightly and will not drop off; and just think! you will have backs to all the dresses as well as fronts, and Dolly herself will stand up straight without any unsightly easel. Next week the Grandmother Fold-a-Way Doll and wardrobe.

episode came back to her. She looked about her. There was not a soul she knew in sight. The worst of it was that Raphael didn't know her. If it had been at Del's it wouldn't have made any difference.

Staring, her eyes encountered her dinner check, lying face up on the table. It was for $2.35. And she had but 50 cents. But—but . . .

Suddenly, as she stared, the idea came to her. Alongside of her check was the young man's check, its face turned down. The young man had been eating coffee, cheese, crackers. His check couldn't be for more than 50 cents. Hastily she seized the menu and added up, for dear life. The young man had been dawdling over 40 cents' worth of food.

"The very thing," she said to herself. "The only way," her soul wailed inside of her. If there were other ways they did not occur to her. Nothing occurred to her but the horror of the episode of months ago.

"Now," she whispered. The waiter was at the other end of the room. The young man's head was deep in the stock market. Quick as a flash, she turned her check over on its face, picked up his check and started majestically down the aisle. Her face beamed. It would come out all right. The young man would think she had done him, but she would send a check to Raphael and Raphael could explain matters to the young man later. The young man, doubtless, was a frequent customer. Her waiter seemed to know him well. She approached the desk.

Confidently, she laid down before the cashier the young man's check and 50 cents.

The cashier turned the check up on its face and . . . waited. So did Natalie. "My change," please, she exclaimed at last.

"Your change," exclaimed the cashier, "why, that half dollar won't pay this check."

He exhibited it to her. She nearly fainted. The young man's check was not for 40 cents. No, it was a check for $3.85. Oh, yes, the young man had had a large cup and cheese and crackers. Of course, he had. He had finished up with those. That was only his finish. But he had had other things: mock turtle, broiled chicken—everything, including salad, oh, always Raphael's salad. The young man never missed that or anything that was good in the eating line. Oh, no!

"Three dollars and eighty-five cents, please," said the cashier. He was different from the Twenty-eighth street cashier. Not so rude, but infinitely harder to face. And the people round about. Her kind of people.

"Oh," exclaimed Natalie in terror, "and I have but 50 cents."

"Three eighty-five," persisted the cashier, pleasantly. "Madam, you are keeping the line waiting."

Natalie blundered terribly. "But," she exclaimed, "coffee, crackers, cheese, that's all—this check is wrong. They are only 40 cents, that's all." She hardly knew what she was saying. She certainly hadn't intended to misrepresent. She was in a deep hole and she didn't know how to get out.

"Oh, is there a mistake?" asked the clerk. He called the waiter. The waiter spread out his hands.

"Forty cents," exclaimed the waiter. "Never! Never! Two dollars thirty-five. That is the amount."

"Step aside just for a moment, madam," said the clerk. He pressed a button. "The old game, Julius," he whispered to the waiter. "I guess we're stung again."

Then just as Natalie was about to burst into tears, she stopped. For she saw the young man come striding down the aisle to pay his check, with a wad of crisp bills in his hand. It was his turn to be surprised when he looked at his check.

"Two thirty-five," he exclaimed. "Why, I certainly ate more than two thirty-five."

The clerk beckoned to him with an air all clerks assume toward well known customers, and nodded toward the girl who stood waiting, as she had waited once before, for disgrace to claim her for its own.

And then the thing that was the climax of humiliation, happened to Natalie Chamberlain. The young man never glanced at her at all. He simply peeled off seven crisp new one dollar bills and passed them over to the clerk.

"I'll pay both checks, Johnny," he announced in a half whisper. He did it. Natalie looked on with burning cheeks. The tears sprang to her eyes. For the young man was bearing down upon her.

"Now, don't you worry," he commanded. "I understand. I've been in all sorts of pickles myself. Don't worry, Miss—Miss—"

She clutched him by the arm hysterically. "You give me your name and address, sir," said she, "and—and my father will send you a check at once, tonight. Your name and address, Mr. ——"

The young man waved his hand. "Hadn't we better step outside," he suggested; "we're attracting overmuch attention where we are."

She followed him. "My name and address?" he said, with a new and gentle quaver in his voice. "My name and address? Do you know, it has occurred to me, Miss, that it may be up to you to give me yours?"

"And—er—" added Miss Chamberlain, "during September we are down at Spring Lake for the entire month. Now you won't have me arrested, will you?"

"That reminds me," he returned, in a business-like way. "My card. Good day, Miss Chamberlain, good day."

She didn't look at the card until she was on the Pennsylvania ferry boat. Then she glanced shyly at it.

"Frederick J. Coppersmith," it said. "Member of the Stock Exchange. 10 Wall."

"I wonder," sighed Miss Chamberlain, looking at the card, "whether I shall forget this episode any more easily than I did the first. "Anyway," she went on, suiting the action to the word, "I'll tuck you in my pocketbook just to remember by."

. . . .

And that was two years ago also. Two years later, more or less, young Mrs. Frederick J. Coppersmith tripped into the presence of her young husband. She was booted and bonneted for the street.

"Frederick," she said, "you remember before you married me, you made me promise that I'd never go anywhere without having plenty of money in my pocket."

Frederick J. Coppersmith nodded. "I should think so," he admitted.

"Well," said Natalie, turning her purse inside out, without result, "I'm going somewhere, shopping, Frederick, dear, and I want to keep my promise."

Frederick grinned. He had been flimflammed, all right, he saw at once. He felt in his pockets. "By George, Natalie," he said, "I'm blest if I've got a cent of money in my clothes. What'll I do. Oh, I know; I'll draw a check."

He drew it and she watched him. He passed it to her. She leaned down and kissed him. "You know, dear," she thanked him, "from the very first, you've always been my check mate, haven't you?"

Aunt Berth

by Oney Fred Sweet

ON a summer afternoon, when vegetation, having reached the limit of its ambition, was surrendering itself to the yellowing process of the sun and to the inroads of still ambitious bugs, Aunt Berth was engaged in washing the dishes for the twenty thousandth time. There were more dirty dishes than usual. The family was taking care of some of the Chautauqua folks who preferred a private home to the Pioneer house.

In the homes where there was no Aunt Berth the green curtain shades had been drawn and the doors had been locked. Prairie Junction housewives were either already inside the brown tent that was stretched in the vacant lot across from the creamery, or were—black silk waisted, white gloved, parasoled, fan equipped—making their way along the weed lined walks to the canvas inclosure.

Aunt Berth was not among them. She was swatting flies, carrying the melting butter to the cellar, scraping crumbs from the chair on which had sat Philo T. Ellsworth, who, before the afternoon had passed, would deliver his inspirational lecture.

Aunt Berth had missed so many things that the desire to go anywhere had been dulled. She had started to pour hot water over the cups and saucers when she was interrupted by the slight slam of the front door screen. The lady saxophone player, one of the temporary guests, had returned from the Chautauqua grounds.

"What are you doing here?" inquired the musician. "I thought everybody was down to the tent. O, I seldom stay after we finish our prelude. I know Mr. Ellsworth's lecture by heart."

Stella, the saxophone player, was a heavy woman. She wound her handkerchief around her little finger and wiped the perspiration from her chin.

"You look tired," hastened Aunt Berth. "Let me get you a drink of water."

"Not on your life, you won't! I'll get it myself. You're the prize errand runner around this place; I noticed that this noon. Your sister and the kids are down to the program? I thought so. I guess they don't miss anything. She's given you a home, I suppose. She's taken pity on you in your old age and given you a home. Say let me have an apron. Let me help you out a little."

"It's been a long time since I've done anything like this," sighed Stella, relieving herself of her incased instrument and her hat, "but I wouldn't mind it in a house of my own. I've been working in instrumental acts so long that they say I am a 'whiz' at that, but I guess I'm not much good at anything else."

"A 'whiz'?" puzzled Aunt Berth, in whose vocabulary there was no slang.

"Good at it, you understand. I'm new on the circuit, just filling in for a few weeks. I only play the saxophone in the instrumental prelude—one classical number that nobody cares for, and then 'The Rosary' and 'Silver Threads Among the Gold,' sure fire stuff."

"'Sure fire'?" questioned the slangless Aunt Berth.

"Ain't it the truth?"

"And you're here today and some other town tomorrow?"

"Ain't it the truth?"

"I don't believe I could stand all those train rides," doubted Aunt Berth.

"You don't think anything," remarked the saxophone player sadly, "except what that sister of yours tells you to think. I saw it all there at the table this noon. She's got you so bunked that you think you'd starve to death if you ever quite slaving for her. And as long as she keeps you in the gray background she knows that she'll never have to pay anything for help. Say, don't you know that there's folks begging to pay real money for the work you turn out here, taking care of the kids and all?"

"Well, of course, when ma died and my sister got married," began Aunt Berth hazily, "when that happened——"

"When that happened she made you think she was doing you a favor by giving you a home. She probably really thought she was awfully kind. But in a year or two you were just 'Aunt Berth,' and you've been just 'Aunt Berth' ever since. All old stuff. Girls are more independent nowadays. Didn't you know that? They go out and get jobs, and they aren't old until they are old. I suppose you waited for some one to come along and marry you."

Aunt Berth had never been given to self-analysis. She had never had time for it—not with three helpless babies to care for, and canning season, and housecleaning time, and tasks that were never done. There had been times when the lack of a little money all her own had been embarrassing. There had been evenings, when things were quiet, when she had fancied the word "mother" would have been more satisfying and sweeter than that of "aunt." There had been occasions when she would have changed things about the house to suit herself instead of catering always to the whims of another. There had been——

"I suppose you waited for some one to come along," Stella repeated.

"Well, I waited for a while." Aunt Berth's cheeks flushed with the confession. The strange visitor was taking her back to old dreams. She aroused herself and reached for a pan—the pan which she used for gathering peas in the garden.

"Forget it," soothed Stella, putting the pan back on the shelf. "Ellsworth is lecturing on 'Contentment,' ain't he? Well, why should he mind a slim supper, then? You come in the other room where it's cool. I'm going to play for you."

Stella gave her répertoire, excluding the classical number, and Aunt Berth listened in a reverie. Gradually, under the spell of the music, all guilt over neglected tasks vanished.

"Now," said Stella, "I want you to tell me about him."

Aunt Berth started. "There wasn't anybody," she assured.

"Go on, tell me about him."

"He only came once or twice—in the evening—just sort of stopped in as if he was passing by. My sister thought he was horrid. She thought he wasn't good enough for me. Ma is gone now, and I don't suppose my sister remembers. My sister thought he was a joke. One evening he came when I didn't know he was there, and she told him I wasn't home. He found out better, I guess—I don't know—anyhow, he never came again. That's all. There were just so many young men in town. My goodness, look what time it's getting to be! I've got to phone to the store for some things for supper."

"We'll walk down to the store," suggested the saxophone player.

"O, I never do that."

"You will this afternoon. Say, you've surely seen everything there is to see around this old house, after hanging around here for twenty years—front porch in the evening, after the work's done. You're not one of those hollyhocks out in the garden that can't make a move, are you?"

"But I——"

"You'll wear one of my platform hats after I've fixed your hair. You're not going to put on any old bonnet. Now, don't argue. I played for you, didn't I? Not a word, now. Keep your hands down. There, that's better. That's fine! Look at yourself. You aren't any million years old."

Aunt Berth hesitatingly turned back toward the house twice as they started down the walk to the street, but as they turned the corner and the house fell from view a springiness came into her step. In the awning shaded plate glass front of Conley & Spencer's Bee Hive department store she caught a reflection of herself. She entered the emporium with her shoulders thrown back.

"Was there something you wished, ladies?" inquired a rather elderly clerk, coming around the counter. He paused, bewildered.

Stella noticed the rather elderly clerk's bewilderment. Noticed, too, the drooping of the lid of the broad brimmed hat as it threatened to cover Aunt Berth's face. Then Aunt Berth lifted her chin, perfectly composed. Where was the apologetic slavey that was seen once or twice a year at funerals?

The saxophone player strolled off alone to another part of the store. She had no purchases in mind, but when she returned to Aunt Berth and the rather elderly clerk she found that Aunt Berth had made no purchases as yet, either. She had a hunch that so far as the rather elderly clerk and Aunt Berth were concerned they were not in the Bee Hive department store at all—they were back there in those evenings when he had "stopped in as if merely passing by."

"I guess it had been a good many years since he had thought of you except as drab old Aunt Berth in her married sister's kitchen," remarked Stella on the way home. "You could hardly blame him, the way you have allowed yourself to be obliterated. Did you let him know that it was simply a position that you had sort of sunk into, rather than a job you had taken by choice?"

Aunt Berth smiled.

"Well, I have an idea that that sister of yours will have to pitch in and do her own work very shortly, or else pay some one real money to do it," the saxophone player went on. "You're not wondering, I hope, what sister is going to do or say? You've wondered that for twenty years. That's long enough, ain't it?"

Aunt Berth was in the kitchen rather indifferently attempting to scrape up a supper when her sister arrived.

"It was a wonderful lecture—wonderful!" began the lady of the house as she unbuttoned her gloves. "The children were a little fussy, and I'm awfully tired, but I don't know when I was so thoroughly taken out of myself. Mr. Ellsworth is so eloquent. He made you see things as you'd never seen them before. I don't know as you would have cared for it much, Aunt Berth, but if you could have found time to go you might have appreciated the musical prelude."

"Could she play nice?" yawned Aunt Berth, peering languidly about for possible left-overs.

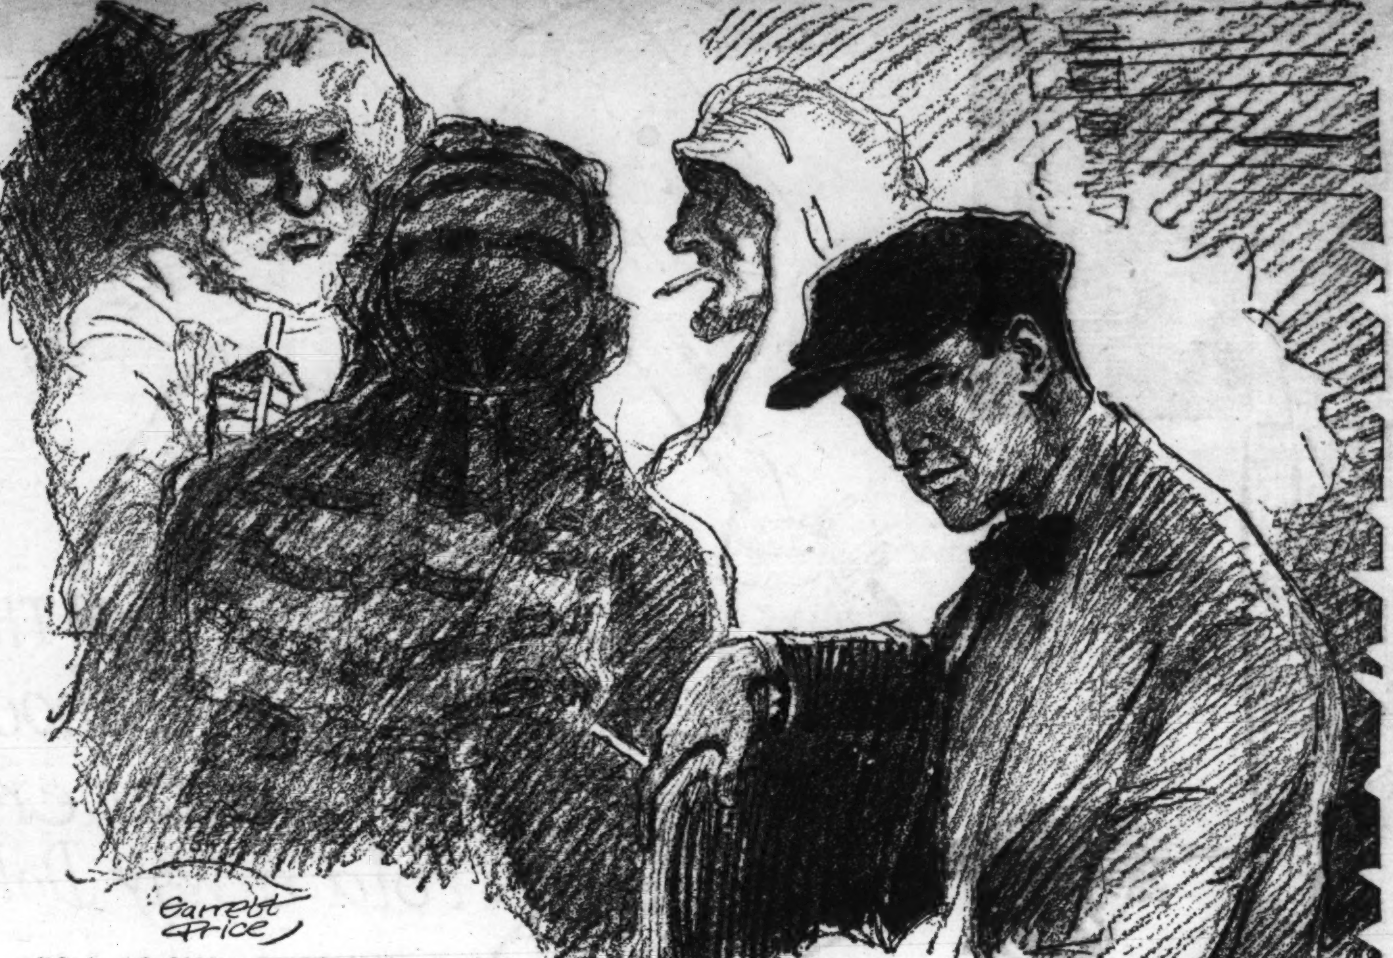
"Very ordinary, I should say. I suppose, though, it is necessary to have something of that sort for an unthinking portion of the audience. I was waiting for the inspiration of the lecture, myself. I never heard such oratory, such careful selection of words and phrases. A wonderful afternoon!"

The response, coming from the one upon whom the evening's refreshment for physical wear and tear depended, was most startling and bewildering to the lady of the house:

"A wonderful afternoon!" agreed Aunt Berth. "Ain't it the truth?"

Fortieth Door

by Mary Hastings Bradley



"It is a forbidden door, forbidden as that fortieth."

whose image she had refused to assemble to her consciousness. Now she comforted her terror with a sudden assumption of age, and dignity, and kindness, of a courtesy that would protect her and a defense that would assuage the horror of a life together, when unknown, fearful familiarities would alone vibrate in the empty monotonies.

Before a high wall the carriage had stopped. A huge, repellent Ethiopian was standing before an opened arched doorway, through which rich carpet was spread.

"Ah, but he looks like an ogre, that new eunuch of yours, Aimée," murmured one of the little Turks. The other, more touched with thought, gave her a disturbed glance, and laughed in nervousness.

Madame, alone serene, ignored the dismaying impression.

"The palace is of a fine, ancient beauty, I am told," she mentioned cheerfully.

For one wild instant Aimée thought to plead with her, to implore her to tell Abdullah to drive on, to give her the freedom of flight, if only flight down those deserted streets. And then a mad vision of herself, in her bridal robes in flight, brought the hysterical laughter to her throat. The time for flight had gone by. And as for madame's pity on her—this was not the first time that Aimée had thought of invoking her aid, but she had always known, too well, that thought's supreme futility.

Sympathetic as Mme. de Coulevain might be in her inmost heart—and Aimée divined in her an understanding pity for the necessities of existence—never would that sympathy betray her to rashness. She never would believe that in serving Aimée she would not be ruining her; and even if assured of Aimée's safety, she could never be brought to betray her own reputation for trustworthiness among the harems of Cairo. As well appeal to the rocks of the Mokattam hills.

The carriage stopped. The Negroes extended the damask walls, and one sprang to open the carriage door and bear the bride's train. In one moment's parting of the silken walls the girl saw a sun flooded cluster of staring faces, thronging for her arrival, and then the damask intervened, and through its lane, followed by her duenna and her maids of honor, she entered the arched doorway.

She was in a garden, a great gloomy place, overspread with ancient, moss incrusted trees. A broken marble fountain flung up waters into which no sunlight flashed, and the heavy stepping stones, leading to it, were buried in untrodden grass. A garden in which no one lingered.

The Ethiopian was marshaling them to the left, to an entrance in the dark palace walls before them. Behind them the oncoming guests were streaming out in veiled procession.

He opened a door. Ancient, beautiful arches framed a long vestibule, and against a background of profuse cut flowers a man's figure stepped forward in the glittering uniform of the sultan's guard. Aimée had a confused impression of a thin, meager, dandified figure with a waspish waist, of a blonde moustache with upstanding ends, of sallow cheek bones, and small, light eyes smiling at her in a strained, eager curiosity.

Through all her sinking dismay she had a flash of clear, enlightening irony at that look's suspense. If she were not as represented! If his cousin's fervor had misled his hope——!

But in that instant's encounter his eyes cleared to triumph and gayety, and he smiled—a smile curiously feline, ironic, for all its intended ingratiation—a conqueror's smile, winged to reassure and melt.

He stepped forward. There were formal words of welcome to which she returned a speechless bow, and then he offered his arm and conducted her slowly up the stairs, his sword rattling in its scabbard, to the apartment which was to be her home, and the prison for the spirit and the body.

She knew in a moment that she hated this man and that he inspired her with fear and horror.

Across a long expanse of drawing room he conducted her to the ancient marriage throne upon its platform, surmounted by a pompous crown from which old, embroidered silks hung heavily.

Then, with an unheard phrase and another bow, he left her to the day long ordeal of the reception, while he withdrew to his own entertainment at her father's house. She would not see him again until night, when he would pay her a call of ceremony.

She saw his figure hesitating a moment as he faced the oncoming guests, such a flood of feminity, unmantled now and unveiled, sparkling in rainbow hues of silks and tulle and gauze, that he had never before faced and never would again. Like a bright wave the throng closed about him, and then surged on towards the bride upon the throne.

How often, in the last years, Aimée had pitied that poor puppet of a bride, stuck there like some impaled, winged creature, helpless for flight, to the exhibition of the long stream of passersby! How often she had promised herself that never this would be her fate, never would she be given to an unknown! And now——

She was smiling as she faced them, that light, fixed smile she had seen so often on others' lips, the smile of pride trying desperately to hide its wounds from the penetrating glances of the curious. Satiric, cynical, or sympathetic, that light smile defied them all, but beneath its guard she felt she was slowly bleeding to death of some mortal hurt.

The sympathy, unconsciously betrayed, was hardest. The whispers of her young maids of honor, "Really, Aimée, he looks so young! One would never surmise," were more galling in their intended consolation, more revealing in their betrayal of her friends' shrinking from that arrogant, dandified old man, than the barbed dart of the uncaring inquisitive, "How do you find him, my dear? He has the reputation for conquest!"

They were all there, her friends, young, slim, modish Turkish girls, whose time had not yet come, glancing quizzically about the ancient drawing room, with its solid side of mashrubiyeh, its old wall panelings of carvings and rare inlay, and then pointing their glances back at her, as if to ask, "And is this our revoltée? Is this her end, in this dim old palace, among the ghosts of the past?"

Some, the frankest, murmured, "But why did you not refuse?" and others attempted consolation with a light, "As well the first as the last—since we must all come to it."

Of the married women there were those who raised blank, bitter eyes to her, and others, more mild, romantic, affectionate, tried to infuse encouragement into their smiles, as if they said, "Come—courage—it is not so bad. And what would you? We are women, after all; we do not need so much for happiness. Those dreams of yours for love, for a spirit to delight in your spirit, in place of a master delighting in your beauty alone, what are they, those dreams, but the childish stuff of fancies? For other races, perhaps—but for you, take hold of life. There are realities yet in it to bring you joy."

It was all in their eyes, their voices, their intonations, their pressure of her hands.

And she stood there among them all, smiling always that smile demanded of the bride, looking unseeingly into their eyes, listening unhearingly to the sea of voices breaking on her ears, responding in vague monosyllables and a wider smile, while all the time her eyes saw only that face, that smirking, cynical, old face, and the tide of terror rose higher and higher in her soul.

Never had she given way to her fear, never since the black night when she found the key was gone.

Then, after frenzied searching in impossible places, she had stolen back to her room and buried her face in her pillow to stifle the breaking sobs of rebellion and despair—and of a longing so deep and so terrible that it seemed to rend her with a physical anguish, a pain so fiery that her heart would forever bear the scar.

Never again would she see him now. Never would she know—never would he know all. She had refused his aid. And he might believe her still aloof, incredulous. It was finished—forever and ever.

She had told herself that before. But always there had been the key. And now there was no key and no escape and her heart broke itself against the iron of necessity.

She had cried the night through. Morning had brought her exhaustion—no peace but a despairing submission. Why struggle when the prison gate is shut? And if there was never to be freedom for her, never again the sight of that remembered face and the sound of that voice—why, then, as well one fate as another. And it was too late now to recede.

So she had called upon her pride and summoned her spirit to play its part to protect her from whispers, and surmise, and half contemptuous pity. She would surrender to this man because she must, and she would win his respect by her dignity and worth, but her soul she would keep its own in its unsullied dreams and in its memories. Life would be nothing but a hardship, nobly borne.

But now she had seen the man. Now this wild dislike, this sickening terror.

To be alone with him, to have only the few days' grace of courtship which the Mohammedan custom imposes upon the bridegroom, to be forever at his mercy in this solitary palace, with echoing corridors, its blackened walls, its damp breath of age. She thought wildly of death.

And all the time she was smiling, bending her cheek to the kiss of a friend, feeling the fingers of some well wisher press upon her, listening to praises of her beauty.

For she was beautiful. No image of wax now. The scarlet of her frightened blood was staining her cheeks, her eyes were bright as the jewels in her diadem, and beneath the thrown back veil her dark hair revealed its lovely wealth.

"Is she not a rose—will he not adore her, our Hamdi?" she heard that stout cousin of Hamdi's say to a companion, and the two stared on appraisingly at the young girl, in her freshness and virginal youth, as if at some toy to invite the jaded appetite of a satiated master.

And still the throng filed by, a strange throng beneath the flickering light and shadow of the mashrubiyeh, slender young Turks or blonde Circassians in their Paris frocks, their eyes tormented or malicious, and here and there, like a green island of calm, some rotund matron, grave and serene, her head encircled with an old fashioned turban of gauze, her stout flesh incased in heavy silks, bought at Damask so as not to enrich the unbelievers at Lyons.

And then the spectacle changed, and black street mantles appeared, yashmaks and tcharchafs, for now the doors were opened to all the feminine world, and there came strange, unknown women, slipping out from their grills for this pleasuring in a palace, old timers, often, draped and turbaned in the fashion of some far province of their youth, women, incredibly fat, in rich stuffs of Asia, their bright, deep sunken eyes spying delightedly upon the scene, furtive, poor women, keeping courage in twos and threes.

Now, too, at 4, came the women from the embassies, a Russian girl with whom Aimée had played tennis in ages past, rosy now with yesterday's sun and sleepy with last night's dance, who touched the bride's hand as if it were the hand of one half dead, already consigned to the tomb; other girls she did not know, who stared at her with the avid eyes of their young curiosities, older women, experienced, unstirred, drinking their tea and smoking cigarets and gossiping together of their own affairs, and occasionally among them a tourist, agog with wonder and exultation, storing away details for a lifetime of talk, asking, amiably, the most incredible questions.

"And is it true you have never met your husband? Listen, Jane—she says she has never met him."

A girl in creamy white silk came forward a little uncertainly. She was a pretty girl, with a curve of ruddy hair visible under her smart straw, and very bright eyes, where shyness was at variance with a friendly smile.

Indeed, Jinny Jeffries was extraordinarily intimidated by the occasion. She had a distinct sense of intrusion, mingling with her delight at having intruded, and she murmured her good wishes in an almost inaudible tone.

"It is very good of you to let us come. I wish you every happiness," she said.

Beside her a tall slender figure in black tcharchaf and yashmak made its appearance.

Aimée's eyes slipped past the pretty American; the mechanical smile was frozen on her lips. Over the black veil she saw the hazel eyes, bright with excitement, vivid as speech; the eyes of the masquerader in the Scotch costumes, the eyes of the man at the garden gate—Jack Ryder's eyes—the eyes of her dreams.

MARY'S OWN by W. W. Major

There May Have Been Doubts in Mary's Mind, But Not in Her Husband's.

"LET us out here, please."

The driver brought the taxicab to a halt at the curb, under a thickly leaved maple tree, and they alighted.

"How much?"

"Four dollars," replied the driver.

Bob whistled mentally, but not with his lips, and paid the bill. Somewhat steep, he thought, for a ride of a little more than a mile for two. But he was unmarried, and it was a day of days. What if the conniving taxi man did overcharge? It was well enough, considering the circumstances. Bob was in a mood to be held up in this Gretna Green, one of the many which these United States of America boast. The marriage trust had to survive; there was no gainsaying that. These monopolists were just humans, and the whole world today was made up of good, lovable humans, albeit some of them seemed to smirk and grin knowingly. Besides, Bob and his affianced had to come to this Gretna Green, for the state they had just left had a law which required that a woman be a resident thereof for an unreasonable period before she could contract to enter into the conjugal agreement.

"This way, dear," Bob said in a low tone, so low that no one else might hear, as he took Mary by the arm and headed southward. "He lives just around this next corner to the left."

"Let's not go in yet, Bob," she begged. "I know I can never go through it. I'll faint or do something ridiculous."

Bob acquiesced to her plea, and they passed on, trying to appear jaunty and prove to onlookers, if there had been any, that they had witnessed a mirage or some such misleading apparition. They strolled up and down several streets, she sighing often and speaking less. It was plain to be seen that she was rather agitated and was not just certain she was doing the right thing. Bob tried hard to convince her that her fears were ill founded, and in the meantime kept pushing a slip of official looking paper back in an inside coat pocket. The blooming thing persisted in creeping up and up, peeping out from behind his coat. He, too, was not entirely free from self-consciousness.

By and by they turned and came back toward the manse. They were near it when Mary's courage failed again. Now they went to an ice cream parlor, where they sipped at drinks which had no earthly flavor for them, and he cajoled and promised, promised and cajoled.

"You are sure, Bob, there will never be any one else but me? Absolutely?"

"Yes, dear; absolutely." Bob would have raised his hand to swear it had the occasion permitted. As it was, he put every ounce of conviction he had into his promise.

"All right, we will go now." Mary rose, threw back her head, drew a determined breath, and they set out.

The third time was the charm.

Bob and Mary stood up, a bit shaky. They were shaky all through the ceremony, but managed to murmur yes at the proper time. Bob got the ring on Mary's finger, but just how he never knew.

They left the house in a daze.

"What did he say, Bob?" Mary asked. "I don't know what he said, nor what I promised."

"Bless me if I know either. I caught something about 'till death do you part,' but that as about all. But never you mind, girlie; it's what we think and know about each other that counts, anyway. Don't you fear; you'll be the happiest girl this side of fairyland."

……

Three years went by. Bob and Mary had become sufficiently accustomed to double harness that they felt at liberty to talk back to salesmen and saleswomen who appeared to be charging too much for an article, and do it in each other's presence. (The day had been when they would have been stung gloriously and never said a word.) Mary would do it when there were not many around to overhear. Bob was more bold. He had the habit of saying sharp things to waiters and such, and at times became a trifle boresome with his rather sarcastic comments. Mary had to be on guard to check him. There was a day when they were lunching on a dining car and they were served with five bluepoints each when the card had stated specifically that half a dozen comprised an order. Bob's mind was forming a suitably stinging rebuke when Mary saw by his countenance what was coming.

"Please don't make a scene, Bob. Please, now, please."

Bob gave in, as he usually did when she asked; but under his breath he ranted, and spoke his opinion volubly when they returned to their car. It was just one of the instances where he irritated her.

O, yes, they had been married sufficiently long to know each other pretty well. Bob knew that always when they met a striking woman there would be a discussion by Mary of that woman when they returned home and the inevitable comparison or contrast of Mary's own short, plump self with her. And he knew it would always end with Mary's asking him whether he thought she was as pretty as the other; whether he thought she was as trim of figure; whether he thought she wore her clothes more gracefully than the other; and, lastly, whether he could ever care for the other woman like he cared for Mary. And, too, Bob always knew he would say the thing Mary expected him to say and knew he was going to say, although it irked him to have to do it.

Three years will carve a groove.

The more or less routine life they led told on Mary, and her nerves became frayed. The doctor said she needed to get away, to rest. A change of atmosphere would certainly put her on her feet. Bob and Mary talked it over, and Bob said he thought that was exactly right. It would do her good, surely. Then the next morning he wanted to say he had been all wrong; but he wouldn't be a piker. Then, again, when Mary called him at the office and announced he must visit the 10 cent store and buy some pans she badly needed for the kitchen when he came home, he was glad she was going.

So Mary left one day for a journey of several thousand miles, to watch the visitors and habitués disport themselves upon the sands of a well known western coast and at an exposition. Bob took her to the train, tugging at grips which made his arms ache; kissed her good-by outside the train, then went inside and sat with her. When it seemed time for the train to leave he kissed her again. When the train did not move, he remained a while longer and kissed her again a time, or two, or three. Of course, there were promises to write and write; and Mary said she would come back whenever he wanted her to. Bob insisted she stay at least three months; and not with a spirit of martyrdom, either. He believed it would not be bad to be alone once more.

After the lingering farewell he left the train. As he walked out of the station he almost had to pinch himself to be sure he was the same man. Somehow the ardor for being alone and unhindered again left him when he realized he was alone and unhindered, as such an ardor will.

There were nights with old friends downtown, and nights with books, and nights at shows. He became adjusted to being alone, liked it, and had a right good time for a spell; drank all he wanted to, which was little; left his clothes on the chairs if he so desired; flipped the ash from his cigaret on the rugs; had all night sittings with pals if he so willed, and did everything that fancy suggested.

Still, he had been used to a woman so long that after a month there was a void somewhere inside which writing letters every day did not fill. In Bob's office was a discerning young man who sensed this.

"Say, Bob, you're pretty lonesome, aren't you?" he questioned more or less cautiously one day.

"You're mighty right, I am," Bob replied frankly. "I am so darned lonesome I don't know which end of me is up. But why do you ask, you unmarried, unlearned, unsophisticated man of the world? What do you know about being lonesome?"

"O, nothing much. I just wondered, that's all."

A few days later Harris twitted him again, and Bob made his language more forceful, Harris somehow conceived the idea that Bob would welcome company of the other sex. Harris suggested, and they talked it over. Bob confided that he wouldn't mind, as he knew Mary wouldn't, for they long ago had decided they would not be fools on the matter of each other's company. Fact was, Mary had been to parties and dances with other escorts when business had detained him, and it had been perfectly all right with him. He never had done it, because she could always go with him. But he wouldn't mind in the least going out some evening if Harris cared to arrange it. He would be mighty glad to go, to tell the truth. Anything for a little diversion. Of course, Harris understood where the limit was—and all that.

Harris did understand, surely, and he would promise to set no evil traps. He was wearing no horns. His young life was pure. But Harris was neither deaf nor dumb, and knew Bob rather well. Also, he had a list of girl friends which was not small. He would choose the type which suited the occasion best.

Harris made the engagement for one spring evening. Bob got himself up in his best and went with Harris to the appointed rendezvous. They had to wait at a rather prominent spot, and Bob cast about furtively. It was a pretty bold stunt in a town of 300,000 where he knew quite a few people. But nothing happened to give him a jar just then.

The two young ladies, pretty, well groomed, with every indication that they were not dead from the neck up, although neither were they prudes, arrived a quarter of an hour or so after the appointed time. Bob was not irritated, for he would allow a woman that much or longer any day; besides, he couldn't be peeved, for they were strangers. One might be peeved if one's wife were late, but not with another woman.

Harris introduced them, and they started for the theater. Harris and his choice walked on ahead. Bob, as he touched the young lady's arm lightly when they crossed an alley or an intersection of streets, wondered, between efforts at blithesome conversation, the art of which he had known better at another time, what kind of an aspect he made. How strange it seemed to be helping this prancing young thing over alleys; her arm was not at all like Mary's; he did not feel quite certain that he should be helping her, but he could not be ungallant. The whole business was not the most exhilarating, for he suffered just a twinge of conscience that would not depart, despite his and Mary's agreement of long standing. Still, he felt that if he could break down the conventional barrier and lower the tension he would have a fair time. But the probabilities were that he would not be able to do so. Convention had fixed itself with a large degree of stability in Bob's mind. He was a victim of the convention of loving one woman.

At the theater they found their seats after the house had been darkened. A creepy sensation ran down Bob's spine when he felt the young woman's shoulder just touching his. There he was, expected to carry out his part in the evening's pleasure. And what the devil chance had he of doing so when he was embarrassed at being in such close contact? Lord, he knew he could never be himself in such a position! Anybody was aware the social amenities required that a young man show an appreciable interest in his companion for the evening. And such an interest did not consist of nestling against the opposite arm of the seat. Too, he felt sure there were eyes peering out of the darkness at him and transmitting to brains notes for future reference. All in all, he was not comfortable.

Miss Edith Mullane did not require a lot of room, though, and her seat was more than large enough for her. Bob thought, however, he detected she would not be averse to a touching of fingers; but he studiously avoided that. The darkness of the theater, the tenseness of the situations, the soft music—all made him believe that there were few women in the world who would have been averse. But not for him. No, indeed! Although he were vain enough to think of it, he would not do it. So he kept his arms folded most of the time and twaddled his program the remainder. Miss Mullane looked at him quizzically, as if to say, "What kind of a man are you, anyway?" She was not sure; certainly he was more timid than a great many.

After the show they went to a place where there were mellow red, blue, and green lights and where white lattice designs were covered with meandering make-believe vines; where the orchestra played dreamy tunes, and where there were cozy little corners. To one of the cozy nooks they were ushered.

They ate but little; they sipped a little more. What they sipped had an insinuating way about it, a knack at thrusting itself between one and conventionality and other restraints. But Bob did not loosen up a great deal at that, although he did become less self-conscious and assumed that quiet, puzzling attitude men sometimes do. An occasional cryptic and well put remark drew from Miss Edith Mullane the shrewd observation that he was a wily, deliberate person.

"You know, I believe you are married, Mr. Burlington," she told him. "You are too austere in your conduct to be single. They talk about married men being foolish when they get away from home, but I don't believe it. It's all bunk! They are careful fellows, usually saying little, and if they do talk much they're 'most always noncommittal. Not that I go 'round with the married men; but I have noticed them."

Bob assured her she was entirely wrong, and she might ask Harris for confirmation. Indeed, he was as foot loose and fancy-free as any man in the place. He had never considered marriage seriously. Wouldn't Miss Mullane join him in another? Miss Mullane would, and so would Harris and the other Miss Mullane. Bob was thawing fast.

"You are all wrong about married men, Miss Mullane," an imp whispered in the back of his brain, and he passed it on as the waiter departed smiling as the result of Bob's courteous and generous treatment. "Don't you trust them, not one. I've had experiences with them, and I know.

"Why, right here tonight I see several whom I know," he lied. (Harris listened attentively, caught a warning glance from Bob, and smiled.) "See that large man over there near the orchestra? He's one. Has a pretty little wife, nice home, cars, horses, and—a white poodle dog. Yep, here 'most every night. And he's not at all partial to any one girl. See that other fellow dressed in brown with the large brunette? Know him, too. Has a wife who's one of the most public-spirited of women. She is a leader in one of the big civic organizations. But here he is, instead of being home advancing her cause. The little fellow in the checkered suit, fat, bald-headed? See him? He's another. Married twenty years or so. Great wife. Woman capable of running a big business all alone. Does run his mostly, I understand. Bad lot—all married men. Beware of them, I say. These I've just mentioned have wives who are somebody. They are here and their wives are elsewhere. Can't agree with you, Miss Mullane."

Miss Mullane liked men who had opinions, and did not detect the subtle sarcasm in his words, as Mary would have done had she been present. Harris caught it, but kept silent. Despite her stand for the benedicts, Miss Mullane seemed to be pleased with Bob's argument, and let it be seen that she did not dislike him.

They had a merry time, and it was almost midnight when they left the place of the mellow lights. Outside they were waiting for a taxi when a friend of Bob and Mary, a woman, passed. Bob turned just in time to look her full in the face. He spoke as cordially as he could, raised his hat, and turned back to his group, the blood rushing to his cheeks. "Good-night!" he commented to himself. Mary certainly would hear about it now, and, although Mary had been good fellow enough to say it would be all right, Bob had a hunch that she would not be tickled to death if she knew it had actually happened. Bob knew that what women say and what they really feel are different. O, well, why worry? It was done.

They chattered gayly on the way home—that is, Bob and Edith did. The glow of the last hour and a half had not left Bob—yet. Harris and the other girl, Bob noted, had little to say. They were not bursting the sides of the seat getting away from each other, either. Bob wanted to wallop Harris for such a trick. It was bad form, and, besides, Harris should realize he was putting him in an irksome position. What man would appear timid when another was bold? As they rode on and the jolty machine helped to make the glow grow dimmer Bob found himself almost writhing. Harris and his young lady admittedly were the victims of environment, and Bob felt a little heavier pressure at his side. It displeased him, and he made a mental vow that if he ever got out of this he'd never be inveigled into a similar situation.

After a while the car stopped before the home of the Mullanes. The four went up to the veranda, which faced the lustrous full moon. It was an entrancing night. The air was comfortably warm with the first flush of spring, and a balmy wind blew from the south.

Once in the shadow of the veranda, Harris and Athalie disappeared around a wing. In for it again, Bob said to himself. He wanted to remind Harris that it was time to be going, but he felt that Harris was in a manner the host, and he would not be abrupt. Bob and

The Fortieth Door

SYNOPSIS.

Jack Ryder, a young American, is doing some excavating in Egypt, and is induced by Jinny Jeffries, a pretty American tourist he has known, to attend a masked ball at her hotel. He obtains a Scotch costume from a friend, Andrew McLean, an attaché of the English government, and at McLean's he hears the story of a French scholar who disappeared in the desert fifteen years before. The man was reported dead, and a wife and baby girl were left; now the inheritance of an estate makes it suddenly important to hunt up the child. But all trace is gone. McLean shows Ryder a miniature portrait of the young Frenchman, curiously mounted. At the ball, Ryder is fascinated by a mysterious young girl in a Mohammedan costume who will give no hint of her identity. He follows, as she slips away, and finds she is the daughter of Tewfick Pasha, a Turkish official in the neighboring palace. The terrible ennui of her secluded life has led the girl to this escapade. At parting in the garden, to the girl's horror and amazement, Ryder kisses her. A moment later a servant finds her and says her father wishes to see her. Her fear of discovery proves groundless, but is succeeded by a greater one when her father informs her he wishes her to marry a repulsive old man to save himself from ruin. Ryder sees Aimée again, and when he learns that she is to be married leaves her in anger and returns to the desert to his excavations. There he finds evidence which convinces him that Aimée is the daughter of the Frenchman who disappeared. He determines to rescue her, and returns to Cairo. He persuades McLean to accompany him to Tewfick Pasha's home. This does not result satisfactorily for the visitors, as the pasha is suspicious and on his guard. He tells them the girl they seek died in childhood and that Aimée is his own daughter.

SIXTH INSTALLMENT.

THE MARRIAGE DAY.

"THY mother—the grace of Allah upon her!—It is thy mother! Eh, those bright eyes, that long, dark hair that I brushed the many hot nights upon the roof!"

"But you are her image, Aimée," murmured the French woman, but half understanding the nurse's rapid gutturals, and then, "Your father's gift?"

With the box in her hands the girl turned from them, fearful of the telltale color in her cheeks. "But whose else—his thought, of course," she stammered.

That plaid was warning her of mystery.

The dressmaker was creating a diversion. Leaving, she wished to consult about the purchases for tomorrow's work, and madame moved towards the hall with her, talking in her careful English, while Miriam bent towards the dropped finery.

Aimée slipped through another door, into the twilight of her bedroom, whose windows upon the street were darkened by those fine wrought screens of wood. Swiftly she thrust the box from sight, into the hollow in the mashrubiyeh made in old days to hold a water bottle where it could be cooled by breezes from the street.

Leaning against the woodwork, her fingers curving through the tiny openings, she stared toward the west. The sky was flushing. Broken by the circles, the squares, the minute interstices of the mashrubiyeh, she saw the city taking on the hues of the sunset.

Suddenly the cry of a muezzin from a nearby minaret came rising and falling through the streets.

"La illahé illallah Mohammedun Ressoulallah——"

The call swelled and died away and rose again. There is no God but the God, and Mahomet is the prophet of God. From farther towers sounded, echoing and reëchoing, vibrant, insistent, falling upon crowded streets, penetrating muffling walls.

"La illahé illallah——"

In the avenue beneath her two Arabs, leading their camels to market, were removing their shoes and going through the gestures of ceremonial washing with the dust of the street.

"La illahé——"

The city was ringing with it.

The seamstress and the Frenchwoman, still talking, had passed down the hall. In the next room Miriam's lips were moving in pious testimony.

"Eoh hedu en la illahé—I testify that there is no God but the God!"

In the street the Arabs were bowing towards the east, their heads touching the earth.

And in the window above them a girl was reading a note.

The last call of the muezzin, falling from the tardy towers of Kait Bey, drifted faintly through the colored air. With resounding whacks the Arabs were urging on their beast; Miriam, her prayers concluded, was shaking out silks and tulle with a sidelong glance for that still figure in the next room, pressing so close against the guarding screens.

She could not see the pallor in the young face. She could not see the tumult in the dark eyes. She could not see the note, crushed convulsively against the beating breast, in the fingers which so few moments ago had drawn it from the hiding place in the box.

Ryder had not dared a personal letter. But clearly, and distinctly, he stated the story of the Delcassés. He gave the facts which the pacha admitted and the ingenious explanation of the two Aimées. And for reference he gave the address of the Delcassé aunt and agent in France and of Ryder and McLean at the Agricultural bank.

The pacha did not dine with his daughter that night. He had been avoiding her of late, a natural reaction from the strain of too excessive gratitude. A man cannot be continually humble before the young! And it was no pleasure to be reminded by her candid eyes of his late misfortunes and of her absurd reluctance towards matrimony.

As if this marriage were not the best thing for her! As if it were a hardship! To make sad eyes and draw a mouth because one is to be the wife of a rich general. Irrational. The little sweetmeat was irritating.

To this point Tewfick's buoyancy had brought him, and all the more hastily because of his eagerness to escape the pangs of that uncomfortable self-reproach. To Aimée, in her new clear sightedness of misery, it was bitterly apparent that he was reconciled with her lot and careless of it.

So blinded had been her young affection that it was a hard awakening, and she was too young, too cruelly involved, to feel for his easy humors, that amused tolerance of larger acquaintance with human nature. She had grown swiftly bitter and resentful, and deeply cold.

And now this letter. It dazed her, like a flame of lightning before her eyes, and then, like lightning, it lit up the world with terrifying luridity. Fiery colored, unfamiliar, her life trembled about her.

Truth or lie? Custom and habit stirred incredulously to reject the supposition. The romance, the adventure of youth, dared its swift acceptance. How could she know? Intuitively she shrank from any question to the pacha, realizing the folly and futility of exposing her suspicion. If he needed to lie, lie he would—and in her understanding of that she read her own acceptance of the possibility of his needing to lie.

Madame de Coulevain? Madame had never known her mother. Only old Miriam had known her mother and Miriam was the pacha's slave. But the old woman was unsuspecting now, and full of disarming comfort in this marriage of her wild darling.

Through dinner she planned the careless seeming questions. And then in her negligée, as the old nurse brushed out her hair for the night, "Dald," said the girl, in a faint voice, "am I truly like my mother?" and when Miriam had finished her fond protestation that they were as like as two roses, as two white roses, bloom and bud, she launched that little cunning phrase on which she had spent such eager shaping.

"And was I like her when I was little—when first she came to my father?"

"Always thou wast the tiny image which Allah—glory to his name!—had made of her," came the nurse's assurance.

"I am glad," said Aimée in a trembling voice.

She dared not press that more. Confronted with her unconscious admission, the old woman would destroy it, feigning some evasion. But here it was, for as much as it was worth.

Presently then she found another question to slip into the old woman's narrative of the pacha's grief.

"Eh, to hear a man weep," Miriam was murmuring. "Her beauty had set its spell upon him, and——"

"And he lost her so soon. Three or four years only, was it not," ventured Aimée, "that they had of life together?"

It seemed that Miriam's brush missed a stroke.

"Years I forget," the nurse muttered, "but tears I remember," and she began to talk of other things.

But it seemed to Aimée that she had answered. As for that other matter, of the dead Delcassé child, she dared not refer to it lest Miriam tell the pacha. But how many times, she remembered, had she been told that she was her mother's only one!

Yet, O, to know, to hear all the story, to learn Ryder's discovery of it! It was all as strange and startling as a tale of Djinns. And the life that it held out to her, the enchanted hope of freedom, of aid—O, not again would she refuse his aid!

She had no plans, no purposes. But that night over her hastily donned frock she slipped the black street mantle, and when, at last, after endless waiting, the murmuring old palace was safely still and dark, she stole down the spiral stair and gained the garden. And then, a phantom among its shadows, she fled to the rose bushes by the gate.

Breathlessly she knelt and dug into the hiding place of that gate's key. To the farthest corners her fingers explored the hold, pushing furiously against the earth. And then she drew back her hand and crushed it against her face to check the nervous sobs. The hole was empty. The key was gone.

. . . .

In Tewfick Pacha's harem everything was astir. It was the morning of the marriage, almost the very hour when the wedding cortége would bear the bride from her father's home to the house of her husband.

The invited guests were already arrived and streaming through the reception rooms, a bright, feminine tide in evening toilettes, surrounding the exhibited gifts or pausing about a table of cool sirups, and their soft, low voices, the delicious musical tones of high bred Turkish women, rose like a murmuring of somnolent bees to the tenser regions about, tightening the excitement of haste.

The bride was not yet ready. Still and white, she was the only image of calm in that fluttering, confusing room. Her nearer friends were hovering about her, and her maids of honor, two charming little Turks in rose robes, were draping her veil, while old Miriam, resplendent in green and silver, endeavored jealously to outmaneuver them. On her knees, the gnomelike Mrs. Hendricks was adding an orange blossom to the laces on the train. Then she sat back on her heels, her head atilt like a curious bird's, her eyes beaming sentimentally upon the bride.

"The prettiest h'I h'ever did see," she pronounced with satisfaction. "H'as pretty as a wax figure now—h'only a thought too waxy."

And like a wax figure indeed, immobile, rigid, the bride was standing before them, arrayed at last in the shimmering white of the sweeping satin, overrich of lace and orange flowers, and shrouded in the clouding waves of her veil. White as her robes, pale as death and as still, the girl looked out at them, and only that sick pallor of her face and the glitter of her dark eyes betrayed the tumult within.

"Your diadem, my dear—you are keeping us attending," came Mme. de Coulevain's voice from the door.

The diadem, that heavy circlet of brilliants which crowned the eastern bride in place of the orange wreath of western convention, must not be touched by the bride's fingers, but placed by one of her friends, married and married but once, and exceptionally happy in that marriage.

Azâdé, Aimée's selection from her friends, stepped hastily forward now, a soft, dimpled slow smiling girl, her eyes drowsy with domesticity. No question of Azâdé's happiness. She extolled her husband, a young captain of cavalry, and she adored her infant son, a prodigy among children. Life for her was a rosy, unquestioning absorption.

A shaft of irony sped through Aimée, as she bent her head for its crowning at this young wife's hands, and received the ceremonial wishes for her crowning of happiness, a crowning occurring but once in her lifetime. Irony was the only salvation for the hour; without that outlet for her tortured spirit she felt she would grow suddenly mad, hysterical and babbling, or passionate and wild.

So many moods had stormed through her since that night when she had found all hope of rescue gone with her lost key! So many impulses seethed frantically now beneath her quiet, as she faced for the last time that white misted image in the glass. She had a furious longing to tear off that diadem, and veil, and heavy robe, to scatter the ornaments and drive out all those maddening spectators, all those interested, eager, unknowing, uncaring spectators of her humiliation.

Arranging her veil, draping her satins, as if gauze and silk were all that mattered to this hour! Wishing her happiness—as if happiness could ever be hers now for the wishing! Smiling, fluttering, complimenting, lending to the ghastly sacrifice the familiar acceptances of everyday.

If only she could wake from this nightmare and find that it was all a dream. If only she could brush this confusion from her senses and from her heart its dumb terrors. If only she had the courage for some desperate revolt, some outburst of strength.

"I am ready," she said faintly, turning from the glass, and moved towards the door, while a young eunuch bent for her train, that train of three yards length, which stretched so regally behind her in her slow descent of the stairs.

In the French drawing room below her father was waiting for the ceremonial farewell, in which the father received the daughter's thanks for all his care of her.

Mechanically Aimée advanced. She stood before him, she lifted her eyes—and there passed from them a look of such strange, breathless, questioning intensity that it was like something palpable. She had not foreseen this sudden crisping of her nerves, this defiant passion of her spirit.

Her father? Was it her father? Was it a father who had sold her so, careless, callous—or was it only a father's semblance, and did there lie in the background of those petted, childish years some darker shadow of a tragedy that had wrecked her mother's life and broken her heart?

Like flashing light that look passed between them. It penetrated Tewfick's nonchalant guard and brought the unaccustomed color to his olive cheeks. His handsome eyes turned uneasily aside. A girl's pique, perhaps, at the situation, her last defiance of his power, but for all his reassurance there was something deeper in that look, something terrible, accusing, which went into his soul.

It was a moment in which the last cord of their relationship was severed forever.

She did not speak a word. She bent, but not to kiss his hand as custom dictated, but to sweep a long, slow curtsy, that salutation of a maid of spirit to a conqueror, a bending of the pliant back, but with the head held high and the spirit unsurrendered. And yet there was wretchedness in those proud eyes and a blind fear and supplication.

Useless to beg now. She knew it, and yet the eyes implored. And then she smiled. And before that smile Tewfick faltered in his paternal benediction and hastened the phrases.

Little murmurs flew back and forth, as she turned away, and then a hasty chatter sprang up as the guests hurried into their tcharchafs for the journey to the bridegroom's house.

That day Aimée did not put on her own. On either side of her, as she went out to her father's gate, huge Negroes held up silken walls of damask, and between those walls she walked into the carriage that awaited her, followed by Mme. de Coulevain and the two little maids of honor.

It was when the carriage began to move that the panic inside of her grew to whirlwind. The horse's hoofs, trotting, trotting, the motion of the wheels, seemed to be the onbearing rush of fate itself. If she could only stop it! If she could only cry out, tear open the windows, scream to the passers by. She knew these were only the impotent visions of hysteria, but she indulged them pitifully.

She saw herself, in those moments, helpless and hopeless, passing on into the slavery of this marriage — Aimée, no longer the daughter of Tewfick Pacha, but Aimée Delcassé, child of a dead Frenchman, inheritor of freedom, sold like any dancing girl.

And her own lips had assented. In the supreme, silly uselessness of sacrifice she had given herself for the safety of that man who had spent such careless indulgence upon her, that man whom perhaps her mother had loved and perhaps had hated.

Faster and faster the horses were trotting, leading the long file of carriages and impatient motors that were bringing the relatives, and guests, and trousseau, rolling on under the lebbeks and sycamores of the wide Shubra avenue, once the delight of the fashionables before the Gezireh drive had drained it of its throngs and its prestige.

Now some bright eyed urchins ran out from their games in the dust to curious attention, and through a half open gate Aimée caught once a glimpse of a young, unveiled girl, watching eagerly from the tangled greens and ruined statuary of an old garden. Farther on came glimpses of farm lands, the wheat rising in bright spears, and of well wooded heights, and in the distance the white houses of Demerdache against the Gibel Achmar beyond.

But where were they bearing her? Aimée had a despairing sense of distance and desolation as the carriage turned again—Abdullah, the coachman, having traversed unnecessary miles to gratify his pride before the house of his parents—and made a zigzag way towards the river, where old palaces rose from the backwaters, their faces hidden by high walls or covered with heavy vines and moss.

Deeper and deeper grew the girl's dismay. It was a different world from that bright, modern Cairo that she knew; this was as remote from her daily life as the old streets of Al Raschid. Her thoughts flew forward to that unknown lord, that Hamdi-Bey,

His Boy

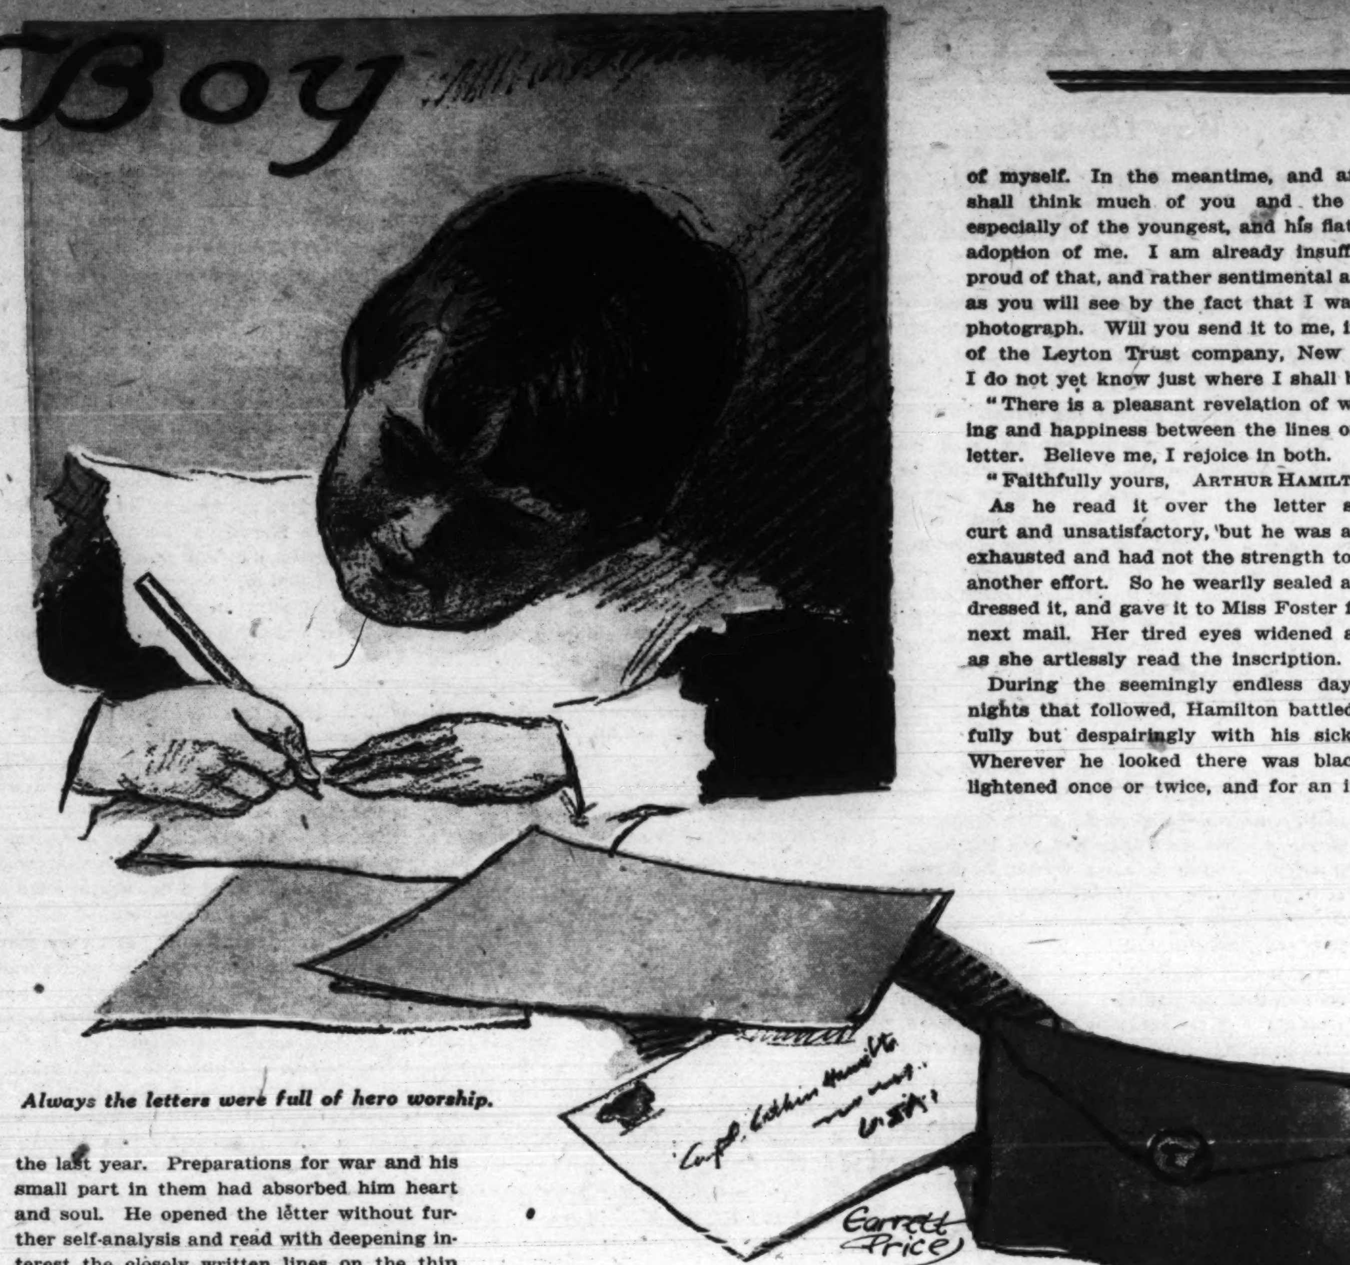
He Was Lonely Enough to Grasp This Tiny Hand Stretched Out to Him Across the Sea.



Always the letters were full of hero worship.

CAPT. ARTHUR HAMILTON of the ——th infantry moved on his narrow cot, groaned partly from irritation and partly from pain, muttered a few inaudible words, and looked with strong disapproval toward the opening of the hospital tent in which he lay. Through it came the soft breezes of the night, a glimpse of brilliantly starred horizon line, and the cheerful voice of Private Kelly, raised in song. The words came distinctly to the helpless officer's reluctant ears.

"Down the long, l—long trail," caroled Kelly, in buoyant response to the beauty of the evening.

Capt. Hamilton muttered again as he suppressed a seductive desire to throw something at the Irishman's head, silhouetted against the sky as he limped past the entrance. Six weeks had elapsed since the battle in which Hamilton and Kelly had been among the many grievously hurt. Kelly, witness this needless service of song, was already convalescent. He could wander about in well meaning but futile efforts to cheer less fortunate mates. Baker was around again, too, Hamilton remembered, and Barnard and Hallenbeck and Lee, and—O, hosts of others.

He ran over their names as he had done countless times before in the long days and nights which had passed since he had been "out of it all," as he put it to himself. He alone of his fellow officers in the regiment still lay chained to his wretched cot, a very log of helplessness, in which a fiery spirit flamed and consumed.

He was "out of it all," not for weeks or even for months, but very possibly for all time. The doctor's reticence told him this; so did his own sick heart; so did the dutiful cheerfulness of his men and his brother officers. They overdid it, he realized, and the efforts they so conscientiously made showed how deep their sympathy must be, and how tragic the cause of it.

Again and again he contemplated the dreary outlook, checking off mentally the details of the past, the depressing experiences to come, the hopelessness of it all; and as his mind swung wearily round the small circle he despised himself for the futility of the whole mental process and for his inability to fix his thoughts on things other than his own misfortune. A man paralyzed; a thing dead from the waist down—that was what he had become. He groaned again as the realization gnawed at his soul, and at the sound a white capped nurse rose from a table where she had been sitting and came to his bedside with a smile of professional cheerfulness. She had a tired, worn face, and faded blue eyes which looked as if they had seen too much of human suffering. But an indomitable spirit gazed out of them, and spoke, too, in her alert step and in the fine poise of her head and shoulders.

"Your mail has come," she told him, "and there seem to be some nice letters—fat ones. One, from Russia, has a gold crown on the envelope. Perhaps I had better leave you alone while you read it."

Hamilton smiled grimly as he held out a languid hand. He liked Miss Foster. She was a good sort and she had stood by the boys nobly through the awful days after the fight. He liked her humor, too, though he sometimes had suspicions as to its spontaneity. Then his eye fell on the top envelope of the little package she had given him, and at the sight of the handwriting he caught his breath, and the blood rushed suddenly to his face.

He closed his eyes for a moment in an effort to pull himself together. Did he still care, after ten years, and like that! But possibly, very probably, it was merely a manifestation of his wretched weakness, which could not endure even a pleasant surprise without these absurd physical effects. He remembered, with a more cheerful grin, that he had hardly thought of her at all during the last year. Preparations for war and his small part in them had absorbed him heart and soul. He opened the letter without further self-analysis and read with deepening interest the closely written lines on the thin foreign paper, whose left hand corner held a duplicate of the gold crown on the envelope.

"Dear Old Friend: You have forgotten me, no doubt, in all these years. Ten, is it not? But I have not forgotten you, nor my other friends in America, exile though I am and oblivious though I may have seemed. I do not know quite why I have not come home for a visit long before this. Indeed, I have planned to do so from year to year, but a full life and many varied interests have deferred the journey one way or another. I have three boys—9, 7, and 5—and it would be difficult to bring them with me and impossible to leave them behind. So, you see——

"But my heart often longs for my native land, and in one tower of this old castle I have a great room full of souvenirs of home. It is the spot I love best in my new country. Here I read my mail and write my letters and follow American news in the newspapers friends send me. Here, with my boys tumbling over each other before the fireplace, I read of you, my friend, and your splendid courage, and your injury.

"No doubt by the time this letter reaches you you will be well again and in no need of my sympathy. But you will let me tell you how proud of you I am.

"I read the newspaper accounts to my boys, who were greatly interested and impressed when they learned that mamma knew the hero. I was much amused by the youngest, Charlie—too small, I thought, to understand it all. But he stood before me with his hands on my knees and his big brown eyes on my face; and when I finished reading he asked many questions about the war and about you. He is the most American of my children and loves to hear of his mother's country. After the others had gone he cuddled down in my lap and demanded the 'story' repeated in full; and when I described again the magnificent way in which you saved your men, he said, firmly, 'I am his boy.'

"I thought you might be interested in this unsought, spontaneous tribute, and my purpose in writing is to pass it on to you—though I admit it has taken me a long time to get 'round to it!

"You will forgive this rambling letter and you will believe me, now as ever,

"Sincerely your friend,

"MARGARET CHALLONER VALDRONOVNA."

Hamilton slowly refolded the letter and returned it to its envelope, letting the solace of its sweet friendliness sink into his sore heart the while. She had not wholly forgotten him, then, this beautiful woman he had loved and who had given him a gracious and charming camaraderie in return for the devotion of his life. He had not been senseless enough to misconstrue her feeling, so he had never spoken; and she, after two brilliant Washington seasons, had married a great Russian noble and sailed away without suspecting, he felt sure, what she was to him. He had recovered, as men do, but he had not loved again, nor had he married.

He wondered if she knew. Very probably; for the newspapers which devoted so much space to his achievements had added detailed biographical sketches, over which he had winced from instinctive distaste of such intimate discussion of his personal affairs. The earlier reports (evidently the ones she had read) had published misleading accounts of his injuries. They were serious, but not dangerous, according to these authorities. It was only recently that rumors of his true condition had begun to creep into print. The princess had not read these. Hamilton was glad of that.

He recalled dreamily the different passages of her letter, the remainder of his mail lying neglected on his bed. That boy—her boy—his boy. He smiled to himself, at first with amusement, then with a sudden tenderness that pleasantly softened his stern lips. He was weak enough, frightened enough, lonely enough, to grasp with an actual pitiful throb of the heart this tiny hand stretched out to him across the sea. He liked that boy—his boy. He must be a fine fellow. He wondered idly how he looked. "Three boys—9, 7, 5"—yes, Charlie was 5 and had great brown eyes. Like his mother's, the stricken man remembered. She had brown eyes—and such brown eyes. Such kind, friendly, womanly brown eyes—true mirrors of the strong soul that looked from them. Something hot and wet stung the surface of Hamilton's cheek. He touched it unsuspectingly and then swore alone in deep, frank self-disgust.

"Well, of all the sentimental idiots!" he muttered. "My nerves are in a nice way when I bawl like a baby because some one sends me a friendly letter. Guess I'll answer it."

Miss Foster brought him pen, ink, and paper, and he began, writing with some difficulty, as he lay flat on his back.

"My Dear Princess: Your letter has just reached me, and you cannot, I am sure, imagine the cheer and comfort it brought. I am still lingering unwillingly on the sick list, but there is some talk now of shipping me home soon, when I hope to give a better account of myself. In the meantime, and after, I shall think much of you and the boys, especially of the youngest, and his flattering adoption of me. I am already insufferably proud of that, and rather sentimental as well, as you will see by the fact that I want his photograph. Will you send it to me, in care of the Leyton Trust company, New York? I do not yet know just where I shall be.

"There is a pleasant revelation of well being and happiness between the lines of your letter. Believe me, I rejoice in both.

"Faithfully yours, ARTHUR HAMILTON."

As he read it over the letter seemed curt and unsatisfactory, but he was already exhausted and had not the strength to make another effort. So he wearily sealed and addressed it, and gave it to Miss Foster for the next mail. Her tired eyes widened a little as she artlessly read the inscription.

During the seemingly endless days and nights that followed, Hamilton battled manfully but despairingly with his sick soul. Wherever he looked there was blackness, lightened once or twice, and for an instant only, by a sudden passing memory of a little child. It would be too much to say that the memory comforted him. Nothing could do that, yet. All he dared hope for was for the strength to go through his ordeal with something approaching manliness and dignity.

The visits of his friends were a strain to him, as well as to them, and it was sadly easy to see how the sense of his hopeless case depressed them. He could imagine the long breath they drew as they left him and found themselves again in the rich, warm, healthy world.

He did not blame them. In their places he would no doubt have felt just the same. But he was inevitably driven more and more into himself, and in his dogged efforts to get away from self-centered thought he turned with a sturdy determination to fancies about remote things, and especially to imaginings of the boy—the little fellow who loved him, and who, thank God, was not as yet "sorry for him!" Oddly enough, the mother seemed to have taken her place in the background of Hamilton's thoughts. It was her son who appealed to him—the innocent man-child, half American, half Russian, entering so happily and unconsciously on the enhanced uncertainties of life in the tragic land of his birth.

During the trying, stormy voyage home Hamilton had strange, half-waking visions of a curly headed lad with brown eyes, tumbling over a bearskin rug in front of a great fireplace, or standing at his mother's knee looking into her face as she talked of America and of an American soldier. He began to fancy that the vision held at bay the other crowding horrors which lay in wait. If he could keep his mind on that he was safe. He was glad the mother and son could not, in their turn, picture him—as he was.

When the photographs arrived, soon after he reached New York, the helpless officer opened the bulky package with eager fingers. There were two "cabinets," both of the child. One showed him at the tender age of 2, a plump, dimpled, beautiful baby, airily clad in an embroidered towel. A second was apparently quite recent. A 5 year old boy, in black velvet and a bewildering expanse of lace collar, looked straight out of the picture with tragic dark eyes, whose direct glance was so like his mother's that ten years seemed suddenly obliterated as Hamilton returned their gaze. With these was a little letter on a child's note paper, in printed characters which reeled drunkenly down the page from left to right. Hamilton read it with a chuckle.

"Dear Capt. Hamilton: I love you very much. I love you becos you fought in the war. I have your picture. I have put a candle befront of your picture. The candle is burning. I love you very much.

"Your boy, CHARLIE."

Accompanying this epistolary masterpiece was a brief note from the writer's mother, explaining that the "picture" of Capt. Hamilton, of whose possession her infant boasted, had been cut from an illustrated newspaper and pasted on stiff cardboard in gratification of the child's whim.

"He insists on burning a candle before it," she wrote, "evidently from some dim association with tapers and altars and the rest. As it is all a new manifestation of his character, I am indulging him freely. Certainly it can do him no harm to love and admire a brave man. Besides, to have a candle burned for you! Is not that a new flutter of glory?"

Hamilton, still in the grasp of a dumb depression he would voice to no one, was a little amused and more touched. In his hideous loneliness and terror the pretty incident, one he would have smiled at and forgotten a year ago, took on an interest out of all proportion to its importance. He felt a sudden, unaccountable sense of pleasant companionship. The child became a loved personality—the one human, close, vital thing in a world over which there seemed to hang a thick black fog through which Hamilton vaguely, wretchedly groped.

He himself did not know why the child interested him so keenly, nor did he try to analyze the fact. He was merely grateful for it, and for the other fact that he cherished no sentimental feeling for the boy's mother. That had passed out of his life as everything else had seemingly passed which belonged to the old order of things. He had always been a calm, reserved, self-absorbed, unemotional type of man, glorying a little, perhaps, in his lack of dependence on human kind. In his need he had turned to his fellows and turned in vain. Now that a precious thing had come to him unsought, he did not intend to lose it.

That was the beginning of an intercourse which interested and diverted Hamilton for months. He spared no pains to adapt his letters to the interest and comprehension of his small correspondent, and he derived a quite incredible amount of satisfaction from the childish scrawls which came to him in reply. They were wholly babyish documents, about the donkey, the nurse, the toys, and games of the small boy's daily life.

Usually they were written in his own printed letters. Sometimes they were dictated to his mother, who faithfully reported every weighty word that fell from the infant's lips. But always they were full of the hero worship of the little child for the big, strong, American fighting man; and in every letter, sometimes in the beginning, sometimes at the end, occasionally in both places, as the enthusiasm of the writer waxed, was the satisfying assurance, "I am your boy." Hamilton's eyes raced over the little pages till he found that line, and there rested contentedly.

As the months passed, the healing influence of time wrought its effects. Hamilton, shut in though he was, adapted himself to the narrow world of an invalid's room and its few interests. With the wealth he had fortunately inherited he brought to his side leading specialists who might possibly help him, and went through alternate ecstatic hopes and abysmal fears as the great men came and departed.

Very quietly, too, he helped others less fortunate, financially, than himself. The nurses and physicians in the hospital where he lay learned to like and admire him, and other patients, convalescents or newcomers who were able to move about, sought his cheerful rooms and brought into them a whiff of the outside world. Through it all, winding in and out of the neutral colored months like a scarlet thread of life and hope, came the childish letters from Russia, and each week a thick letter went back, artfully designed to keep alive the love and interest of an imaginative little boy.

At the end of six months young Charles fell from his donkey and broke his left arm, but this trivial incident was not allowed to interfere with the gratifying regularity with which his letters arrived. It was, however, interesting, as throwing a high light on the place his American hero held in the child's fancy. His mother touched on this in her letter describing the accident.

"The arm had to be set at once," she wrote, "and of course it was very painful. But I told Charlie you would be greatly disappointed if your boy were not brave and did not obey the doctor. He saw the force of this immediately, and did not shed a tear, though his dear little face was white and drawn with pain."

Master Charlie himself discussed the same pleasant incident in the first letter he dictated after the episode.

"I did not cry," he mentioned, with natural satisfaction. "Mamma cried, and Sonya cried. Men do not cry. Do they? You did not cry when you were hurt, did you? I am going to be just like you."

Hamilton laughed over the letter, his pale cheeks flushing a little at the same time. He had cried, once or twice; he recalled it now with shame. He must try to do better, remembering that he loomed large as a heroic model for the young.

He was still reading the little letter when Dr. Van Buren, his classmate at the Point, his one intimate since then, and his physician now, entered the room, greeted him curtly, and stood at the window for a moment, drumming his fingers fiercely against the pane. Hamilton knew the symptoms; Van Buren was nervous and worried about something. He dropped the small envelope into his lap and looked up.

"Well?" he said, tersely.

Van Buren did not answer for a moment. Then he turned, crossed the room abruptly, and sat down near the reclining chair in which the officer spent his days. The physician's face was strained and pale. His glance, usually direct, shifted and fell under his friend's inquiring gaze.

"Well?" repeated the latter, compellingly. "I suppose you fellows have been talking me over again. What's the outcome?"

Van Buren cleared his throat.

"Yes, we — we have, old man," he began, rather huskily—"in there, you know." He indicated the direction of the consulting room as he spoke. "We don't like the recent symptoms."

Unconsciously, Hamilton straightened his shoulders.

"Out with it. Don't mince matters, Frank. Do you think life is so precious a thing to me that I can't part with it if I've got to?"

Van Buren writhed in his chair.

"It isn't that," he said, "life or death. It's wor—— I mean, it's different. It's—it's these." He laid his hand on the officer's helpless legs, stretched out stiffly under a gay red afghan. "God!" he broke out, suddenly, "I don't know how you'll take it, old chap, and there's no sense in trying to break a thing like this gently. We're afraid—we think—they'll—have to come off!"

Under the shock of it Hamilton set his teeth.

"Why?" he asked, quietly.

"Because—well, because they're no good. They're dead. They're a constant menace to you. A scratch or injury of any kind—they've got to go—that's all, Arthur. But we've been talking it over, and we can fix you up so you can get about and be much better off than you are now."

He leaned forward as he spoke, and his words came quickly and eagerly. The worst was over; he was ready to picture the other side. Hamilton stopped him with a gesture.

"Suppose I decline to let them go?" he asked, grimly.

Van Buren stared at him.

"You can't," he stammered.

"Why not?"

"Because—why, because your life depends on their coming off!"

Hamilton's lips set.

"My life!" he repeated. "My precious, glad, young life! So full of happiness! So useful!" He dropped the savagely bitter tone suddenly. "No, Frank," he said, quietly. "I won't go through life as the half of a man. I'll let the thing take its course; or if that will be too slow and too—horrible, I'll help the hobbling beast on its way. I think I'd be justified. It's too much to ask—you know it—to be hoisted through life as a remnant."

Van Buren rose, moved his chair nearer to Hamilton's, and sat down close to his friend's side. All nervousness had left him. He was again cool, scientific, professional; but with it all there was the deep sympathy and understanding of a friend.

"No, you won't," he said, firmly; "you won't do anything of the kind, and I'll tell you why you won't. Because it isn't in your makeup to play the coward. That's why. You've got to go through with it and take what comes, and do it all like the strong chap you are. If you think there won't be anything left in life, you are mistaken. You can be a lot of use; you can do a lot of good. You will have time and inclination and money. You will be able to get around, not as quickly, but as surely. With a good man servant you'll be entirely independent of drafts on charity or pity.

"Money has some beautiful uses. If you were a poor devil who hadn't a cent in the world and would be dependent on the grudging service of others, I should wish you to accept and bear, perhaps, but I could not urge you to. Now, your life is helpful to others. You can give and aid and bless. You can be a greater hero than the man who fought in France and there are those who will feel it."

"That is, my money is needed, and because I've got it I should drag out years of misery while I spread little financial poultices on other people's ills," returned Hamilton. "No, thanks; it's not enough good. They can have the money just the same. That can be amputated with profit to all concerned. I'll leave it to hospitals and homes for the helpless, especially for fractional humanity—needy remnants. But I decline absolutely, once and for all, to accept the noble future you have outlined. I grant you it would be heroic. But have you ever heard of great heroism with no stimulus to arouse it?"

He raised his hand as he spoke, and brought it down with a gesture of finality. As it fell, it dropped on the little letter. Mechanically, his fingers closed on it.

His boy! His brave little boy who had not flinched or cried, because he meant to be just like Capt. Hamilton. What would he think when the truth came to him years hence, as it must do? What would she think now, the mother who was glad that her son should "love and admire a brave man?" The small missive was a stimulus.

Hamilton turned to Van Buren again, checking with a little shake of the head the impetuous speech that rushed to that gentleman's lips.

"Just wait one moment," he said, thoughtfully.

He leaned back and shut his eyes, and as he did so the familiar scene of months past came suddenly before them—the quaint old foreign room, the great fireplace with its blazing logs, the mother, the curly haired boy. His life had been a lonely one, always, Hamilton reflected. Few, pathetically few, so far as he knew, would be affected by its continuance or its end. But the manner of its end—that was a different matter. That might touch individuals far and wide by its tragic example to other desperate souls. Still, he was not their keeper. As for Charlie——

Ah, Charlie! Charlie with his childish but utter hero worship; Charlie, with his lighted candle; Charlie, with his small boy love and trust—Charlie would be told some little story and Charlie would soon forget. But—what would Charlie think of him some day when the truth was out—Charlie who at 5 could set his teeth and bear pain stoically because his hero did! Because he was "his boy"?

Hamilton's mind returned to that problem again and again and lingered there. No, he could not disappoint Charlie. Besides, Van Buren was right. There was work, creditable work to do. And to be plucky, even if only to keep a brave little chap's ideal intact, to maintain its helpful activity, was something worthy of a stanch man. Would he wish his boy to go under when the strain against the right thing was crushing?

He laid the letter down gently, deliberately, turned to his friend, and smiled as Van Buren had not seen him smile since their ingenuous boyhood days. There was that sweetness in the smile which homage to woman makes us dub "feminine," and something of it, too, in the way he laid his hand on his chum's shoulder.

"All right, old sawbones," he said, slowly. "You may do whatever has to be done. I'll face the music. Unbuilding one man may build up another."

MARY'S OWN

BY W. W. MAJOR

Edith stood for a few awkward seconds while Bob meditated bolting and other rash acts.

"Let's sit here, Mr. Burlington," she said finally, indicating the steps. They sat down. Rather informal, Bob thought.

They said nothing. He was irked by the affair; she saw the moon and felt the caressing south wind. It was a night for romance. She put a hand through Bob's arm. It startled him. He raised the arm ever so little, then let it down again.

Holy mackerel! What was he to do? He couldn't stand for this. Would he pull away? No; that would be ungentlemanly. Would he tell her he thought it best that he leave? Would he tell her he was not at liberty to do such a thing? Would he tell her he was married, and get Harris in bad? Would he plead the lateness of the hour, and beat it? Would he tell her he thought her bold, although he could not truthfully say so in view of the witching circumstances and his manly vanity? What the sam hill would he do? There seemed to be but one well formed idea in his brain, and that was that he was cured! He didn't like that girl's hand on his arm. It was strange flesh, and had no right to be there.

"Isn't it a lovely night, Mr. Burlington?" Miss Mullane interrupted his disconsolate reverie. "Wouldn't it be wonderful to be down on the river in a canoe with nothing to do but drift with the current? It's a night for romance, isn't it?"

"Yes—fine night," Bob managed to gasp. To himself he said: "What the devil can she be up to, anyway? Darned if it doesn't look like she meant business. [His vanity again.] Forward, uncouth, fresh. Why doesn't Harris come on?"

Edith chatted on sentimentally, and after a while grew bold to ask Bob to tell her about himself. And she took a little firmer grasp on his arm. Fool! Bob said to himself. Silly! Wanted her to tell her about himself! Sure sign that she was interested and willing to be more interested.

And, worst of all, taking it upon herself to make advances! Heaven help him! If Mary could only see him in the moonlight with this young hare-brain clinging to his arm, talking a lot of sentimental balderdash! He saw red, and cursed himself for a fool and hypocrite, although his intentions had been the best. It had gone far enough. He removed the girl's hand from his arm and got up.

"Really, I must be going, Miss Mullane. It has been a pleasure to meet you," he lied. "I hope I shall see you again soon."

Then he turned about and called to Harris he was off. He lifted his hat to Miss Mullane and went down the walk alone, kicking himself and damning a woman who had no discretion. Now he was undeniably not liberal enough to grant that a night like this could have an effect upon discretion. Ears burning, he passed out of the gate, feeling still the hateful touch of the girl's hand. How he hated that touch, almost loathed it! He had never before believed he would so resent the advances of a woman other than Mary. But he had had no experience of this nature. It was certain he would not have another, he would bet his last cent on that.

The next evening Bob wrote Mary all about it, detailing to her his embarrassment, and ending his letter with an urgent request that she come home at once. The house was getting in an awful mess—that was what he told her.

By way of a parting word he wrote that there would never, never be any one else but her.

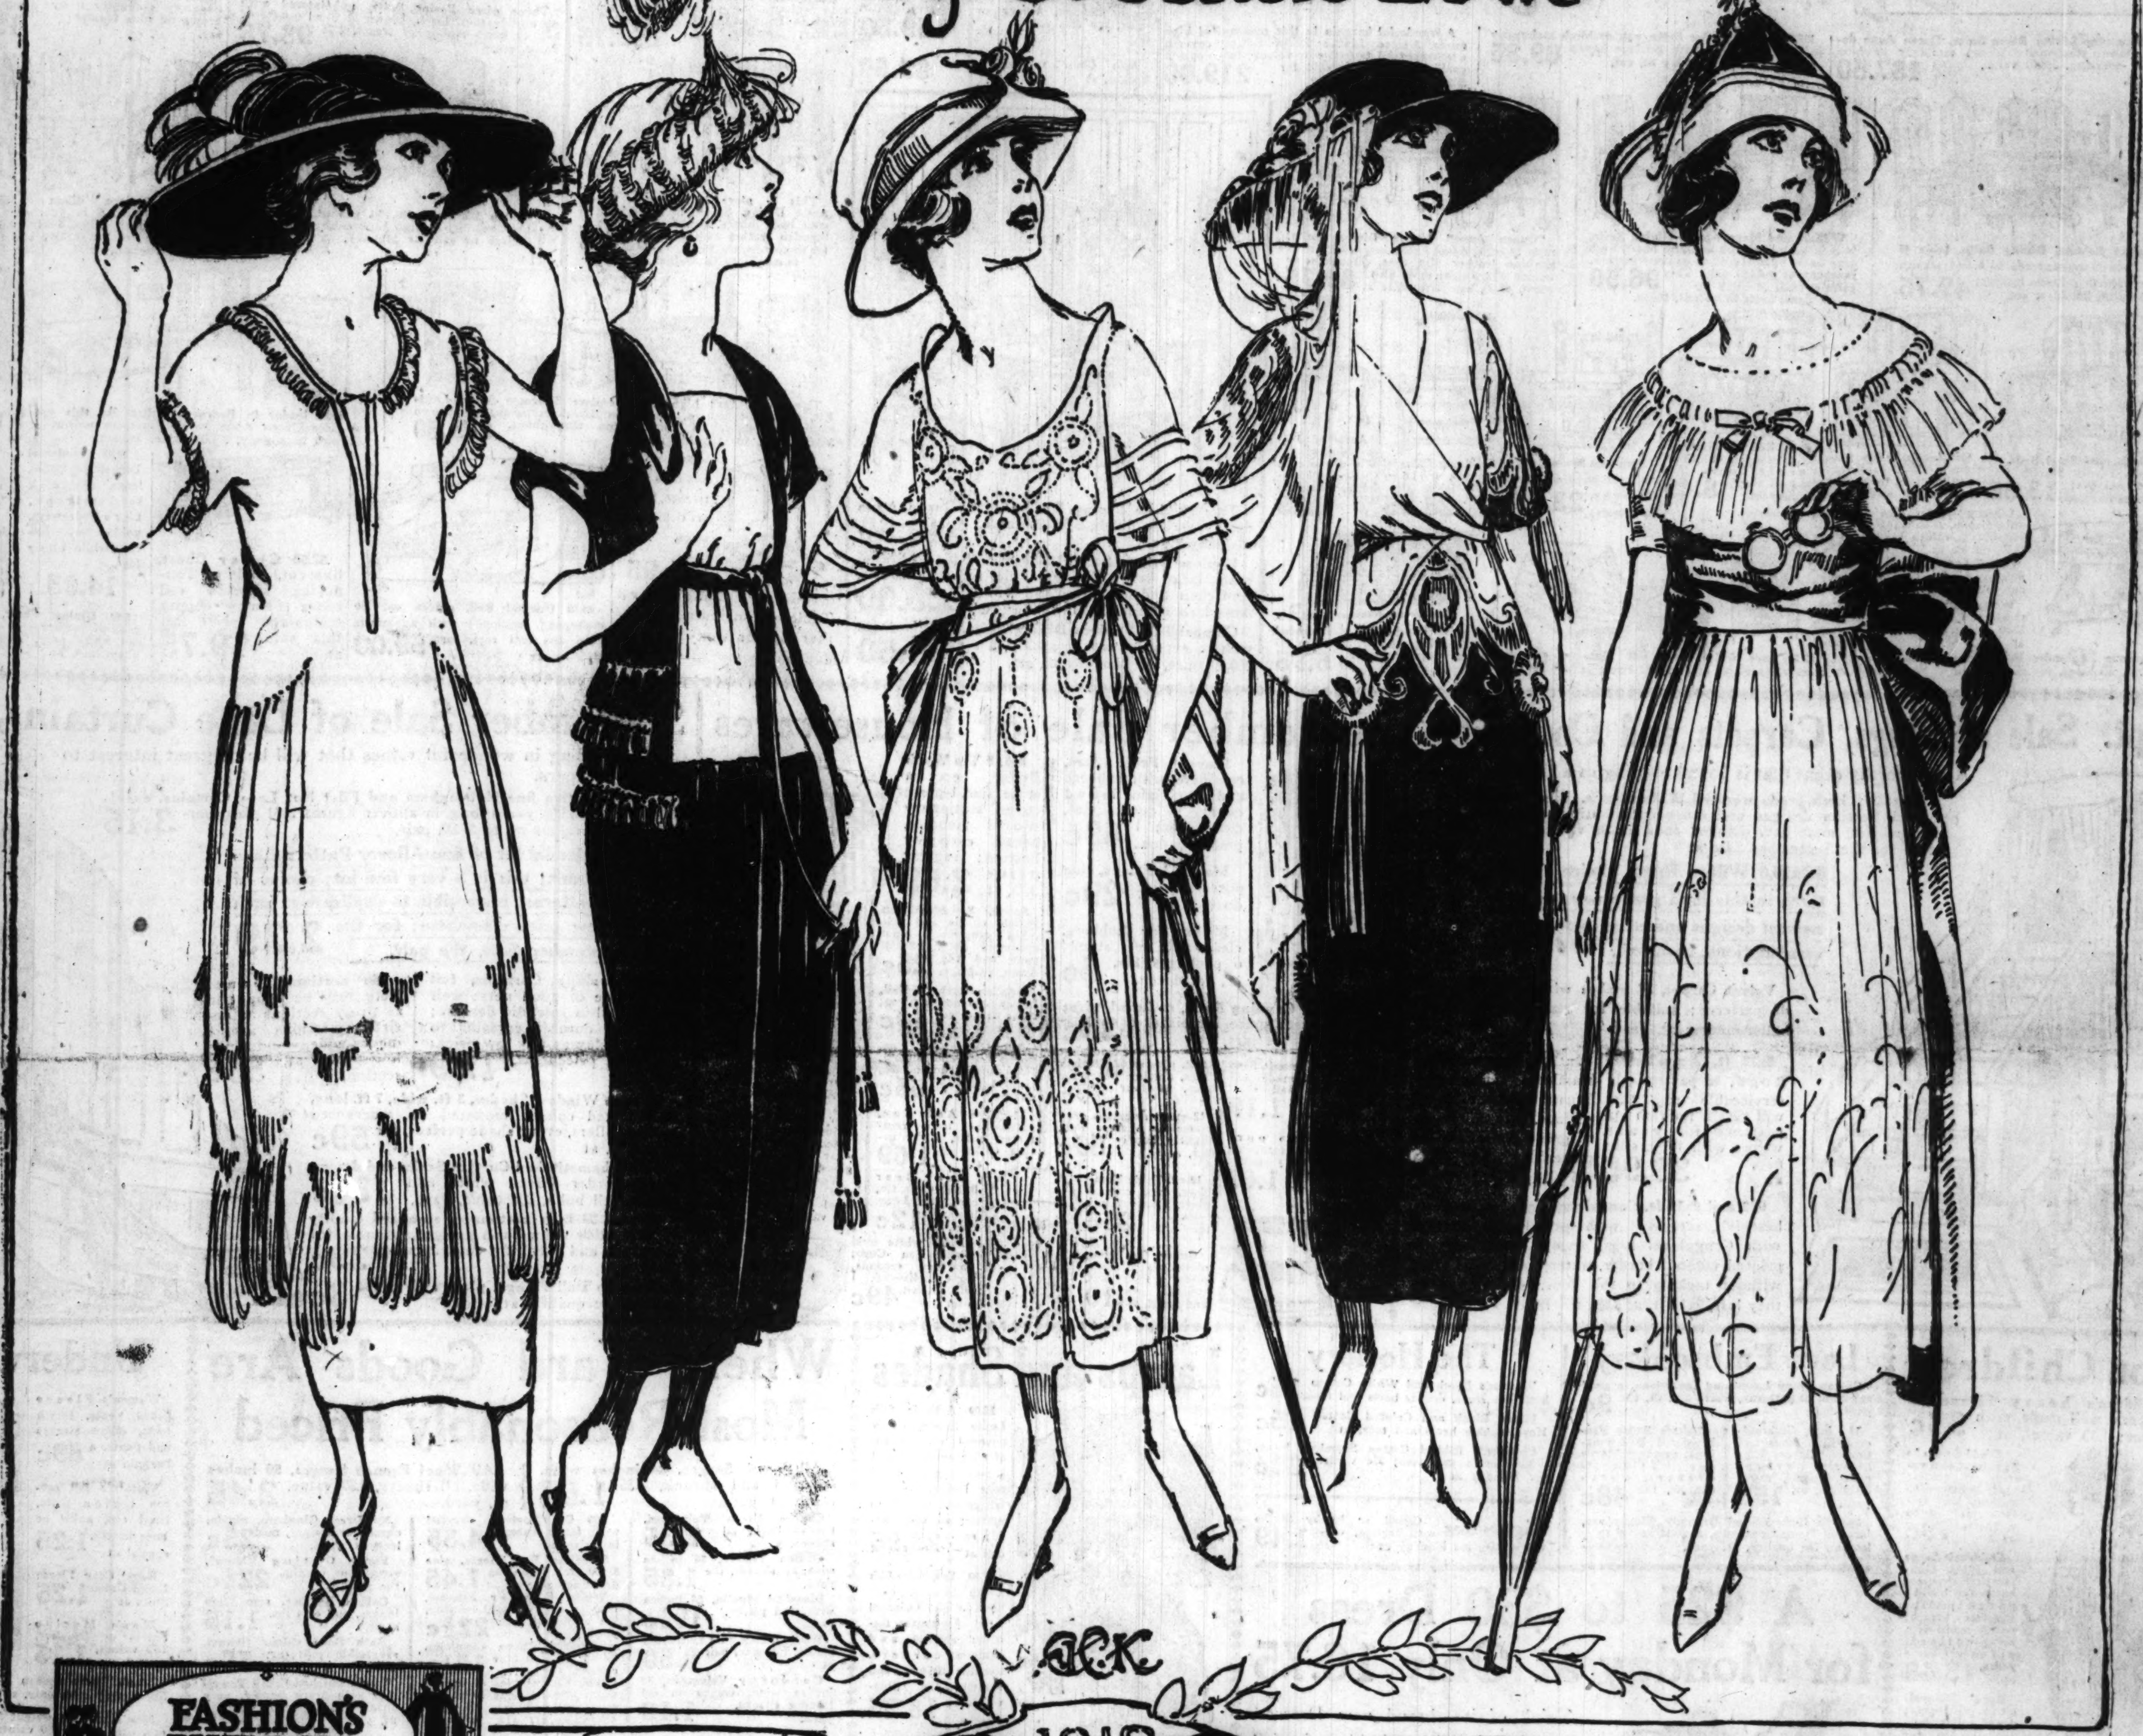
Some Between Season Frocks

by Corinne Lowe



FASHION'S BLUE BOOK

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—By the time September comes our summer wardrobe makes us feel like the rose we have pressed between the leaves of Tennyson's "Maud." Those dowdy chiffons, those black and white silks where the white is now sickly and jaundiced, those faded wash frocks—we give one look at our former treasures and utter one low moan of pain.

We have selected for today a group of French gowns which may be trusted to remain "good" for at least four or five months. While they are not representative of the most sensational impulses of fashion, they do report the trend in sober and dignified mood.

First at the left is a tricolette. This supple silk jersey is going to be worn all through September and October for both city and out of town wear. Here we find it in wood brown trimmed with silk jersey fringe and worn with a black velvet hat. A word right here about wood brown: In both millinery and gowns it is the latest whim. So if you have no natural talent for being a "nut browne maide" do take a course in it.

One of the manifestations of this woodland piping is in Chantilly, now so vital a part of hats and frocks. The newest French hats show this lace dyed to a wood color and combined with fabrics such as velvet or hatter's plush, which may be either in black or in the same shade of brown. Chantilly in either black or wood brown is sometimes just a saucy little veil that comes to the tip of the nose. At other times they do a fur or velvet crown and finish it off with one of those reasonable brims which you can bend at will. A hat like this last is being selected by many smart women for evening and restaurant wear.

Black and white! Here is a note so strong at present in both Paris and New York that we feel as if we had suddenly shifted back to the court of that old French king who turned joust and festival into black and white because these were the colors of his lady love. In the frock second from the left we have the fashionable combination in black and white silk jersey trimmed with black fringe and worn with an adorable little turban of tulle, the silk loop fringe of which is the same color as the hair. (A brand new trick they have over there!)

If our business in life were standing on a Watteau fan we could not indulge ourselves more in soft, graceful, saucy little hip draperies than we do at present. We have now all sorts of polonaise and pannier movements and in nothing, perhaps, is the bouffant effect more successful than in taffeta. For a smart little dinner frock we recommend indeed the next model—one of pale rose taffeta with a panel of rose net embroidered in silk floss of the same shade. Narrow taffeta ribbons are used as a girdle and finish the sleeves. The hat of rose taffeta has tulle flowers of the same tone.

You will note that all these gowns have the short sleeves. Sleeve thrift is indeed being practiced mightily nowadays. And it is not confined, either, to length. Some of the smartest fall gowns which we have seen have tight little sleeves that reach just above the elbow. They are even tighter than those of the following frock, the black and white satin joined by a design in black floss on a white ground. This is worn with a black velvet hat trimmed with white and silver tulle and with roses of the same fabric in silver and rose.

The bertha is one of the notes which we find strongly emphasized in late summer and early fall fashions. This next frock shows you how to go about it to look drooping shouldered as the youthful Empress Eugenie. It is a charming creation of gray net with a darned stitch on the skirt, and the big sash of mauve faille is edged with silver. For the girl with golden or red hair and pink cheeks we can think of no more exquisite combination, particularly if you add to it the hat of black velvet and rose net which is illustrated. Indeed, in wearing gray, remember always that a touch of black does wonders. Whistler dressed the landscape like that, and a lady can do no better for herself.

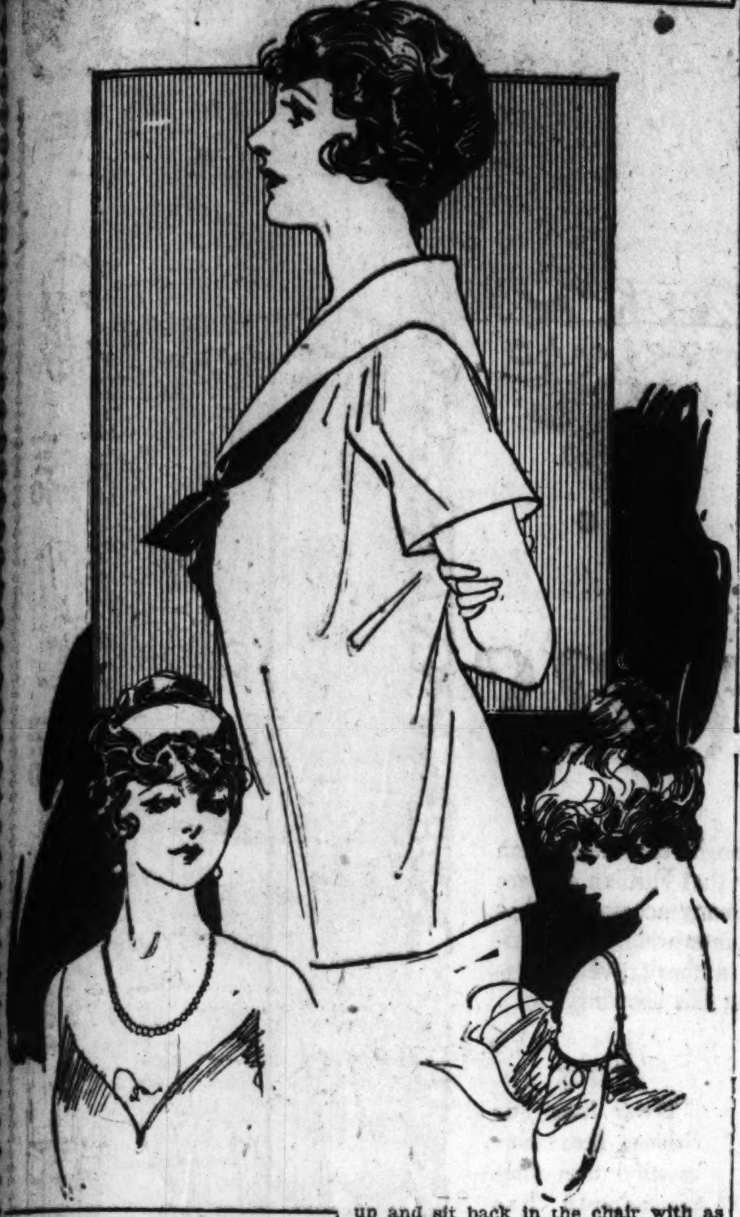
SYMMETRICAL NECK and SHOULDERS

By Antoinette Donnelly



What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, an exercise, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply send stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, "Chicago Sunday Tribune."

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

In the waning summer days the young woman's fancy turns to evening gowns. She will have maybe a dream of an orchidy pink silk or a soft yellow satin or a delicate blue net for her fall campaign, or she may have all three in her dreams in the porch hammock under a softly waning moon. And she will have slippers to match and trimmings to harmonize and maybe, if a birthday comes in between, a bewitching feather fan.

That all settled, she visualizes herself in them, and is having a perfectly gorgeous time until she remembers her neck is "awfully skinny" and her shoulders not seemingly able to meet the public eye. Or maybe, O unhappy thought, she sees a mound of flesh creeping lazily out between the shoulder blades and another forcing its way through the shoulder straps of the orchidy pink or the pale yellow.

And then she complains to herself that something is always taking the joy out of her party frocks! Perhaps she decides to see what she can do about putting the joy back into them again and perhaps she resigns herself to the sympathy of her friends and decides against bothering her head about exercises.

But if she is still swaying between I will and I won't bother maybe this help I am offering today to suit her particular case will be the pivot upon which her decision swings. I hope so. I hope she will give the exercises a trial just so she will have a happier winter out of her evening frocks.

For developing and adding symmetry to the neck and shoulders try the following movements, and having tried them, acquire the daily habit of them for two months at least without giving them up. At the end of that time, if you have done them honestly and religiously, you will not give them up for another while, for you will have seen what they can do!

Sitting, raise the arms sidewise to shoulder height, then turn the palms backward and push back ten times hard, moving hands as little as possible.

Then stand up. Rise on the balls of the feet and raise arms sidewise to the shoulder height. Turn the palms down and with scarcely any movement of the arms, push down ten times. This raises the chest, flattens the back, and renews circulation.

Fold the arms in back of the body and alternately push shoulders backward and forward.

Stand with hands at back of the head; then push head backward, still holding good standing position.

More often than not poor shoulders are the result of bad standing position. Stand erect with heels together, the weight of the body resting on the balls of the feet, chest high, shoulders down, and chin in. The correct walking position is the same as when standing, keeping the weight on the balls of the feet and the chest leading, the arms swinging slightly down at the sides. To sit correctly keep the chest up and sit back in the chair with as much of the back of the body as possible touching the back of the chair and the feet resting flat upon the floor.

Correct breathing, too, is of prime importance in remodeling a scrawny neck and shoulders. Do these breathing exercises twice daily:

Stand in correct position, inhale with lips closed while counting four. Exhale with lips closed, during four counts. Increase the number of counts to 8, then to 16, etc.

Inhale with four silent counts, then exhale quickly through the mouth. Increase as above.

Then inhale through the nostrils during 8 counts, hold the breath 8 counts, and exhale during 8 counts. Increase gradually.

Now, if it is a fat pair of shoulders that stand between you and happiness, put fists together on chest, with elbows on a level with your shoulders, make a complete circle with the elbows, inhaling deep breaths as you bring the arms in and exhale as you move them in the outside of the circle.

The following exercise is called the bowing exercise and is excellent for neck, back, and chest reduction and incidentally reduces the abdomen: Lie flat on the floor, face and toes down, slowly raise head and legs, keeping legs stretched to tip of toes. Do this and increase gradually, but be careful not to strain at first.

It stands to reason, of course, that putting flesh on and taking it off is part of the job of the right kind of diet. For the skinny one is recommended the fat producing foods such as milk, butter, cream, cheese, olive oil, ice cream, bacon, ham, and pork, and the fat of any meat. Begin with small doses. If it is hard for you to drink milk, say, begin with a quarter glass of milk (better always half milk and cream) and gradually increase. Keep adding a little more butter to your bread and so on.

On the other hand self-denial is the better part of valor. The fleshily inclined must forego just the things named above and in addition chocolates and bonbons and rich desserts and alcohol that may be subject to the search and seizure act.

A pair of perfectly modeled shoulders and symmetrical neck are much too lovely assets to resign oneself to her present fate without putting up some kind of a fight.

There are necklace tricks not to be scorned by girls in search of the swanlike silhouette. The attractive locket suspended from a black ribbon is a godsend for the neck that needs lengthening. The short, round string of beads is for the slender neck, not for the woman whose plumpness will only be accentuated. The large novelty beads, too, are for the plump woman to avoid. In fact, beads having become the natural accompaniment to every gown they should be chosen with the same idea of bringing out good points and hiding poor ones.

Varied Activities of Women

The Woman's Medical college of Pennsylvania is the only medical school in the United States which admits women exclusively.

Dr. Elizabeth M. Baer of Philadelphia is the first woman to run for magistrate in that city.

Women are admitted to membership in the British Institute of Bankers on exactly the same terms as men.

Late census figures show that in the United States there are fifty-six mothers who have given birth to their twentieth child.

There are over 4,000 debutantes in England awaiting their opportunity to be presented to the king and queen during the present season.

American women who journey to France to visit the graves of their soldiers killed in battle are to be given special attention by the Young Women's Christian association.

Ladies in waiting to Queen Mary of England have gone on a strike for more pay, claiming that they are unable to pay for the necessary gowns. They declare their allowance of $1,500 a year is insufficient.

The fortune of nearly $100,000 left by Mrs. Amy Woodford-Finden, the English song writer, represented in a large measure the profits from her songs.

Mrs. Laura Knight, Miss Anna Airy, and Miss Claire Alwood, English women, have been honored by a commission from the Canadian government to paint vases to be used as mural decorations for the war memorial building.

The loss of her left hand in an accident two years ago has been little handicap to Miss Mina Train of Sacramento, Cal., in her determination to make her way in the world. She is now making $4 a day in a cannery, where she holds peaches and pears with her left elbow, which enables her to peel and slice them with as much speed as other women with two hands.

Antoinette Donnelly's Beauty Answers.

LOUISE: FOODS HELPFUL IN overcoming constipation are honey, sugar, fruits, lemons, lemonade, buttermilk, cider, apple sauce, figs, apricots, pineapple, sauces, apples, stewed fruits. Apples, apricots and figs stewed together are excellent. Spinach, carrots, parsnips and well cooked cabbage are helpful. Corn, graham and bran bread may be substituted for white. I shall be glad to send you an exercise which is helpful for overcoming constipation if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

ADELE: MASSAGING THE HANDS each night with a good skin food is especially helpful in treating enlarged joints, not so much in actually reducing their size as in building up the other parts of the hand and so giving it a symmetrical appearance. If you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope, I shall gladly send you formula for an excellent skin food; also instructions on care of the hands.

S. M.: THERE'S ONLY ONE SUCcessful and permanent way to remove moles from the face, and that is by the way of the electric needle in the hands of one skilled in this form of surgery. Better leave them alone than have them trifled with by some one who doesn't know the business perfectly.

M. C. S.: WHAT KIND OF PERfume to use in washing the hair sounds like quite an extravagant query, does it not? But that would be no remedy for an odor to the hair. If the hair is washed thoroughly with green soap, and rinsed three times, you will find it clean and sweet smelling. The green soap, you know, is not green in color, but amber, and is sold in bottles. I find it easier to use by making a liquid solution of it, which is simply adding water to it and letting it dissolve completely. Wash the hair frequently, too, I advise, if there is any tendency to odor.

Strange Weddings Contest.

Tell us about the strangest wedding you have attended—and the funniest. There's scarcely a wedding but has some humorous details. Tell your experience and that of friends. An Interrupted Ceremony.

Marguerite was the daughter of a farmer and for months had planned to be married at sunset on a beautiful rolling meadow near a tiny, tree lined creek. The wedding day was clear and lovely and all the guests agreed that Marguerite had indeed chosen a romantic spot and were prepared to be thoroughly thrilled. But just as the preacher got to the crucial point, "Do you promise," etc., a loud grunt was heard and the guests turned to see a pig marching with dignity up to the improvised altar, and the little flower girl flying in terror in the other direction. R. G.

Waiting at the Church.

At a wedding in a little suburban church I was to give the signal to the organist when the wedding party arrived, that she might begin to play the wedding march, the organ loft being in the front part of the church.

At the appointed hour, the guests being all seated, there was a busy stir and sound of numerous arrivals in the vestibule, and glancing down from my perch at the top of the stairs leading to the organ loft, I saw what I took to be the complete bridal party. Hastily giving the cue to the organist, she commenced playing the wedding march, which was in turn the signal for the minister to take his place in the chancel, which he did.

We had an anxious wait, for it developed that only the attendants had arrived, the bride and groom having been detained long enough for the march to be repeated several times. The belated couple finally came, however, blissfully unconscious of the fact that anything unusual had occurred. E. P.

A Change in Plans.

One of the strangest weddings I ever heard of was that of a couple out west. The mother of the bride, not approving of her son-in-law-to-be, selected one to her own liking. Arrangements were made for a large house wedding. When the guests were arriving the bride-to-be slipped quietly out of a rear door, met the lover of her choice, and together they galloped away on horseback to an adjoining village where they were married, leaving the deserted groom and wedding party behind. Real Love Stories

A LOYAL NURSE.

ALICE was a nurse in a large hospital which was owned and conducted by a very eminent surgeon whom I shall call Dr. Adams. He was called the "miracle doctor," and people came for many miles to be cured by his wonderful surgery.

Alice was a very quiet, unassuming little thing, with big, serious gray eyes, which were full of worshipful awe whenever she watched the great doctor at his skillful work. She studied Dr. Adams so attentively that she was finally placed as his first assistant, and she became so used to him that she seemed to divine his every thought.

One day, in spite of the great precautions used, the surgeon became very ill from infection in his hand received while performing a dangerous operation. For weeks he lay in a state of coma while the distracted physicians and surgeons of the city worked on his case almost to the exclusion of their other work. One evening he opened his eyes and looked quite rationally at two doctors who were standing by his bedside.

"Give me a hypodermic of ——" [mentioning several drugs, the names of which caused the two doctors to stagger, as two of them were deadly poisons, though in infinitesimal quantities had been known to do certain wonderful work.]

The group of physicians was in conference all night debating whether or not to take Dr. Adams at his word, as he had lapsed into coma again almost immediately after he had spoken, and they had been unable to consult with him further. Dr. Adams had been known to stay for hours in the laboratory working out his cures, and when asked what the medicine was which he had given a patient would laugh and reply: "I really don't know what I put in it exactly. I seem to find them by instinct."

After a furious night of debating, the physicians arrived at the conclusion that they would try the cure, as they said he was rapidly sinking and there was no hope without some kind of a miracle. But when they came to administer the dose they found a little gray-eyed woman guarding the great surgeon, and in spite of threats and entreaties, she refused to let them administer the hypodermic, her woman's instinct telling her that Dr. Adams was not in his right mind when he spoke the few words the night before. She went without sleep for three days and nights watching the doctors like a little hawk so that they would not have a chance to give him the hypo in secret. She was just about ready to break down when suddenly the surgeon's mind cleared and he began to mend.

When Dr. Adams was able to be up a little each day they told him what had happened and about the dose they had been about to give him, also how Miss Alice had guarded him so savagely. He almost fainted when he heard the formula, as it had been a deadly disinfectant which he had been working out in his mind, and he remembered nothing about the incident. He began to notice Alice from that day, and in less than a year they were married, and she takes just as good care of him now as she used to.

Callus? "Gets-It" Will Peel It Off!

Nothing on Earth Like Simple "Gets-It" for Corns or Calluses.

A callus or thickened skin on the sole of the foot, which often makes walking a misery is of the same nature as a corn. "Gets-It" removes it as easily as it does the toughest corns. By using a few drops of "Gets-It" on the callus, you will be able to peel it off with your fingers, in one complete piece just as you would a banana peel. It leaves the skin free and smooth as though you never had a callus. You need no more fussy plasters, sticky tape, "packagey" bandages, knives or scissors for corns or calluses. "Gets-It" is the national corn remover, the biggest on earth, used by millions. It never fails. You'll work, play and dance at ease in spite of corns.

"Gets-It" the only sure, guaranteed, money-back corn remover, costs but a trifle at any drug store. Manufactured by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago, Ill.

Autumn Fashions

WITH autumn just around the corner, the smartly gowned woman is giving proper thought to the selection of her autumn wardrobe. And this store is in full readiness to guide her in the way that Fashion decrees she must go. All that is best of the new in suits, frocks, wraps, millinery, and the many accessories that go to make up good grooming, is revealed in this Opening Exhibit in its most interesting interpretations. Original models from Paris, together with the creations of leading American designers, give authoritative expression to the style tendencies of the new season. We've outdone even ourselves in preparing this showing.

Blouses

With the favor accorded the suit, the handsome blouse takes on added importance. The new peplum models are interesting features of our splendid assortments. Georgette, of course, maintains its leadership among the fabrics.

Suits Are in High Favor

While skirts have grown much shorter, they continue straight of line. The short coats in ripple effects, however, suggest the return of hips to the fashionable figure. These vie for approval with the three-quarter length coats on strictly tailored lines. It is a season of soft fabrics—of duvetyn, duvet de laine, velour, tricotine, silvertone, and two-tone materials. Those suits that are not strictly tailored are handsomely embroidered or elaborately fur-trimmed; beaver, nutria, kolinsky, natural and blended squirrel, Hudson seal, Australian opossum, ringtail, fitch, stone marten, skunk, Jap mink—all lend their beauty to the autumn suits. In color, the new browns have the preference, with navy blue bidding strongly for favor. Our showing of American reproductions and imported originals offers a wide range of selection from $45 to $275.

Furs

Never have fur fashions been more beautiful than those this season has brought forth—and never have furs been more in favor. Our broad assortments make selection easy, and our prices, by comparison, are modest.

Frocks for Every Occasion

For afternoon wear taffeta steps out in the lead, but tricolette, Paulette, tricotine, Poiret twill, velour, velvet, velveteen, satin, charmeuse, and fancy materials press closely after. Here again brown is featured, while navy and reindeer are very good. Silk embroidery, tinsel, silk cord and tassels lend charm to the new models. In frocks for street and afternoon, and in bewitching evening frocks that flatter those who need no flattery, our showing is very attractive at $22.50 to $150.

Wraps of Warmth and Beauty

Coat, cape, or dolman, it may be any of these, as you will. But its lines take on a new charm, developed in the soft, luxurious fabrics that autumn prescribes, and often richly trimmed with fur. Duvetyn is the dominant fabric and brown the color that holds the center of the stage, but there are many other materials and colors to lend especial interest to the new modes. Our showing, just now, is particularly attractive in its variety, at prices from $25 to $115.

Third Floor

Millinery Reflects the Warm Colors of Autumn

Nature's wonderful autumn hues, now richly soft, again gloriously vivid, have found their way into these new hats for the fall season. The ever-present brown in combination with burnt orange is strikingly typical. Taupe, burgundy, and henna are assured of popularity, while black, of course, holds its favor, sometimes seeking for new effects in combinations with light, soft shades such as Copenhagen blue.

Shapes range from the chic turban to the largest of rolling or drooping brims. Panne and Lyons velvet are the featured materials, often combining with brocades, fur and beaver to achieve new effects. Ostrich, burnt fancies, ribbon, wings and ornaments are used in many effective ways. Velour hats are trimmed with breast plumage and flowers. Monkey fur is in vogue. For street wear sailors of hatters' plush are good.

Our showing is very complete from $10 to $65

In lower priced hats we offer a splendid selection of new ideas at $5 to $10.

Third Floor

The Autumn Footwear

The happy combination of beauty with the qualities that go to make for satisfactory service and comfort characterizes the handsome boots we are showing for autumn. Fine black glazed leathers, together with light and dark brown kid, are good, while a few other colors are attractively used in combination with buckskin tops.

Both button and lace models will be worn, and we are featuring them in the high cut patterns, with high arches, and with the new "baby Louis" heel for those women who want the beauty of the French heel without its height. The celebrated LA FRANCE boots for women and young women are to be found here only in Chicago. Prices are moderate.

Second Floor

Undergarments, Corsets

Whether your preference is for undergarments of silk or of muslin, of domestic make or from the Philippines, you will find our stocks exceptionally complete and our prices attractively moderate. In negligees, too, our showing is particularly good.

Our September Petticoat Sale, coming just at this time, affords a notable opportunity to supply your needs in smart, well made petticoats. Read of the savings on the opposite page.

Third Floor

Smart Silk Fabrics

The silks for fall seem to set a new standard in beauty. Distinctive and exclusive designs have been developed in fabrics of rare loveliness. Satin is the fabric first in favor.

The beautiful, lustrous Directoire satins, in latest colorings and black, are splendid values at 2.95 and 3.95 the yard.

Handsome all silk charmeuse satins, 40 inches wide, in exquisite colorings, are 3.85, 4.45 and 4.95 the yard.

Our baronet satin, in the fall colorings, is noteworthy for its brilliancy. The novelty pussy willow taffetas are exceptionally beautiful.

Second Floor

Rich New Woolens

Duvetyn, tricotine and Poiret twill are high in Fashion's favor among the wool fabrics. We are showing them in all the latest and best colorings and offer them tomorrow specially under-priced as a feature of our Autumn Opening. The new peachbloom velours, the exclusive suede duvetyns, the latest fishbone chevronnes, the silvertone velours—these are among the smart new woolens that make this showing noteworthy. The special pricing tomorrow will afford an excellent opportunity to select the materials for your fall garments at particularly attractive quotations.

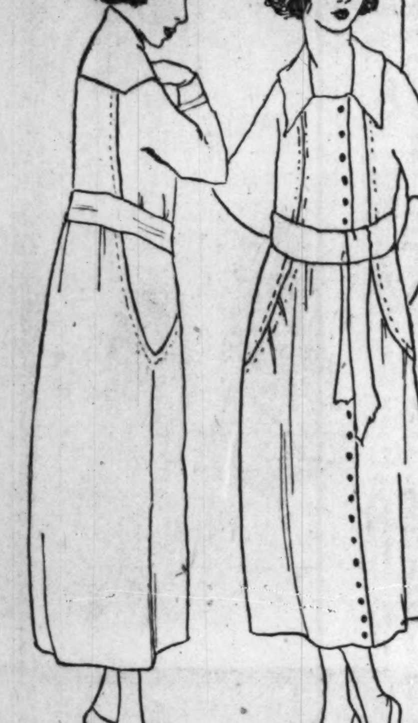
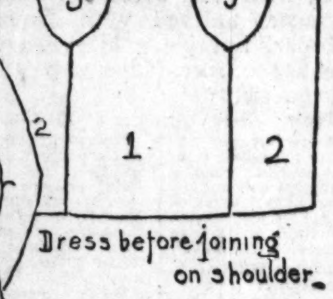
'The Coat As It Was'





Dress before joining on shoulder

Finished Dress

A RAGLAN COAT MADE INTO A DRESS.

It was a tan wool poplin coat. Of course, it was a bit faded and spotted, also out of date, but the material was of an excellent quality of medium weight. When the owner of the coat found that she needed a warm but light toned dress for her winter's work as reader and companion to an invalid aunt she found that she could not afford a new dress. But something had to be done. Aunt Edith disliked navy blue and all depressing colors.

"Rip up, and wash, and press your coat. Do the work carefully, pick out all threads; and be sure to press it on the right side. We are going to use the inside for the right side this time. I'll drop in and help you out," the friendly neighbor said.

Next day the work of making the dress was undertaken. The friendly neighbor came armed with a fierce resolve to make a presentable dress for Ann.

A simple, one piece dress pattern was selected. When the pattern was laid on the goods it was found that several inches lack in the length. In fact, the coat had been a seven-eighth length. It had also shrunk in the washing.

Now the fronts and the back (see diagram) were pieced out. The collar pieced out, the back and the cuffs did likewise for the front. But when the pinned together pattern (pinned in the sides only) was laid on the goods there was a horrid gap to be filled in.

But before this gap was attended to the fronts and the back were joined. Now a bias facing was applied to the curved edge of the gap (see diagram). This facing was basted down but not stitched the second time. Now the gap could be attended to. The raglan sleeve filled in beautifully. It was laid flat on the table and the dress placed on it, one side at a time; the faced down edges were basted down on the raglan sleeve, care being taken to keep the whole thing absolutely flat. When both sides were done the faced down edges were sitched half an inch from the edge.

Now the pattern was carefully pinned on the dress and the armholes and shoulder lines were cut.

Of course, there were no sleeves so far, nor was there any collar. There happened to be a width of white crepe meteor taken out of a too wide skirt. This was dyed at home (half an hour's time and a bit of care, and a half package of dye changed the crepe meteor to the right shade of tan). It was found that the soft luster of the silk formed a pleasing contrast to the woolen material. A pair of full length plain sleeves and a deep collar were cut from the silk. The left over pieces of silk were joined to form the facing of the belt.

The belt itself was cut from the two inside facings of the coat. As the fronts were reversed the side which had the buttonholes came on the underside. As shown in the illustration the dress closes up towards one sido. Wooden molds of a suitable size were carefully covered with the poplin and were placed close together down the front. A wide girdle and a long narrow one with slanting ends were made.

If one likes the idea of a rear closing this can be done simply by reversing the dress. Thus the fronts are trimmed off so as to close in the middle-back. In this case the dress itself can be of the jumper order and left somewhat open in the neck and have the armholes faced back. In this case any kind of waist in harmony with the dress may be worn. This suggestion would apply to goods heavier than poplin, as most people dislike heavy material for sleeves.

A facing instead of a hem is needed in most cases. And by careful joining and pressing, even the smallest scraps can be utilized. In all making over of garments attention to details is as necessary as when one is making new things.

When buttons are covered at home a flat back can be given the button by taking care in cutting the little round pieces of the material. They should be twice the diameter of the button. A strong thread is needed. When about to begin, fasten the thread well so it will not slip when the cloth is being drawn up about the mold. To gather goods, a basting stitch of five or six stitches to the inch should be taken, but this stitch should be an "overcasting" stitch. This stitch prevents a clumsy frayed back. After the thread is drawn up over the button half a dozen back and forth stitches should be taken from side to side so as to make the front and edges smooth.

DORIS BLAKE'S ANSWERS TO LOVE PROBLEMS

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care "The Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped, addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

Fellows Start Talking.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of 16 and a constant reader of your corner. I have received some valuable advice from doing so, which I appreciate very much. I now wish to obtain some advice from you. Lately, while out walking, fellows come up beside me and start talking to me. I do not like this very well, and I tell them in a very polite way to leave me. They do not seem to like this, but they go away. Is this the proper thing to do?"

ANXIOUS.

You apparently have the right way of dismissing them, but how pained I am to hear you report such ungentlemanly conduct. Is it possible, my dear, that your dress or your manner invites it? Think that point over and make a critical survey of your clothes and the way you carry yourself on the street.

Visits Him in the Office.

"Dear Miss Blake: A pretty young girl of about 16 years of age seems to be infatuated with me, for she comes into the office where I work and stands and talks for hours at a time, much to my disgust. What should I do to stop her? I have pleaded with her to stop, but she thinks I am fooling. JOHN."

Strange phenomenon of modest young womanhood, and I might be inclined to disbelieve it if I did not know of similar cases of girls visiting boys at their place of employment, much to the embarrassment of the latter and the annoyance of employers. Suppose you stop pleading, but come right out and tell the girl, John, you are threatened with the loss of your job if she continues her visits. Don't talk to her next time she comes. Or, better still, have somebody tell her you are too busy to see her, and see that you are.

A Girl in France.

"Dear Miss Blake: A friend of mine had been going steady with a very nice young man five years her senior, she being 21. He enlisted, and has just returned from over there. He was wounded several times, and seems to like a French girl, as he writes two or three times a week to her and hears from her often. He still takes my friend out and appears to think as much of her as before, except for these letters. Do you think he will eventually forget the French girl, or must his first girl, who has been so faithful, be the one to suffer? This has been on my mind for some time, and I come to you for advice. Thank you ever so much. M."

He may forget the French girl. Distance, regardless of its reputation to the contrary, does not lend such enchantment, nor absence always make the heart grow fonder. Tell your American friend she has ten chances to the French girl's one, for it is a long way to Paris, once the war is over.

Gives Him No Rest.

"Dear Biss Blake: I am a girl of 19 and am going with a fellow of 21. He went with a French girl before and she proved false and he came back to me. I went with him before her. Now I want you to be so kind and tell me what to do, because the French girl does not give him any rest, she always calls him up and he told her he didn't want anything to do with her, but still she calls. Now he asked me to call her up and tell her to leave him alone, but my mother don't want me to. I asked some of my friends; some say no, some say yes, and now I'm asking you. "W. S."

How undignified it would be for you to call up the girl in question. Don't you do it. Let the man attend to getting himself out of the scrape he undoubtedly walked into easily enough. That would be regular back fence tactics were you to make it your business to tell her to leave the man alone.

They Have an Agreement.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 16 years old and have been going steadily with a young man for a year. We have an agreement that we will not go with anyone else. Is this right at my age? We are very serious. C. Mc."

On the contrary! What foolish children! Why be serious at the only age you have perfectly liberty to be care free and happy?

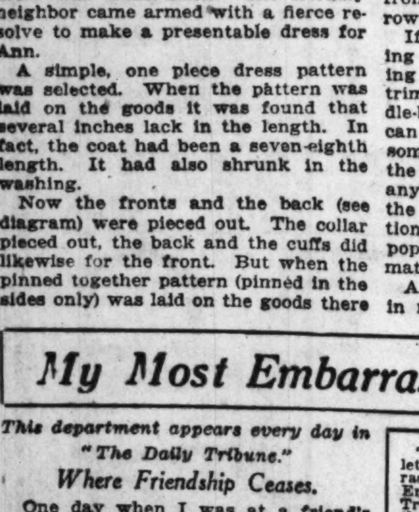
Where Friendship Ceases.

One day when I was at a friend's house we got to discussing another girl. I said some things that were not at all complimentary about her, when the girl under discussion climbed out from under the bed. She had gone under the bed for fun, but she never spoke to me again. K. T.



All Out.

One evening I was accompanying two young women home. We got on a car in which there were but two vacant seats. They sat down together and I excused myself, thinking I would take a smoke on the front platform. I got to talking to some fellows and before I realized it we were at the end of the car line. I rushed in the car, but needless to say, did not find the two girls, as we had passed their corner about a mile back. R. D. S.

In Bad with the Boss.

I was relating to my boss and several other of the office employés my experience in writing to a young man whom I had never met, having found his address on an egg while working in a grocery store several years ago.

I emphatically exclaimed that as soon as he informed me he had red hair I quit corresponding with him, as I hate red hair. I had forgotten my boss had red hair, and you can imagine my embarrassment after that exclamation, for he was one of the most interested listeners. M. B. F.

THE TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

"Snow on the Mountain" Dessert.

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

By Jane Eddington.

APPLE SAUCES.

ALMOST white apple sauce, green apple sauce, pink apple sauce, red apple sauce, apple compote —it is easy to make any or all of these from any one of the varieties of cooking apples. The color mostly depends on how you cook the apple. My real theme, however, is how to make apple sauce by the quickest method, and a sauce which is a thick puree or true sauce, not some pieces of apple floating in a sloppy liquid.

The Whitest Apple Sauce.

Wash apples, peel, core, quarter and cut each quarter in thin slices. Pour one cup of boiling water or enough to cover almost, over the amount three apples make, or a generous portion for two people, set over gas flame turned high enough to make water boil with some violence, cover kettle closely, and in from two to five minutes the apples will be cooked. Pour into a bowl and immediately whip with an unworn turbine egg beater. To sweeten fall apples add three level tablespoons of sugar unless the sauce is to be used with meat. A small aluminum kettle with close fitting cover is the best utensil for apple sauce, especially if you are not a careful cook. Otherwise use unstained white enamel, in which you cannot cook apple sauce or anything else in quite so short a time and which is ruined, or nearly so, if the sauce is not watched but is allowed to burn on.

Sauce for the Goose.

Apple sauce whipped as described will have the fine grained jam-like consistency of the fruit butters or jam, and that is the ideal sauce, unsweetened, to serve with roast goose or roast pork. It may be a bit thinner than a jam, but should have the consistency of a thin corn meal porridge cooked to perfection, without a lump. It should not separate so as to leave any watery drops. In other words, it should have the "mus" or puree quality which is usually secured by sieving the apple sauce. To beat it is simpler and quicker, and requires less dish washing than the sieving. If sieved the ideal "tammis" is a hair sieve, as a sauce gets a taste of wire. It may also taste of a beater, but there is no need of having the two in contact more than a minute, or perhaps less. Apples readily take the flavor of tin or a poor spoon. A wooden spoon is best for any stirring, otherwise use silver. If we could get a bamboo whisk, such as the Dutch import from the East Indies, that would be the best thing for the whipping.

Pink Apple Sauce.

If apples with no redder a skin than the Duchess has are cooked with the skins on, the shade of the sauce will be pink and the sauce should have that indescribable flavor of the green apple which of the right variety fairly bursts when cooked for apple sauce, just as popcorn bursts. Wash the apples carefully, and cut off any defects, quarter and core and cut quarters in thin slices. Pour one cup of boiling water over an amount of apples enough to make an ample cup of sauce, and cook, covered, over rapid fire. The meaty or pulpy part will break in two minutes, in the case of the Duchess, which is an apple of soft texture. Turn the fire down and let the sauce simmer about eight minutes longer, then take from fire and whip. There is no need of straining the skins out, but this can be done. When an apple makes an insipid sauce, the skins should always be cooked with the rest, even if wilted so much that they will not cook tender, just for the flavor in them. If apple sauce is to be served with game, the flavor of the skin is needed in most cases.

Apple Snow.

By beating one egg white till stiff, adding one cup of either of the apple sauces quickly made, as just described, and sugar to taste, about one-fourth cup, usually, we get a dessert that may be built up in pretty forms, to be tipped with whipped cream. The apple sauce with the more positive flavor is best for this, as egg white makes for flatness.

For reasons which cannot here be described, because too lengthy, I named the dessert of the picture "snow on the mountain," for that wonderfully foliaged plant you may see in some parks and fine gardens. On a layer of cottage cheese seasoned and mixed with cream I heaped apple snow and then put whipped cream on top, through a pastry bag.

Thick Apple Sauce.

For the making of the stiffest kind of an apple snow, a sauce may be made without cutting the apples smaller than quarters, and without covering the broad and flat bottomed kettle in which it is cooked. In this case you not only cook the apple quickly, but you cook away most of the water. Since the pieces are large it is easy to see when the water is nearly cooked out. Of course, the thinner the layer and broader the bottom of the kettle the faster the water will evaporate. Beat the sauce as soon as taken from the fire. The liquid and pulp will not blend perfectly when the apple sauce is cold.

Not only the appearance of an apple sauce prepared by beating is superior, but less sugar is required, apparently, because so much air is beaten in.

Red Apple Sauce.

The best way to cook apples so that they have a deep red color is to bake them in a deep earthen dish under a crust, sugar being cooked with them. The old New England name for this form of pie was "pan dowdy." When baked long and slowly as in a brick oven it was delicious. With a hot stone in the fireless cooker, we can get something the same effect, but no fireless cooker will hold those deep yellow baking dishes, twelve or fifteen inches broad, such as the pan dowdy was baked in. Instead of a crust we may bake apple sauce in a covered casserole, or in an earthen baking dish covered with a plate, long and slowly until it is deep red.

Apple Compote.

Stir one cup of sugar with one-half cup of water until the sugar is perfectly dissolved, and cook for five minutes or to sirup stage, put in quarters of apple and just simmer until they are tender. There are various ways of flavoring apples so cooked. If cooked in a plum sirup they will be of beautiful color and that strong flavor of the plum which is too pronounced will be agreeably modified. The number of ways apples can be of service in similar ways, with other fruits, are many.

There are apples, including the Duchess, which we get at this time of year, that will go to pieces almost in spite of us, even if we design a compote in which the apples should retain their shape. But there is no need of despairing. If you have started with a sirup call the broken mixture a jam. Here is one way of making a nice cup of apple jam which is good to mix, when served, with some of the too sweet things like the tomato jams, which, according to most recipes, give us something almost nauseatingly sweet:

Wash, peel, quarter and core two good sized apples. Have ready a sirup made of one-fourth cup of corn sirup, one-fourth cup sugar and one-fourth cup of water cooked until thick. Put the apples into this and cook for fifteen minutes. This will be rather dark pink in shade and will jelly.

Candied Apples.

Corn sirup and water may be used, or a sugar sirup made of one-fourth cup of sugar. Stir this over the fire until the sugar is completely dissolved, and the sirup boils. Put into it then two large apples washed, peeled, quartered, cored and the quarters halved or cut in three slices. Gently simmer over fire until the apple is transparent, if it take an hour. Drain off the sirup which may be used again and dry the apple in a slow oven or in the sun under glass. This quantity is enough for two medium loaves of baked brown bread. Candied apples make a brown bread delicious, are good to use in fruit cake with other fruits and in puddings. It may be put away in the sirup and dried just before it is to be used, but it keeps better than some candied fruits if it is dried and put away either with a little sugar or without it.

All measurements are made level in these recipes. A teaspoon of regulation size holds sixty drops. Three level teaspoons equal one level tablespoon. Sixteen level tablespoons equal one cup (one-half pint). The half-pint measuring cup is the standard measuring cup used in modern cookery.

By Elizabeth O. Hiller.

Peach Cake.

Sift together two cups of pastry flour, one-half teaspoon salt, three teaspoons of baking powder and three tablespoons of granulated sugar. Beat the yolks of two eggs until thick and lemon tinted; add to dry ingredients with three tablespoons of melted butter and one cup of milk. Beat batter thoroughly until smooth, then cut and fold in the stifly beaten whites of two eggs. Turn mixture into a shallow well buttered pan, spread evenly [cake should fill pan to the depth of three-fourths of an inch]. Peel stone, and cut firm ripe peaches into quarters and arrange in three parallel rows, pressing the sharp edges into the butter. Sprinkle with three tablespoons of sugar and lightly with nutmeg or cinnamon. Bake twenty-five minutes in a hot oven. Serve hot with sweetened cream or with whipped cream sweetened and delicately flavored with lemon extract.

Corn Toast.

Melt one and one-half tablespoons of butter in a saucepan; in it cook one-half tablespoon finely chopped onion three minutes without browning, stirring constantly. Add one cup of cooked tender green corn cut from the cobs, one cup each of milk and cream. Season with one teaspoon of sugar, one-half teaspoon of salt and one-fourth teaspoon of paprika. Bring to the boiling point and simmer slowly five minutes. Have ready six slices of hot buttered toast, arranged on a hot serving platter. Pour over corn mixture and sprinkle with paprika. Serve immediately.

Hard Cooked Eggs in Sauce Soubise.

Put cold water into a saucepan and add the required number of fresh eggs. Bring to the boiling point, then reduce the heat to the simmering point or place saucepan over the simmer burner, turn the flame low so as not to allow the water to boil, let cook at this low temperature forty minutes. The last minute of cooking increase the heat and let the water boil rapidly one minute. This last short period of rapid boiling shrinks the white of the eggs from the membrane lining the shell and the eggs can be removed from the shells without spoiling their shape. The white of eggs cooked in this way is of a jellylike consistency and the yolks will crumble easily and a raw spot will not be found in the centers. Remove the shells and cut the eggs into quarters lengthwise, arrange on a hot serving platter in a nest of hot, well seasoned boiled rice, and pour over one or more cups of sauce soubise. Sprinkle with finely chopped parsley and serve for luncheon or supper.

Sauce Soubise.

Cover two and one-half cups of sliced onions with boiling water, boil five minutes, drain and cover again with boiling salted water and let cook until soft; drain and rub through a purée strainer (there should be one cup of pulp). Melt two tablespoons of butter in a saucepan, add two tablespoons of flour mixed with one-half teaspoon of salt and one-eighth teaspoon of white pepper; stir to a smooth paste, then add gradually one-half cup of chicken stock or white stock, stirring constantly; add the onion purée and three-fourths cup of hot cream, bring to the boiling point and pour over prepared eggs.

Pan Broiled Ripe Tomatoes.

Cut firm, uniform size ripe peeled tomatoes in halves crosswise; touch lightly each slice with a bruised clove of garlic, sprinkle with salt, pepper and add one-fourth teaspoon of sugar to each slice of tomato. Melt two tablespoons of butter in an omelet pan, arrange tomatoes in pan, and cook until tender. Turn and season the same as the other side and pour over one-half cup of hot cream. Let simmer until sauce is slightly thickened. With a broad blade knife lift carefully to a hot serving platter and pour over the sauce. Serve with breaded veal, roast pork, or with a puffy omelet.

Corn Relish.

Cut the corn from twenty ears of golden bantam corn; wipe three green peppers, remove the stems and discard the seeds; chop and pass twice through a meat chopper; drain the pimentos from one small can, rinse with cold water, and dry between towels and finely chop. Finely chop one small solid head of white cabbage and three medium sized Spanish onions. Mix all thoroughly; put into an agate kettle and add one pint of white wine vinegar. Sift together twice one-fourth cup of salt, two cups of granulated sugar, one-third cup of flour, one-half teaspoon of turmeric and two tablespoons of yellow mustard. Add one-half teaspoon of celery seed and slowly one pint of white wine vinegar, stirring constantly. Heat the vegetables to the boiling point, continue stirring; then add slowly the seasoning and vinegar. Continue stirring and cooking thirty-five minutes. Turn into half-pint, sterilized glass jars, seal, and when cold store. If vinegar is very acid, use three cups of vinegar and one cup of water.

Coddled Apples.

This is an old fashioned method of cooking apples and one that is dear to the hearts of the New Englander. Pare firm rather tart apples of uniform size; core carefully without breaking the apples. Arrange them in a porcelain lined kettle, sprinkle them thickly with sugar, and cover the bottom of the kettle with boiling water, cover the kettle and allow the apples to steam on the back of the range or in a very moderate oven until tender but not broken. Lift carefully with a griddle cake spade to the serving dish. Strain over the sirup and set aside in a cool place. Then chill and serve with cream sweetened and flavored with nutmeg.

"Pete's" Corn Meal Griddle Cakes.

Mix and sift two cups of corn meal, one cup of flour, and one teaspoon of salt. Beat two eggs until thick and lemon tinted, add gradually to first mixture, stirring constantly. Dissolve one and one-half teaspoons of soda in two and one-half cups of buttermilk or rich clappered milk. Add to mixture and beat thoroughly. Two tablespoons of sausage fat may be added to this batter, and is considered an addition to the flavor. If this batter is allowed to stand too long it thickens; it may be thinned by adding more sour milk. The sour milk must be rich if you would have delicious cakes. Country buttermilk is best for this purpose if it can be had. Cook as other griddle cakes and serve at once.

Chocolate Nougat Cake.

Cream one-half cup of butter in an earthen bowl, using a wooden spoon, add gradually one and one-half cups of fine granulated sugar, stirring constantly. Melt (over hot water) four squares of unsweetened chocolate, add one tablespoon of boiling water and two tablespoons of sugar, stir over a very slow fire until mixture is perfectly smooth. When slightly cool gradually beat into the creamed butter and sugar. Add three eggs beaten until thick and lemon tinted, add one teaspoon of vanilla. Sift together two cups of pastry flour, three teaspoons of baking powder, and one-eighth teaspoon of salt. Add alternately to first mixture with one cup of milk. Beat mixture thoroughly—turn into two well buttered square layer cake pans and bake twenty-five minutes in a moderate oven. When slightly cool spread between layers boiled marshmallow frosting. Cover top and sides with frosting and sprinkle immediately with blanched and finely shredded almonds. Boiled marshmallow frosting has been published in these columns several times.

Cream of Rice Soup.

Remove the fat from one quart of chicken broth and strain through a fine sieve. Cook one-fourth cup of rice in boiling salted water until soft; drain well and rub rice through a strainer. Heat chicken broth to the boiling point, add rice, one-half teaspoon of finely chopped parsley, and one-half cup of hot cream. Serve with croutons or crisp crackers.

W. W.: At a five o'clock wedding, the ushers wear the same outfit as that in which the groom appears; namely, a morning coat; gray striped trousers; gray waistcoat, tie, socks, and gloves; a white shirt; patent leather shoes. Their duties are: To show the guests to their seats, to stretch the ribbons [if they are being used], to walk up the aisle as soon as the bridegroom and best man have taken their place near the chancel steps, and to stand beside them during ceremony. In the recessional, they walk down the aisle, each with a bridesmaid, following the maid of honor and the best man, who, in turn, are immediately preceded by the bride and groom.

BRIDE-TO-BE: For your linen chest you will, I think, need the following things: Four tablecloths (three of them 2x2 yards, the other 2x3 yards), two and a half dozen napkins (eighteen of ordinary size and quality, the other handsomer, to be used with the large tablecloth), one table pad, three luncheon sets (centerpiece and doilies, one of these to be a litle daintier than the rest, for "best"), twelve tea napkins, a few sideboard and tray covers, two carving cloths, a dozen dish towels and as many glass towels, six dishcloths, twelve dusters, twelve bedroom towels, twelve guest towels, eight bath towels, a dozen washcloths, four pairs of hemstitched cotton sheets, a like number of linen pillow cases, four bureau scarfs, four bedspreads, three pairs of blankets, and two comforters.

Hurts Only Dirt

When My Baby Came

WHEN they put that warm, fragrant little bundle into my arms and told me he was perfect, I cried. I was so happy.

Of course, I was going to nurse him. And so I did, for two months. But he didn't gain weight as fast as he should.

Then the doctor told me not to worry, and that often mothers couldn't nurse their babies.

"The nearest thing to mother's milk I know of," he said, "is Nestlé's Milk Food."

"Of course, he has to have milk in some form—and Nestlé's is pure milk only made easier to digest because the tough curds are broken up. To that they add just the right amount of sugar and cereal, so you just add water to Nestlé's, boil it, and your baby has all the nourishment he needs in the safest form."

Then when he began to gain weight—when the dimples began to show on his knees and his plump little elbows—I knew what happiness really was!

The Nestlé Company sent me free a Mother's Book on how to take care of baby, and enough of the Food for twelve feedings.

If you fill out and send the coupon below, I know they will be glad to help you as they helped me and as they have been helping mothers all over the world for fifty years.

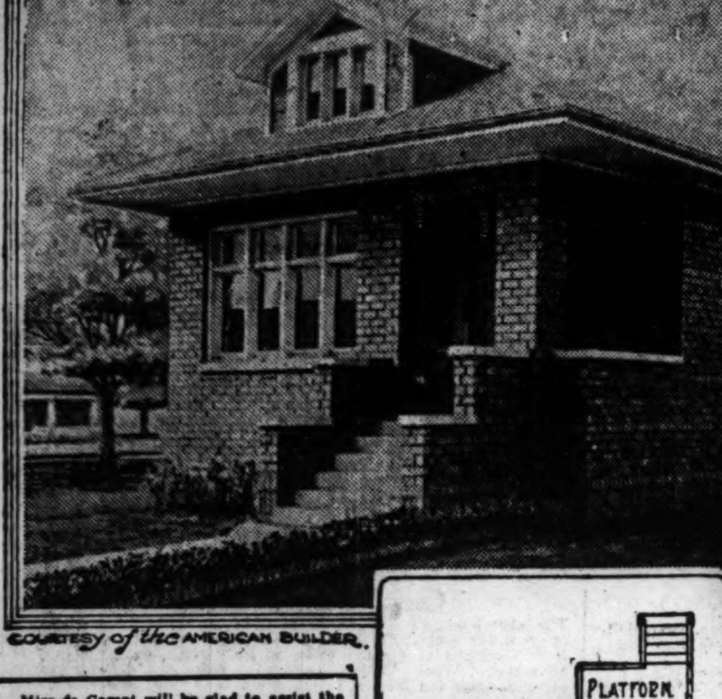
The HOME HARMONIOUS

by Anita de Campi



COURTESY of the AMERICAN BUILDER.

A Simple Cottage Furnished In Peasant Style.

Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

FURNISHING SMALL HOUSE.

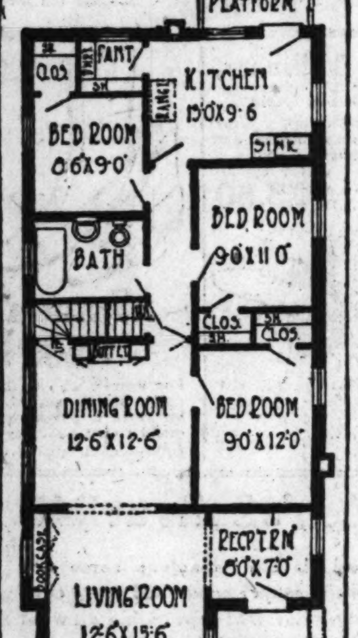
IN furnishing a little house of the very ordinary type shown here the first thing to consider is that the dominant feature of the building itself is absolute simplicity. To make the interior consistent with the exterior this feature must be maintained throughout. Do not commit the error of buying elaborate furniture on the grounds that you expect to live in the house only a short while and that you will retain your furnishings in more elaborate surroundings. Wait until you really are in more elaborate surroundings. Buy simple things for the simple house and sell them together with the house when prosperity permits of something more magnificent.

Buying sumptuous furniture for a little cottage makes me think of the plaintive reminiscence of an acquaintance. He said that when he was a boy his mother, who had what he called erratic ideas of economy, always bought his clothes several sizes too large for him. The expectation of his "growing into" them was of course perfectly practical, but the trouble was that by the time that he "grew into" them they were always worn out! The consciousness of an absurd appearance had ruined his youth.

The moral is clearly to look to immediate needs and never to spoil tomorrow with today.

The most attractive cottage furniture that can be had this season is adapted from the peasant furniture of foreign countries. It is a little different from the ordinary painted furniture in its definite colorings of solid yellow, blue-black, red, or other vivid tone trimmed with lines or floral motifs in contrasting color. You know what a few yards of bright colored chintz will do for a dull room by way of cheering it up? Well, the peasant furniture has the same bewitching trick. For use with peasant cottage furniture, plain or striped draperies are better than figured ones.

Brick or stucco houses are becoming more and more popular in the suburbs and in the rural districts. There is a something about brick and kindred materials that gives an impression of stability, and as now the difference in cost between homes of this sort and frame structures is so little the builder prefers them.



Floor Plan of Narrow Lot Brick Cottage Size 24 by 54 FEET.

The building site, too, in a large city and in the suburbs is more costly than in the country districts, so that the average home builder selects a design that will be suited to a narrow lot.

The design shown in the accompanying illustration is admirably suited for city or suburban lots, having a width of only twenty-four feet, which leaves a good sized space on either side when put on a site as narrow as thirty feet.

The depth of the home is fifty-four feet. However, the exterior, with its porch sunk into the corner of the house, the overhanging hip roof, and the dormer window, has a pleasing appearance.

This little brick bungalow contains six rooms, bath, and reception hall, all arranged for comfort and convenience and to supply the needs of a good sized family. There are living and dining rooms, kitchen, and three bedrooms. The living room is 12 feet 6 inches by 15 feet 6 inches, but as the openings from both the reception hall and the dining room are wide the room really is more spacious than the dimensions indicate.

The dining room is 12 feet 6 inches square and is a light and nice room. One bedroom is alongside it, while the second is directly back of the first and the third is at the rear corner of the house, with the bath between the latter two. The kitchen is of a size sufficient to take care of the family, but not so large as to make the work difficult.

It will be noted by the floor plan that there are several built-in pieces of furniture, which add to the attractiveness of the interior. In the living room is a bookcase underneath a high window; in the dining room is a buffet, while in the kitchen and pantry are shelves and cases. All of these make the home more comfortable and the work of caring for it less toilsome.

Under the main portion of the bungalow is a cellar with concrete floor and walls. The flue is placed toward the front of the house and almost opposite to the stairway, which leads off the hall adjoining the dining room. The heating plant, of course, will be at the front of the basement, while the balance may be partitioned off to provide cold storage space for vegetables, fruits, and other foodstuffs.

The house is supported by a concrete foundation. The walls are of common brick, faced with either buff or tan face brick, or any other color that may suit the taste of the builder.

While all the rooms of the home are on the one floor, there is considerable attic space, which keeps the house cooler in the summer and warmer in the winter. The cost of this bungalow is not great; in fact, it is most economical to build and will make a fine home for the average family. Besides, there is nothing unusual about the design, which makes it readily salable.

Answers to Queries.

MRS. K. A. S.: Stain your wicker furniture in walnut, and fit it up with new back and seat cushions of brightly flowered glazed chintz. Have curtains of cream colored casement cloth edged with bright colored fringe. Paint the woodwork old ivory.

MRS. H. H.: I am afraid the effect will be patchy if you have a different sort of woodwork in each room. I should advise you not to attempt it. And let me adjure you not to have a pink wall. Use a light neutral tint on the bedroom wall—sand or old ivory or pearl, and introduce the pink in small areas. Have rose colored curtains and a pearl and rose chintz bed cover. Let the bed match the other articles of furniture. Use very pale putty color for your living room walls.

* *

MRS. F. J. Q.: Side bracket candles (electric) would make the best lighting addition for your living room. Have a window seat cover of sand colored homespun, trim it at the edge with hand made blue worsted fringe, and embroider it sketchily in blue. Have draw curtains of sand colored casement cloth. Lace shades would be out of keeping with your roughly finished interior. Use yellow and white striped sunfast in your bedroom. Use mauve and white in the next room. Two tones of old ivory would be nice for the bathroom.

For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Miss Mary King, "The Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

Mary King.

CLOTHES ECONOMY.

ECONOMY is the keynote of the times. Along with the high cost of living the subject of economy is of vital interest to the business girl. Amongst the majority of workers salary increases have not kept pace with the advancing prices of necessities and the problem of making ends meet today is a serious one.

During the period of the war in order to subscribe to the various Liberty loans and other government securities, the business girl valiantly refrained from indulging herself in accustomed luxuries. However, with living expenses as high as they are now, something more than merely an occasional giving up of a luxury will be required of the business girl if she is going to keep herself free from debt.

There are many and various ways of eliminating waste and practicing economy, but the business girl's greatest opportunity toward economy is, I believe, in the matter of her clothes. It is unwise and unsafe for her to try to cut down her expenses by eating insufficient or unwholesome food. Therefore the suggestions given by the business girl in the following letter ought to be of interest to others:

"Dear Miss King: Up to this year I always had saved part of my salary. For the first month or two of the year I found that it was impossible for me to do without the weekly sum I had been putting in the bank. Three months ago I saw that if I did not make some change in my mode of living I would soon find myself buried in debt.

"The thought of getting into debt overwhelmed me. That was something that I couldn't stand, and as I saw no immediate relief in the way of being able to earn more money I decided that I would simply have to start an economy campaign.

"I looked about at the girls in the office and noticed that in spite of the high cost of living they were for the most part beautifully and expensively dressed. Well, some of them could afford it, as they were not entirely dependent on their own earnings. As for the others, I couldn't figure out how they managed to wear such expensive looking clothes unless they were 'head over heels' in debt. As I have absolutely to depend on my own resources, and being determined not to get into debt, I decided that I simply couldn't try to compete with the other girls in the quantity or quality of my clothes.

"Since making the resolution to economize, I haven't spent any money on new clothes. It has cost me a little, however, to have some of my old dresses, coats, shoes, and hats put into presentable condition. However, that little has been well spent. I have been more than surprised to find that dresses which I thought I would never wear again look almost as good as new after having them cleaned and changed a bit to conform to the present style. One hat which I believed was utterly unfit for further wear, and for which I had paid a week's salary, was renovated by refacing the brim and putting fresh ribbon on the crown and it cost me only a dollar!

"I had all my old shoes resoled and reheeled, and I find on checking up my collection that I will not have to buy another pair for at least a year.

"I invested in a shoe blacking outfit a few months ago and I find that I have already saved the price of it in shining my own shoes instead of paying 15 cents twice a week to have them shined not nearly as well as I do it myself.

"The coat I wore for the last two winters faded considerably and I thought I would have to have a new one for the coming winter, but I have decided that after having it dyed and relined it will do very well for another season's wear.

"I find, of course, that I have to take a great deal more care in keeping my old clothes looking well, but the extra time and trouble I spend on them are more than repaid to me in contentment, as I find I have lost the false pride I had in new and expensive clothes, and I am now able to save the same amount of money each week that I saved last year. L. A. R."

WHAT FINGERS and FINGERNAILS TELL US

by DORIS BLAKE

EARLIER in this series it was explained to you the meanings of lines in the hands and other palmistry features. Today we will take the fingers and fingernails as they may be interpreted as telltales of character.

Short fingers denote amiability, an easy going disposition, a smooth, easy talker, but lacking the power of deep thought or study.

Large fingers mean slow intellect and ordinary tastes.

Fingers that are small but not thin are found with a clever, acute mind, and one somewhat given to deceit.

Fat fingers are lazy fingers.

Extremely lean fingers denote penuriousness.

Very pointed fingers indicate imagination and exaggeration and religious fervor.

Orderly folk, strong minded, have square fingers.

A coarse, brutal nature is detected through fingers as large at the tips as at the roots.

The conqueror has a second finger that leans toward the first.

Fortune and influence follow where the second finger leans toward the third.

Celebrities have a third finger that leans toward the fourth.

Fingers that are all the same length are those of a dishonest person.

A generous nature is revealed by fingers that curl upward. If they curve downward, it indicates a niggardly nature.

It is a sign of a weak mind to sit with the thumbs turned in and held by the fingers.

Thumbs that bend up are those of the curious-minded.

A weak character is indicated by a small, narrow thumb.

The length of the upper joint of your thumb determines the strength of your will power.

Thumbs that curve downward are those of the shrewd and the miserly.

Coarse, heavy, wide thumbs belong to crude, ignorant folk.

One who hides his thumbs in the palm of his hand is not to be trusted.

The spendthrift may be told by the thumb turning back.

The second division of the thumb reveals your power of determination.

There is a belief that the first finger should never be used to rub ointment on with because the power of cure has been deprived of it since Judas Iscariot betrayed our Lord by pointing him out to the Jews.

Wide awake minds are indicated by the middle finger being very much longer than the palm of the hand.

If the end of the little finger reaches higher than the last joint of the ring finger he or she shall rule the house. If one's little finger is below the third joint of the ring finger you will be wed twice.

If you can make the tips of the first and fourth fingers meet over the back of your hand you can attain anything your heart desires.

If you curl your little finger you are blueblooded.

To find out if you are going to be the ruler of your house clasp your hands together, interlacing the fingers. If the right thumb comes on top you will rule. If the left you will be ruled.

Interlock fingers with another and you will quarrel.

Some one is jealous of you when the skin tears at the root of your finger nail.

Double jointed folk are born piano players.

When a person's joints crack easily it is a sign you will die young.

To find out how many husbands you will have or wives pull the fingers once and they will be as many as you can make the separate joints crack.

Pale colored or dead white fingers indicate melancholy.

A broad, liberal minded person may be told by round nails.

Petty natured, conceited folk have small finger nails.

The born warrior is the man who can boast red spotted finger nails.

Mixed and diverse coloring of the nails indicates a quarrelsome nature.

Mischievous folk have narrow fingernails.

A fierce nature is indicated by fingernails crooked at the extremity.

Witty folk have broad, plain, white nails.

Almond shaped and rosy nails are the blessed of the gods.

Long crooked nails are the signs of a brute.

If you have white marks on your nails you will be unfortunate in love. Others say these white marks are a record of the lies you tell.

A torn finger nail is a sign of a disappointment.

People with the nail biting habit are envious, jealous and malicious.

Luxurious tastes are indicated by nails that grow into the flesh at points.

It is a sign of a short life if your nails cup over.

Bright Sayings of the Children

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, "The Tribune," Chicago.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

The just arrived baby girl at my cousin's house is deemed worth a new baby carriage for her small self, and there were whoops of delight when her three little brothers were told they could have their old buggy to convert into an automobile or whatever they pleased. Finding the three of them piled into it, riding down a short but perilous slope, their father forbade it. As two playmates had been promised a trip, he reluctantly said, "Very well, just one more."

The weight of five proved to be too much for the old buggy and it toppled over with a crash. As the father rushed toward the struggling mass of arms and legs he heard the shrill voice of his wee son Colin wailing out: "O-o-oh, dear! The brown legs is me!"

At Edward's fourth birthday party there were many children about his age, then there were others, friends of his sister, who were 7 and over. Bobby, one of Edward's small guests, on reaching home, said, "I was the biggest of the littlest ones there."

J. M.

A small neighbor boy of 6, talking about a little girl playmate of 7, after the girl had cried over a small hurt, in way of excusing her, said, "O, well, you know she is a little girl and so young an' everything." F. M. K.

While my sister and her small son from another town were visiting me, I played and romped with the little 4 year old. I wanted him to have a very good time while here on his visit. Most children enjoy playing with grownups. I did my best to make him happy.

The day they were departing I said to my sister: "Well, Vernon surely had a good time."

The little lad answered back quick as a flash: "So did you, aunty. Didn't I play with you?" MRS. G. E. C.

Charles was known as a scrapper by all his playmates and could whip any boy in his neighborhood. Finally a new family moved to town whose boy was about his own age. Charles tackled him and received a good whipping at his hands. He went home crying, and the next day announced to his playmates: "I want you all to understand that from this time on I'm an unscrapper." M. E.

I helped my little niece on her tricycle over a crossing by taking hold of the front part of the tricycle and lifting it onto the sidewalk. She explained that that was not the right way to do it; I should have pulled her up by the handle, and then, with a sweet desire to find an excuse for my ignorance, she quickly added: "But, of course, you wouldn't know how, because you are not the mother of a child." They look upon this unique combination of high quality and low price as a "discovery" that they take pride in sharing with their friends. Women know the difference in face powders. That is why they cling to "JARDIN de ROSE" after using it once.

And it clings to them. But that is only one of its virtues. It not only stays on—it benefits as well as beautifies the skin. It is not only so pure that it cannot injure even a baby's skin—it is actually soothing and healing to skins that are thin, sensitive or irritated. It is so fine that it is always a pleasure to apply it—so truly invisible that no one but you need know it is there if you use the proper tint—and so delicately fragrant that it becomes a luxury as well as a necessity. One trial proves all of these claims—and more. Thank you.

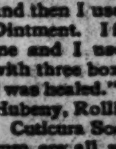
Miss Emily Hubeny Tells How Cuticura Healed Pimples



"Being forced to perform outdoor work I was troubled with heat pimples over my hands, face and neck. The pimples were very hard and red and were in great blotches. I became a sufferer of severe itching and loss of sleep. Scratching burst the pimples and a coating of scales came over the irritated places that caused great disfigurement.

"This trouble lasted two months and then I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I found that they relieved me and I used four cakes of Soap with three boxes of Ointment when I was healed." (Signed) Miss Emily Hubeny, Rolling Stone, Minn.

CITY BOYS ON THE FARM

By Frank Ridgway.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

FEW things that came out of the war have been of greater significance than the benefits derived from the United States Boys' Working reserve. "We are still too close to the Boys' Working reserve movement to realize its full import," said Burridge D. Butler, who was federal state director of the Boys' Working reserve in Illinois. He has just issued a report of the work of the reserve in this state which ended a few weeks ago.

It is not necessary to recount here in full the remarkable service of the reserve. Figures are soon forgotten, but through the work of the reserve activities have been started which are of great benefit, and will continue to grow in importance. Yet, anything like a complete recognition of the full significance of American education and life of this organization will probably have to wait for time to tell.

One of the most important benefits derived by the boys who went out on the farms to work is perhaps best indicated in the following letter written to Mr. Butler by James E. Armstrong, assistant superintendent of schools of Chicago:

> I have been very much impressed by the fact that the boys who went from the city high schools to the farms returned to school with a new earnestness of purpose never seen in them before.
> Teachers have remarked to me frequently that these boys were not only greatly improved in their attitude toward their school work, but that they had imparted a new spirit to other boys of the school. It seems as if the conscious effort on their part to do their bit in winning the war by helping the farmer raise food to supply the world, and their contact with some of the real problems of life have awakened in them a greater sense of responsibility.
> If we can now take advantage of what we have gained by this experience in boy training, we shall have made a real advance in our methods of education. We are grateful as school men to the United States Boys' Working reserve for making all this possible.

Response in Every State.

Back in the early summer of 1917 President Wilson wrote: "I call upon the able bodied boys of the land to turn in hordes to the farms and make certain that no pains and no labor are lacking in this great nation."

The result was that "our second line of defense," as Mr. Hoover first called it, the Boys' Working reserve, was formed. There was a spontaneous response in every state, many schools and other organizations undertaking the work of placing thousands of boys who went out to help the farmers with their work. Big problems had to be met, but in 1917, according to the report, 1,500 boys went from the high schools of Illinois to the farms and became a vital force in helping win the war.

In 1918 this army of boys from 16 to 21 years old was more than 250,000 in the United States, and of this number 21,000 were from the high schools of Illinois. The slogan, "Not an idle boy in Illinois until the war is over" was well lived up to. But a better demonstration of how the boys helped the farmers in 1918 is shown in the following summary:

Boys in state eligible for farm work	105,000
Boys enrolled in the reserve	45,000
Boys placed on farms	21,000
Service badges awarded	11,374
Service bars awarded	9,204
Boys produced crops worth	$23,000,000
Boys earned for themselves	$1,200,000
From craft lessons supplied to schools, libraries, Y. M. C. A., boys' clubs, and individuals	20,500

The work of organizing the youths of the country and sending them out to the farms was a big task. It operated through the State Council of Defense, enlisting all the agencies touching boy life. And the mobilization and training of the high school boys for labor on the farm and in industry was made possible through the coöperation of all forces and influences of the nation and state public school system, colleges, sectarian and private schools, colleges of agriculture, agricultural and industrial organizations, and welfare organizations.

Farmers Skeptical at First.

Most of the farmers refused to consider employing a city boy on the farm at first. "Those boys never worked on a farm, they don't know a horse from a cow," remarked one farmer. "City boys would be only in the way smoking their cigarets and asking questions," he said. That is the way they looked at the matter at first, but the boys were trained before they were sent out. They were given simple directions in the high schools on such subjects as harnessing, driving, and feeding the horse, handling farm machinery, cultivating corn, making hay, splicing rope, caring for the garden, and similar topics.

When the boys were ready to be assigned to a farm job the farmers were reluctant about taking them. At first the farmers confessed they were skeptical, but some of them agreed to take a boy or two and see what happened. They were surprised. The boys made them open their eyes, and in a few weeks the skeptical farmer was saying: "Send me more boys; the boys are certainly making good." It wasn't long until there were boys scattered here and there by the thousands. This meant much to the farmers, for there was an average of one worker from every farm in service, and the boys took their places.

The boys received an average of about $1 a day and board. Four out of five made good. Some of the boys who were not in school were taken out on the farms, but were soon brought back. They caused a great deal of trouble. While practically all of these from the high schools made good, others could not adapt themselves. In some cases where boys failed they were not at fault, but were afraid of horses and cows and could not become adjusted to the new surroundings. One-half of them were considered producers, while about one-fourth filled a place in the home that made their stay worth while.

There were surprises for all, and perhaps a better understanding between city and country people will be the result. The farmer thought the city boy was a loafer, but he made good and they understand each other better. Some of the boys still visit with the farmer they worked for.

Thousands Win Badges.

Each boy, when assigned to a farm job, was given a certificate to be signed by his employer upon relinquishing his job. These certificates enabled the boys to secure their bars and badges. There were 11,374 bars and 9,204 badges awarded last year and thousands of boys failed to get their badges because they worked less than the maximum six weeks. Many of the boys are still working on the farms to which they were originally assigned by the reserve.

The records of this year for the state are incomplete, because those who made out the reports were obliged to give up their work after the armistice was signed, and because of the failure of the school principals to furnish the data requested. But it is known that many of the boys who enrolled in the reserve last year did not sign new cards for this year, although they are again working on the farm. The introduction of military training in all of the Chicago high schools, with arrangements for a military encampment during the summer vacation, had a great deal to do with boys not going to the farm this summer. The federal government supplied them with uniforms, guns, and other equipment and most of them chose military training rather than farm work.

In the Cook county high schools, including Chicago, only 239 were assigned to farm jobs from Jan. 1 to June 30, 1919. But the reserve was a success at the time it was needed, and the fact that it served to point out a highly important source of labor supply at a critical time is universally admitted. The boys thought little of the money they got. They worked for their country.

"In placing the boys there was kept in mind the moral responsibility of the reserve both to the boy and the farmer," said Mr. Butler. "As a result, less than 1 per cent of the boys have proved unworthy of the opportunity given them. About the same proportion of farmers proved unworthy of having a good boy sent them. In every case where a reserve boy 'went wrong' an adjustment satisfactory to the employing farmer and the parents of the boy was effected through the reserve."

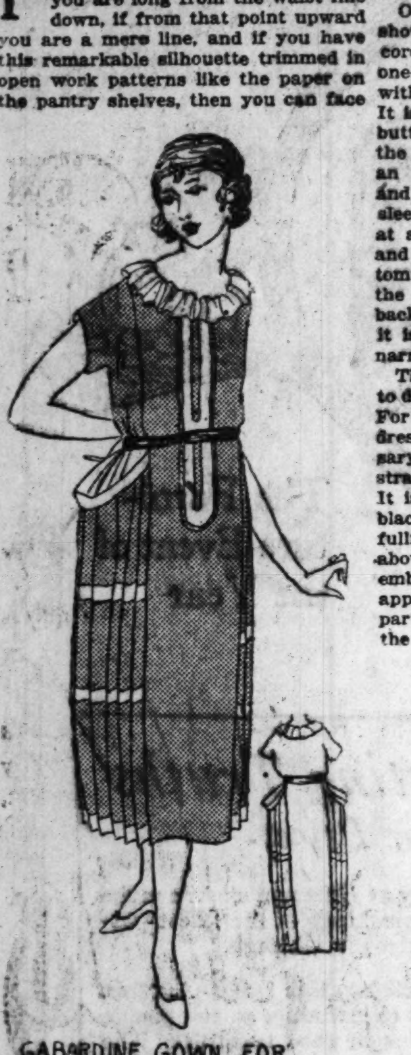
The Last Word in Paris Fashions

By Mary Brush Williams

AT THE OPENINGS.

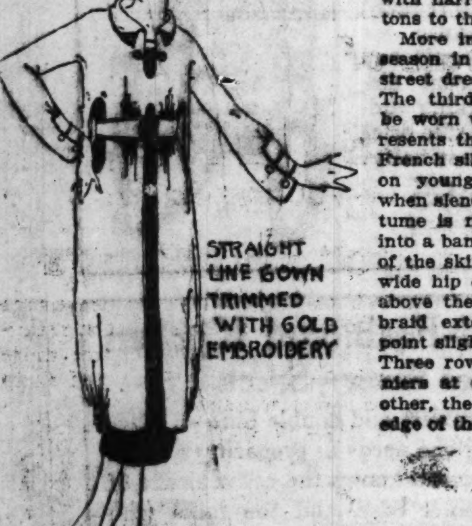
PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—If you are a little wider than you are long from the waist line down, if from that point upward you are a mere line, and if you have this remarkable silhouette trimmed in open work patterns like the paper on the pantry shelves, then you can face the world of Paris with an open face and a carefree mind, for you have satisfied the dictates of fashion for the ensuing months.



GABARDINE GOWN FOR YOUNG GIRL

Such general statements, however, demand modification. This is perhaps more specifically the exact silhouette for the evening. During the day you take on a slightly different form. Skirts, always narrow around the bottom, are merely plaited or fulled slightly for one piece dresses in cloth and tailor mades. Evening skirts are wider and longer than of yore. Street skirts are faintly longer.

We are enjoying a riot, an orgy, of openings. Everybody is going to them instead of to the Comedie Française, and they are a lot more fun. A tailored suit shown at one of them yesterday was called Charlie Chaplin. A little bit of a soubrette or a mannikin showed it, and an important part of the ensemble was that she smoked a cigaret. There were buyers there from all the nations—England, Switzerland, Italy, Spain, Holland, Belgium—and when they saw the nobby little creation, shown by the nobby little, piquant mannikin, they cheered.



STRAIGHT LINE GOWN TRIMMED WITH GOLD EMBROIDERY

I shouldn't be surprised if that tailored suit would be worn in most of the civilized countries this winter. It is of the color tastefully named niggerhead, or very dark brown, and is lined with satin in coffee color. Coffee color edges crop out, like bindings, at cuffs, collar, bottom, and sides of the coat. The skirt is narrow around the bottom and gathered slightly over the hips. The jacket is held in place with one button, midway between waist and throat. It is strictly tailored and flares over the hips.

The same girl who showed that one displayed another called "Mickey," and later came on, not in the manner of the harum scarum soubrette but in grand evening dress, with wide, square panniers of black velvet, against a close tunic of cloth of silver. It was like the third act where the leading juvenile grows up. The dress was the merest thread in the back, holding on the shoulder straps, and was almost to the waist line in front. You stepped into the skirt as into trousers; a wide fold of cloth of silver separated the ankles.

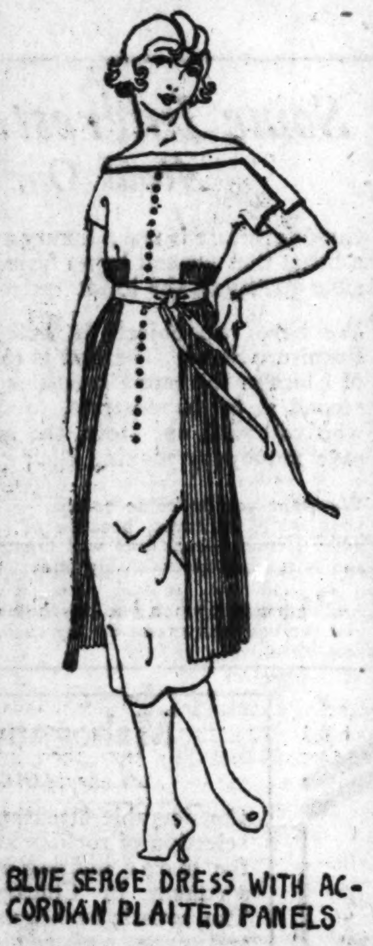
The young girl wearing it carried a huge fan. I could not begin to estimate its acreage. It was of black ostrich feathers, and she carried it part of the time, like Carmen, up and at the side of her head.

The American buyers regarded this costume thoughtfully, shook their heads as if in rejection, and then called her back for another look. One or two of them noted her in their memoranda.

After the opening I met a friend in front of the Ritz and she commented: "Well, I suppose you have been ordering eyeleted dresses, hand embroidered, and trimmed in fur." I had not, but these are the motifs; eyeleted embroidery—like the pantry shelves, and fur and feather everywhere. Fur gilets, or waistcoats, are one of the lovely features of tailored suits. Little lines of fur bound leather follow the length of the lower arm to some place short of the elbow. One entire gown is of leather. And one of the evening dresses has pockets in its panniers. There is a ruffle across them, and the girl keeps her hands in them to make them stand out still larger.

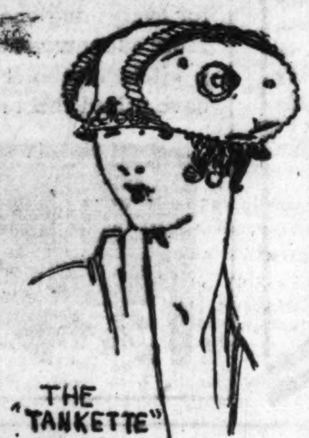
One of the accompanying sketches shows a new metier for using accordion plaiting. The costume is a one-piece morning dress of blue serge, with round neck and short sleeves. It is trimmed in white braid and jade buttons. The braid edges the line of the throat in a double band, and in an unbroken line follows the length and the circumference of the tiny sleeves. The accordion plaiting starts at a point just above the waist line, and falls in a tunic almost to the bottom of the skirt. It appears only on the sides, leaving the front and the back of the dress unornamented, and it is tied in at the waist line with a narrow belt.

There are those who are not inclined to diet so that they may wear panniers. For them, the accompanying one-piece dress solves the problem of the necessary looseness at the sides with the straight line, beloved of us Americans. It is of the inevitable blue serge and black satin. There is a little flare or fullness in the tunic on the sides just above the hem. It is drawn in with embroidery of black and gold, which appears again on the collar. The upper part of the long sleeve stops above the wrists, which are strapped across with narrow bands attached with buttons to the long underarm sleeve.



BLUE SERGE DRESS WITH ACCORDIAN PLAITED PANELS

More interest is manifested at this season in tailored suits and one-piece street dresses than in any other kind. The third of these simple frocks to be worn with fur or under coats, represents the perfectly new and strictly French silhouette. It is indeed pretty on young girls and mature figures when slender. The material of the costume is navy blue gabardine, plaited into a band of white braid on the sides of the skirt, which bulge and give the wide hip effect under the slender line above the waist. A design of double braid extends from the throat to a point slightly below the waist in front. Three rows of braid garnish the panniers at equi-distances, one from another, the bottom one being round the edge of the skirt. The sleeves are very short, and the neck round. It is garnished with a lingerie collar of plaited tulle.



THE "TANKETTE" HAT

The hat in the sketch is seen on the boulevards and is known as the "tankette." It is made of black satin and plaited braid in combination, the plaited braid representing the caterpillar wheels of the tank. The roses on the sides represent the machine gun emplacements. A little trailing vine of roses, not connected in any way with the defenses, grows along the narrow front of the tank, perhaps in memory of those slain in encounters with this deadly, feminine weapon.

TRYING TIMES OF PEACE

By Samuel Gompers

President of the American Federation of Labor.

THE United States of America is the greatest democracy in the world. It is a vast, far flung empire composed of many races, many creeds, many opinions, many faiths. It is a country that prides itself on the independence of thought and action of the individual. And because of that pride of and glory in individual liberty it is a country foredoomed to argument, to struggle, to conflict.

This is not to be deplored. Quite the contrary. It is to be exulted in and encouraged—given, of course, that the argument be intelligent, the struggle constructive, and the conflict for the welfare and betterment of all its citizens. In many counsels lies wisdom. In the harmonious reconciliation of varied opinions lies progress. And in the effort of every citizen to improve himself, his fellows, and his country is the safety of democracy itself.

I am not of those who hold contentment to be the end of desire. Contentment, to my way of thinking, means stagnation, while a healthy discontent is the birth of aspiration for better things, and even though we are the greatest and most successful democracy that the world has ever seen, it would be as foolish as it would be fatuous to deny our faults or ignore our weaknesses.

One of our greatest faults is that too many are extremists. Along the roads we follow many are prone to go too far. Like our gallant boys in France, we are sometimes not content to stop at our objectives. We dash on ahead—and are caught in our own barrage! This is understandable. It is in a way forgivable. It is because we are a young nation, full of enthusiasm and strength and courage. But, it is dangerous and costly. And even before the war this fault had led us into grave trouble.

Business organization, from reasonable limits, had grown into great an menacing trusts, combinations, and corporations; they had gone beyond the legitimate field of development into the illegitimate field of manipulation, stock jobbery, and domination of our political and judicial life. The whole wealth of the land was being taken from the hands of the many and placed within the grip of the few. We were in danger of becoming, like the Mexico of a decade ago, a country of but two classes—the vastly rich and the pitifully poor.

That such a condition is both wrong and fatal is beyond argument. There is neither justice nor common sense in a condition that allows one man to have a hundred million dollars and a hundred million men to have nothing at all. A condition where the few possess much and the many possess little is not democracy. It is an oligarchy. Its further development could not and would not have been tolerated.

THIS condition was brought about by another extremism—the overworship of a single god of all those that a democracy must serve. He had come to spend too much time before our favored fetich, Individualism. Every man, each woman had come to think too much of and work too much for himself and herself. We had forgotten that not individualism alone, but individualistic mutuality, means progress. It is not enough that each man becomes strong, each woman fine. It is the relation of each man and woman to all other men and women that makes a nation great. No matter how fine our soldiers were, they never could have defeated the Germans at Chateau Thierry had they gone in one at a time.

This condition in turn had made for lack of interest in citizenry and in the country. When each citizen is thinking only of himself their mutual affairs suffer. Their government goes to incompetents or worse. It is like a business with efficient clerks but inefficient management. Such a business cannot last if it be continued in such a way.

In all the affairs of our republic there was no element or group which expressed, manifested, and secured a larger thought and action for mutuality as well as individualism than the much misunderstood and oft misrepresented organized labor movement—the American Federation of Labor.

That the war contributed much toward changing the whole phase of our individualism none can truthfully gainsay. Of a sudden one day we found a thing big enough to make us forget all others. And it was then that democracy arose in all its magnificent might. All internal differences vanished in the face of an external danger. All national conflicts were subordinated to the exigency of an international task. Almost in a single day we ceased to be individualists alone. We had become individualistic mutualists and as such members of and partners in a true democracy.

And during our eighteen months of war we remained true to democracy. Labor, capital, business, society worked hand in hand and shoulder to shoulder for victory. Never had the democracy of the United States of America risen to such an exalted height. It was the final test of our national abilities and the last justification of our form of government. We had shown what a democracy could do and how it could do it.

AND now what? We are once more at peace. Shall we prove ourselves to be less able, less noble, less courageous, less firm in time of peace than in time of war? Did we have to have a direct and dire menace hanging over our heads to make us do what was right and just and sensible? Shall we, once that menace is removed, flop supinely back to confusion, injustice, selfishness, and the hyper-individualism that was once our bane?

I know the American people. And I know they will not be at once so lax and so misguided. But they must make no mistake. The fight before them lies long and bitter. There is the immigration question. There are the trusts, the corporations, the railroads. There is the problem of demobilization and the returned soldier. There is the reorganization of industries. Business must be relieved and encouraged. There is an understanding to be gained between the employers and the workers. There is the feeding and financing of the world in which we must help to do our share.

There is justified as well as unwarranted unrest, the first of which must be met intelligently and sympathetically; the second must be contested at every step.

It will be the work of all of us, and for years.

There have been those, perhaps there still are some few, who have fondly and foolishly deemed that at the signing of peace we could return at once to the soft and selfish days of before the war.

It is for these people and for all the world to know that those days are dead and buried. They lie as far behind us in fact as the middle ages. They are gone. And they will never return.

We face a new world today, with a new set of problems; problems so involved, so complicated, so far reaching as to be today for the most part even unimaginable. The future lies in the lap of the gods, and into that lap not even the wisest men of earth have been able to look.

WHAT will become of Russia? Who can tell? Into what country's breast will another year find the gaunt wolf of bolshevism sinking its shining teeth and bloody claws? No one knows. No one can know. We can only know that the one weapon that has been found to fight it is food. No matter what the ideals and aspirations of a country may be, it cannot get freedom nor practice freedom on an empty stomach. The hungry man may tear down, but he cannot upbuild. Hungry stomachs can never make reasoning brains. The discontent of hungry people leads nowhere except to confusion, chaos and reaction. Trotzky and Lenine may call their government what they will, but it is in point of fact as bloody a tyranny as the world has ever known.

So it is first hunger that we must fight. And we must fight the causes of hunger. These are first economic unrest and unemployment. And we must begin that fight in our own country. To start in composing Europe before we protect our own citizens is as unthinkable as a man going to a neighboring city to build an almshouse while his own wife and children starve at home.

Day by day thousands upon thousands of honest, hard working, self-respecting American citizens are being thrown out of work.

Work must be found for them. And it must be found now. Day by day our soldiers are coming back from France. Work must be found for them. Shall gallant American boys, who were ready and willing to lay down their very lives that we at home might be saved, come back to find themselves welcomed by words?

AND not only that. There must be no relapse for them, or for any workers, to the industrial conditions of before the war. It will not be possible. Our workers have learned their rights. They have learned what improved living conditions mean. And they have learned of the sovereignty of citizenship.

Our soldiers have learned. They have traveled and studied and seen. They have thought. Through fighting for the United States they have come to know that they are partners in the United States, and that if they must share its responsibilities they have a right to share its benefits. And this no man who has been to Europe during the war can fail to see and recognize as being one of the greatest factors for the United States to consider. Our soldiers, returning, will ask no more. But they will ask no more than is just. They have seen at last what mutuality really means.

To ask these men to go back to mine or mill or lathe or shop under prewar conditions will be impossible. Even if it were possible for us to ask, it would be impossible for them to grant. They could not in justice to themselves.

And above all must the people of the United States realize that this is no time for reaction or reactionaries. We of the United States must be not only forward looking, but forward going. And we must travel fast and far.

Conditions, some of which we seem well nigh unable to cope with, face us from a world in ferment. It is no time to become frightened or to lose one's head. But, contrariwise, it is no time to be a Pollyanna.

The conditions are there. They must be met, faced, studied, analyzed, adjusted, solved. No few men can do it, however able they may be or think themselves to be. It is the work of all. And it is a work that must be based on mutual understanding, mutual faith, mutual endeavor, mutual patience, and mutual trust. In that task no body of men will give more potential service than the organized labor movement of America.

Let us of America face these new labors, then, in the spirit of individualistic mutuality—in the spirit of real democracy.

History Repeating Itself in Present Time of Tumult

By Mme. X.

SUMMING up the summer, what would you say of it? Strife, tumult, discord, confusion, high prices, all made quite endurable in this part of the world by week after week of as nearly perfect weather as nature can furnish—such is our verdict.

Delvers into American history assure us that all the present vituperous contention over the proposed peace treaty and league of nations is mild compared to the violent debates over our national constitution. Those supporters of President Wilson who are pained by the many attacks on him may take heart when the student of events in the "sixties" of the past century assures him that the things said about Abraham Lincoln by his contemporaries equal in ferocity any of the present verbal shrapnel fired at the nation's chief. Nor is it the first time that the h. c. l. has oppressed Americans. The civil war left an aftermath of inflated prices which troubled the housekeepers of that day as much as their ilk today are troubled.

The fact is that the more you study history the more you realize the truth of the French saying: "Plus ca change plus c'st la meme chose." [The more it changes the more it is the same thing], which realization shakes off much of the burden of the day and enables one to enjoy the joys of the moment—weather, melons, and autumn styles.

Tinting the Calves.

Apropos of styles a returned warrior I met recently was much more inclined to discourse on the Paris fashions, as seen on the avenue de l'Opera, than on his battle experiences.

"I don't so much mind their bare legs," he said, "if they only wouldn't paint them so much."

"Paint them! What do you mean?"

"O, they rouge and powder them something awful."

It appears to be the mode there to wear no stockings under the little, low heeled, black, ankle tie slippers, with round vamps so short that, as he expressed it, "the roots of the toes show." Skirts are so scant and so abbreviated that it must leave quite a sizable surface of perpendicular epidermal loveliness on which to experiment with powder and rouge.

How do you suppose they distribute the tinting? Do they powder the skin and delicately redden the calf? C2k doesn't begin to express the emotions evoked.

What, by the way, has become of the old fashioned cotton or lisle thread stockings? Look where you will or at whom you will you see only silk—sheer, shimmering, fragile silk hose. One daring dame was reported as being seen in Michigan avenue lately walking, a la Parisienne, stockingless and shod in ankle ties, to the edification of all within eye range, but it doesn't seem probable that she will have many imitators. For one thing the weather promises to make the style unpopular.

It is too soon to prophecy as to whether American women will follow their French sisters to the limit in the matter of the short skirt or the unstockinged legs, but it is quite safe to say that these are questions more important to the average female than Article X, Persian politics, or the fate of Esthonia.

Entertaining Modern Youth.

The self-sufficient, sophisticated, easily bored youth of the day are a continual source of dismay and confusion to their elders. A well known Lake Forest couple undertook to give a cheerful party at the Gagemere club for their young daughters, a "subdeb." They invited twenty or thirty lads and lasses and arranged for enough motors to accommodate the party, the hostess planning as to who should go with whom. She found that this latter problem was taken quite out of her hands. The day of the affair she spent her entire time at the telephone answering the calls of her various guests who signified with whom they intended to go. A friend told her that she was behind the times.

"That we must not be," said both host and hostess. So they let the young people manage that part of the entertainment.

At some expense and trouble the hosts engaged some professional to play after supper for dancing and for some moonlight boating on the lake, only to find themselves after the repast, quite alone with their musicians, all the young people adjourning "sine die" to the movies at Waukegan with few farewells and no apologies.

"We mustn't be behind the times," gasped the host and hostess, but how to keep up with them was the problem. Finally it was decided that the host would better pursue their fleeing guests to Waukegan, leaving the hostess to collect herself and the fragments of their carefully planned party—musicians, etc.

Following His Guests.

Arrived at Waukegan, the anxious parent found no sign of the young people at any movie. Puzzled and sad, he returned to his own abode in Lake Forest to find it all alight and full of flames. The party, not liking the particular movie they had gone to see, had adjourned to their starting place, where they amused themselves until a late hour.

Another hostess got up a beach party, planning games and dances on the sands around a big bonfire after supper. But, when the time came for this old fashioned form of amusement, she looked about in the gathering gloom by the sad sea waves, only to find herself left alone with her attendant domestics, her young guests having all departed to Highland Park movies, and she saw them no more.

The point of these stories is that the young of today do not need their elders either as companions or to provide entertainment for them. In fact, it is hard to see in what capacity they do need them—from the point of view of the said young—and the sooner this fact is appreciated by the said elders the sooner a satisfactory and inevitable readjustment will take place.

Summer Opera Season Ends.

The close of the Ravinia Park opera season last Monday put a definite term to the summer of 1919, just as the last of the Symphony orchestra concerts in April always marks the line between winter and summer.

The season of 1919 is writ in red in the annals of our famous summer opera company. On the last two or three nights between 600 and 700 applicants for reserved seats were turned away unsatisfied, while the attendance numbered over 4,000 each of these evenings, as well as many nights. So Louis Eckstein and the rest of the management are justified in going ahead with the plans for pushing the stage back fifty feet, and so making room for 800 more seats in the big pavilion.

Just think what Dame Nature did for Ravinia opera this summer—gave it a glorious succession of clear nights, with only two rainy ones in the period from June 28 to Sept. 2!

Adoption of French Children.

It seems that we were misinformed as to the Roy McWilliams having legally adopted a French child.

There is probably no other country whose laws so carefully guard the family claims of children as Frence does. A man may not disinherit his child, no matter what the provocation. No one under 50 may legally adopt a child there, the idea being to protect the child so adopted from being neglected in favor of children born later in the same family. So the McWilliams are ineligible in France as parents by adoption.

Furthermore, it is possible that the French government will put every possible obstacle in the way of any enterprise to take children out of France. They are needed there to insure the future of their nation.

Making Winter Plans.

The birds are already congregating in noisy conclaves in the groves and forests hereabouts, discussing their southward flights. In the same way human bipeds are making their winter plans. The opening of passenger traffic between here and Europe is tempting few to brave the rigors of a possible coal and food shortage over there. Mr. and Mrs. Hugh J. McBirney and Mrs. C. M. Ely, for instance, are arranging a trip together to southern France and Italy and to northern Africa.

This trio, in the spring of 1917, went to Japan and China together, being the nucleus of a large party of Chicagoans among whom were Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Aldis, Howard Shaw, Miss Sylvia Shaw, and Day McBirney. Our entrance into the war somewhat disturbed the enjoyment of the travelers, as some among them had sons and sons-in-law who were among the early enlisters.

J. Dorr Bradley and his pretty daughter are now on their way to Japan and China for a three months' trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Deering are probably by now domiciled in their Spanish quondam monastery near Barcelona, where they will stay until it is time to return to their winter home in Miami.

Miamians (what a mellifluous word!) will be in closer contact this winter with their friends at Nassau than heretofore, as John Borden's yacht, the Kanawha, has been sold to a company that proposes to run it as a passenger boat between these two popular and fashionable winter resorts.

It is probable that Nassau and other British West Indian places will be much sought the coming years by the "idle rich" who like to combine beauty and climate in their surroundings. If so, the John McCutcheons' famous Treasure island home near Nassau will lose some of its much prized seclusion. It is fortunate that last spring Mrs. McCutcheon's father, Howard Shaw, planted an ancient Spanish gun commanding the island's only landing place. It may be useful in times of peaceful invasion, such as come to people so well known and well liked as the McCutcheons.

Trophies Adorn Studio.

In the upper story of the garage behind Mr. McCutcheon's Lake Forest home he has established a most attractive studio adorned with the trophies of some of his interesting voyages, for no American has had a wider view of contemporary historic events and notable places than he. He was at the battle of Manila. He had a front seat in the Russo-Japanese war. He was in British East Africa and Uganda with the late Col. Roosevelt, and he saw the great world war from many close vantage points. His studios (he has one in town as well as in Lake Forest) are, therefore, crowded with the souvenirs of these various expeditions.

A collection of helmets—American, French, British, and German—hangs beneath the window sill in his country workroom. The ends of the loft are adorned with big strips of bark cloth made and dyed by the natives of Uganda. Nearby a huge elephant's hoof does duty as a tabouret. The two nose horns of a rhinoceros hang on a beam, together with gazelle and antelope horns. Gay mats of native weave, from Aden and Zanzibar, lie on the floor. An alabaster copy of the Taj Mahal stands on a table. Spears and shields from the Philippines and Central Africa adorn odd corners.

In short, the whole place is a sort of autobiographical museum which must recall many thrilling days to this famous cartoonist.

New Portraits of Chicagoans.

Some interesting portraits have been added to Chicago's list within recent months. One is a very spirited portrait of Stanley Field, painted by an English artist, Miss Upton, when he was in London last spring. Another is a colorful likeness of Mrs. Edward Bennett, the work of Robert Henri, when he came to Lake Forest in July to paint her young son, Edward Jr. The portrait of the latter is also a fine piece of work and a charming interpretation of childhood.

Louis Betts had to go to New York to be discovered by Chicagoans, and his latest canvas here is a full length portrait of Mrs. Edward Moore, a striking picture, on which he spent weeks of labor in midsummer at Lake Forest. Another fine portrait by the same artist is also a full length canvas, being a likeness of Mrs. Hathaway Watson, painted last spring. Our next portrait show at the Arts club should have special attractions in the line of recent pictures of prominent people.

Beautifully Curly, Fluffy Hair—In Three Hours!

Girls, have you tried the Silmerine method of curling your hair? It's simply grand! Gives you the most beautiful, natural-looking curls and waves—makes the hair soft, fluffy and glossy—and nothing harmful or 'bothersome' about it. The curls will last the longest time—in spite of heat, wind or dampness. You won't have to be continually fixing and fussing with your hair. It's foolish to singe and blister and deaden your tresses with a hot curling iron—and altogether unnecessary now.

Liquid Silmerine is pleasant to use, being neither sticky nor greasy. Get a bottle from your druggist today, follow the simple directions—the first trial will make it your steadfast friend. The wavy effect appears within three hours after the application, though many prefer applying the liquid just before retiring. You will appreciate Silmerine equally as a dressing and hair preservative.

The SCHOOL COUNSELOR

"I will go with thee and be thy guide."—Everyman.

IN THE NIGHT SCHOOLS.

THE free evening public schools under the direction of the board of education open for the fall term on Monday, Sept. 22.

So many questions have been coming in regarding these evening courses and the subjects which they include that a brief résumé of them is given here even though the night schools do not open for a couple of weeks.

The courses offered in the evening high schools meet the educational needs and ambitions of a number of different kinds of students. They may be said to have been designed chiefly for young men and women who are engaged in commercial work, such as stenographers and bookkeepers, electricians, chemists, carpenters, milliners, etc. In many instances these courses are made to fit into their daily work in such a maner as to be of practical assistance in mastering their trade.

Besides these courses there are classes for those who wish to pursue a regular high school course and later attend some professional school. There are also classes in home making subjects, such as sewing, dressmaking, millinery, and cooking. Men and women who are working at some line of work which is new to them will be given special help.

The schools will give special attention also to the needs of men who have returned from military service and who wish to study further on certain subjects in which they have had experience. For example, telegraphy for those who were enrolled in the signal corps and automobile courses for those who have seen some motor transport service, etc.

The work of the evening schools falls naturally into six divisions.

1. The teaching of English to foreign speaking people, chiefly adults.
2. Helping to complete the education of those who have left school before finishing the elementary course.
3. Giving instruction in regular high school subjects.
4. Giving instruction in household subjects, dressmaking, etc.
5. Giving instruction in commercial subjects—stenography, typewriting, bookkeeping, business English, penmanship, and commercial law.
6. Giving instruction in the technical subjects related to the trades and industries—electricity, chemistry, mechanical drawing for tradesmen, shop mathematics, automobile engineering, printing, forge, foundry, machine shop, etc.

The English for the foreign born includes the regular instruction in reading and speaking English. There is also some simple instruction in the taking out of first and second papers, and some discussion of the city, county, and state governmental activities with which the ordinary citizen frequently comes into contact.

The elementary grade work is for the boys and girls who have left school before completing the course and who may continue their studies in the evening schools. Those who are far enough advanced to study the eighth grade may finish that grade and receive diplomas admitting them to high school.

There are also many special subjects besides the regular elementary subjects, which are offered for the instruction of persons employed during the day.

In the household subjects course there is the sewing and millinery which comprises dressmaking and millinery, hand sewing, the use and the care of the sewing machine, exercises in making patterns, fitting and designing, and talks on the elements of good taste in dressing and the proper laundering of garments. Practical milliners and dressmakers will have charge of the classes.

In the cooking classes every attempt is made to interest the girls in home life, to show the worth of economy, to base all practical cooking on general theoretical principles; that is to train students to manage simple homes in a capable manner. There will also be classes for women in canning and drying of food products.

In the commercial subjects there is the bookkeeping which in the elementary grades produces a simple but thorough course and in the high schools a much more advanced course, including the handling of a complete set of books of entry and business forms. A thorough course in commercial arithmetic accompanies the work in accounting and for advanced pupils there will be some work in the principles of business law.

Stenography is taught in all the evening high schools. In five months the advanced classes are able to write from sixty to one hundred words per minute dictation.

In the typewriting the advanced pupils will be given opportunity for practice in speed and accuracy to any extent desired.

There are also courses in penmanship in the elementary as well as high school subjects and in business English there are special classes for the study of English in its commercial and industrial aspects.

In the matter of technical and shop subjects students must pursue courses which are in some way related to their daily occupations.

Manual training is given in most of the evening schools. Mechanical drawing forms a part of this course.

There are shop studies given in the technical night high schools where young men may take up actual work in foundry practice, machine shop practice, pattern making, cabinet making, joinery, carpentry, and wood turning. There are also classes in sheet metal work at some of the schools.

Courses in electricity may be had at Crane, Harrison, Schurz, Tilden, Senn, Austin, Lane, Englewood, Bowen, and Phillips. These schools will also have approved courses in automobile study, including the engine, lubrication, and starting, ignition, and lighting systems.

In the high school studies are offered in modern languages, including French and Spanish. The object is to give a conversational acquaintance with these languages and a familiarity with the best literature.

In the evening schools any and all subjects taught in the day schools will be taught, providing that twenty-five pupils wish it. A fee of $1 is required of all pupils enrolled in the evening classes. This will be returned to the student at the end of the term if he has attended three-fourths of the evenings on which the class has been in session.

The following is a list of the schools, elementary and foreign, high school and technical, which will offer evening classes the coming year.

The abbreviations following the name of the school indicate the kind of courses offered — elementary, grade work, English for foreign born, high school courses, technical, commercial, etc. Many of the elementary evening schools also have manual training for boys and cooking and sewing for girls.

NEWS OF THE CHICAGO WOMEN'S CLUBS

Mrs. Roy Dickey

Mrs. Roy Dickey is an active worker in the Fatherless Children of France campaign to find American godmothers for 60,000 French war orphans.

Celebrate Historic Dates by Adopting a French Orphan

By Alice Dickey.

YESTERDAY was Lafayette's birthday, this week is the anniversary of the battle of the Marne; and Mrs. Walter S. Brewster, chairman of the special campaign committee of the Fatherless Children of France, has been turning both these facts to excellent account.

Intrusted with the task of finding American godmothers for 60,000 little children, Mrs. Brewster loses sight of no opportunity to impress upon the public the needs of the little French orphans, to whom one may become "marraine," or "parraine" for the infinitesimal sum of 10 cents a day. Quite unlike the little old lady who lived in a shoe and had so many children she didn't know what to do, Mrs. Brewster knows just what to do with her 60,000. "Find them godmothers!" says she, and all summer long has been conducting an active press campaign covering the United States, has been speaking before audiences in different parts of the country, and furnishing interesting articles to the magazines of the country.

At Chautauqua alone she reached over 600 representatives of women's clubs from different parts of the country, the same number of state regents and chapter heads of the D. A. R., and was granted a place on the special programs which are given in the Chautauqua amphitheater before over 6,000 people. Here she exhibited motion pictures of her interesting trip through the devastated districts of France under military escort provided by the French government.

With the possibilities of Lafayette day in mind, she antedated the occasion by sending off flocks of letters suggesting that there is no better way to offer tribute to the memory of Lafayette nor to express thankfulness for the battle of the Marne, which stemmed the tide of German invasion at a time when the liberty of the world was imperiled, than to make some little child of a dead hero thankful.

Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, with her mind stored with memories of the little children near Nancy to whom she was fairy godmother through the awful days of the war, responded promptly by adding two more "adoptions" to the list of children whom she is already mothering at long distance. Mrs. B. F. Sunny was equally responsive, as were Mrs. Charles Schweppe and Mrs. E. A. Hamill. Other well known women who have come forward to aid Mrs. Brewster in her gigantic task are Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman, Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, Mrs. John Alden Carpenter, Mrs. Hugh McBirney, and Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor.

The active press campaign has brought interesting contributions to headquarters at 635 Fine Arts building. One woman wrote that her son had given her a check for $200 "to aid the suffering babes of France," and that reading an article of Mrs. Brewster's in her local paper moved her to intrust the disbursement of the sum to the Fatherless Children of France. Later the same woman added another contribution of $109.50, but even these were not received with more gratitude than the dollar bill which came from an ex-confederate soldier, 81 years old, from "down South Carolina way." A truck farmer in the New England states wrote that "the Spirit of God moved upon him" to send a little of his truck garden money, and inclosed a money order for $5. Many Sunday schools and other groups of children have adopted one or more children each.

Mrs. Brewster returns today from Boston and New York, where she had conferences with other committees of the Fatherless Children of France. A spectacular drive is to be launched in Chicago late in October.

News of the Religious World

Big Campaigns On in All Churches for Reconstruction

RECONSTRUCTION programs in all the churches are now in progress. As a direct result of the great war, campaigns either have been or are being started to bring to the people the world vision of the church's mission and to provide the means necessary to "carry on" both at home and abroad.

Both aspects are consistently presented—the spiritual and the material. Men's vision is to be enlarged—their minds are to be informed, and their consciences stirred—and they are being called on to express their faith and hope definitely by enabling the church to fulfill its work—by giving of their means to extend its influence.

One of the most ambitious campaigns—and the most successful—is that being carried on by the Methodist church. One hundred million dollars was the original financial goal of the centenary campaign, to cover both advance work and regular obligations. This has already been passed by over 10 per cent, and the returns are not all in.

The Baptist churches have set $175,000,000 as the figure in their campaigns. Present indications are that this will be reached soon. The chief purpose for which these funds are being raised are "missionary, educational, and reconstruction work at home and abroad."

The "new era" movement of the Presbyterian church is now working out its budget and plans for its program of extension of missionary work.

The Congregationalists will begin in October to raise $5,000,000 in celebration of their tercentenary "to put a new economic foundation underneath the ministry."

The Disciples of Christ—the "Christians"—long ago started their "men and millions" campaign, when their then aim—$5,000,000—seemed an impossible, not to say improbable, amount. This has been expanded and enlarged to meet after the war conditions. The total pledges to date amount to $7,105,342.

The Lutheran churches also are in the midst of a drive, which culminates Thanksgiving week, with an every member canvass to double its present budget of $1,500,000 for their benevolences.

Perhaps more unselfish than all was the recent drive of the Jews, for all of it was for the benefit of suffering Jews in the war zone. Fifteen million dollars was raised for this purpose.

The Episcopal church has set a tentative figure of $20,000,000 for its "nation-wide campaign for the church's mission." A survey of the whole church to discover the needs is just being completed and will determine the amount to be raised. A week of intensive education and an every member canvass will complete the campaign later in the fall.

The bishops of the Roman Catholic church will assemble in conference in Washington, D. C., later in September for the purpose of adopting a policy and setting a goal for united effort for supporting and enlarging the work of the church. This will be the first time the American bishops have held a conclave.

The Rev. Richard D. Hughes, minister of the Emerald Avenue Presbyterian church, Emerald avenue and Marquette road, has returned from six months of service in France as a speaker in the religious department of the Y. M. C. A. While in France he visited and spoke at practically all of the camps of the American army. He will be in his pulpit today for the first time since his return.

The Sacred Heart parish (Jesuit), Nineteenth and Peoria streets, the Rev. Joseph B. Murphy rector, will celebrate the completion of the electrification of the church next Sunday evening by a sacred concert and lecture. A prominent speaker has been secured, and leading choristers of the city will unite with the Sacred Heart choir and orchestra to render the concert. Mrs. Bessie McNeill, organist, is in charge of the music. The congregation extends an invitation to old friends and former members of the parish to join with them in this service.

The Cragin Congregational church, 2032 North Lavergne avenue, the Rev. L. H. Heisley minister, will have its fall rally today. A special service will be held in the evening, when Dr. R. W. Gammon, secretary of the Congregational Educational society, who was in France during the war, will be the preacher. Men returned from service will be welcomed at this service, a badge of recognition being placed on the service flag for those who are back. There will be special music.

The quarterly meeting of the Archdiocesan union of the Holy Name society will be held at Holy Angels' hall, Oakwood boulevard and Vincennes avenue, this afternoon. This gathering will mark the beginning of the final drive for "100,000 members by 1920." Other equally important matters will be discussed.

The Presbytery of Chicago will meet tomorrow at 10 a. m. at 512 Masonic temple. The Rev. Dr. E. N. Ware is permanent clerk.

THE REV. Edward J. Mullaly
THE REV. W. F. Cahill

The Rev. Edward J. Mullaly, C. S. P., is the newly appointed superior of the Paulist Fathers and rector of the Paulist church, old St. Mary's, Wabash avenue and Ninth street. He succeeded the Rev. Thomas F. Burke, C. S. P., who was made superior general of the order in America.

Father Mullaly received his early education in the public schools of Carson City, Nev., graduating from high school in 1894. His collegiate work was done at St. Mary's college, Oakland, Cal., where he graduated with high honors in 1899. He then became a novitiate of the Paulists, studying for the priesthood in Washington, D. C., receiving his B. D. in 1903, and being ordained the same year. His first assignment was the Tennessee house of the order. After a few months the superior general offered him a post at the San Francisco house, but he finally decide. Father Cahill is well known throughout the church as a contributor to various periodicals.

The Rev. W. F. Cahill has been appointed the pastor of Our Lady of Mercy church, 4432 North Troy street, to succeed the Rev. H. P. Coughlin, who becomes pastor of Visitation church, Garfield boulevard and Peoria street. Father Cahill was formerly pastor of St. Mary's church, Riverside. He studied at St. Ailbe's seminary, Emly, Ireland, and at St. Mary's, Baltimore. He was ordained to the priesthood in 1898 by Archbishop Feehan, and received an appointment to St. Rose of Lima church, where he remained until 1904. Until 1915 he was assistant at Visitation church, becoming pastor of St. Mary's church, Riverside. Father Cahill is well known as a writer throughout the church as a contributor to various periodicals.

The installation of the Rev. B. F. Jacobs as pastor of the Logan Square Presbyterian church, will take place on Thursday evening at 7:30 o'clock. The moderator of the presbytery, the Rev. Ralph D. Kearns, D. D., will preside; the Rev. H. S. Brown, D. D., of the church extension board will preach the installation sermon; the Rev. D. C. Milner, D. D., former pastor of the church, will deliver the charge to the congregation; the Rev. George P. McGill, D. D., pastor of the Wilmette church, will deliver the charge to the pastor. Mr. Jacobs was pastor of the First Presbyterian church at Millersburg, Ohio. He was educated at Cumberland university, is a graduate of Lane seminary, and took a post-graduate course at Princeton.

The Rev. John Norris Hall will occupy his pulpit again this morning at the Broadway Methodist church, having returned from his vacation. The Rev. Thomas F. Campbell, pastor of the Seventh Presbyterian church, who has been motoring through Michigan, also has returned and will preach today.

A special program in honor of returned service men has been arranged for today by the United Presbyterian church, Garfield boulevard and Throop street. The Rev. John W. McClenahan is pastor of the church.

The Rev. R. Rowley, formerly rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church, Kankakee, takes up his duties today as rector of All Saints' church, Ravenswood.

The new pastor of Epiphany English Lutheran church, Sacramento boulevard and Lexington avenue, is the Rev. Merrell E. Boulton, formerly of Everett, Wash. He succeeds the Rev. C. R. W. Kegley, who resigned to take a college position in the south.

The Rev. Dr. Smith Thomas Ford, for fourteen years pastor of the Englewood Baptist church, closes his pastorate at that church today. Dr. Ford will become pastor of the Baptist church in Wheaton. On Wednesday evening a farewell reception will be held in the church parlors.

The Chicago Congregational Ministers' union will resume its meetings tomorrow at 10:45 a. m. at 913 Masonic temple. "The Present Condition of Labor Unrest" will be the topic, and former Ald. Robert M. Bush and Miss Agnes Newton, president of the Chicago Women's Trade Union league, will be the speakers. Ministers and laymen are invited to be present.

The Chicago local assembly of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew of the Episcopal church will hold an out of doors conference at St. Elizabeth's church, Glencoe, on Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Delegates to the thirty-fourth annual convention, to be held the week before the general convention of the Episcopal church in Detroit, Oct. 1, will be elected at this meeting. Courtney Barber, vice president of the national body, will speak. The Rev. Herbert Carlton, rector of St. Augustine's church, Wilmette, will conduct the service at 5 p. m. and preach the sermon.

Evangelist Herbert M. Richmond will return to Chicago for further work in the Northern Baptist seminary. He makes a specialty of preaching to children by means of magic.

Dr. George G. Mahy, secretary of the committee on evangelism, has been chosen to head the department of spiritual resources of the New Era Movement of the Presbyterian church.

Dr. Mahy will in part take up the evangelistic work of the late Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman, who was vice chairman of the New Era Movement, and whose place has never been filled since his death last Christmas. Dr. Mahy's acceptance of this secretaryship completes the cabinet of the New Era Movement with the exception of the portfolio of every member mobilization, which is still vacant. The department on stewardship will be headed by David McConaughy; that of missionary education by B. Carter Milliken; social service by Dr. John McDowell; gospel extension by Dr. Charles Gorman Richards, and publicity by James B. Wootan.

Crude Oil Makes Beautiful, Abundant Hair

When your children are grown the condition and the amount of their hair will depend upon the way it is cared for now.

Thousands of men and women are losing their hair today because it was abused in childhood by washing it with ordinary soaps and shampoos, most of which contain free alkali.

The human hair is composed of thousands of delicate oil plants.

The free alkali in most soaps and shampoos gradually destroys the natural oil and the fatty roots of the hair plants.

EVERY WEEK
ANTI-SEPTIC OIL
SHAMPOO

Is the only one manufactured that contains the beneficial properties of crude oil and pure cocoanut oil.

Besides being a wonderful cleanser it makes a perfect food for the hair roots by rubbing the soft creamy lather down into the scalp.

It opens the clogged hair cells and feeds and nourishes the roots as no other shampoo will.

Mothers who have used Every Week Shampoo for their children for the past few years find their children's hair unusually beautiful, heavy and in most excellent condition. Thousands of men and women have discarded their former shampoos and soaps and are using Every Week Shampoo exclusively. It removes dandruff, surplus oil, and leaves the hair soft, fluffy, lustrous, and in perfect condition to handle.

CLOUDY PLANETS.
DRAWN BY S.F. MAXWELL.

CLOUDY PLANETS.

If we could fly to the moon, and from that tiny world look back at the earth, we would see one of the most varied and interesting sights imaginable. With optical aid every detail on the surface of this planet could be visible, every road, hill, stream, and, indeed, almost every house, as well as every crowd of people or group of vehicles, while at night the even rows of street lights in the cities would gleam out like geometric patterns of star clusters.

The rosy sunset and sunrise tints would appear beautiful seen from the moon, and the ocean would seem like a soft, deep blue, and the land would be green or brown, according to the season. We should see the advance and retreat of the snowfall in the two hemispheres, the glaciers on the mountains, the deserts, and even the eruptions of volcanoes. But the most conspicuous feature of all on the earth would be its clouds.

We know the clouds mainly as things that float in the air over our heads On some days they are few in number and on others they fill the whole sky, even shutting out most of the daylight. Sometimes they are thin and hazy, and then again they are thick and lumpy. Aviators bring back pictures taken in the upper air showing that the clouds lie in layers, some high and some low.

An observer on the moon would see the earth roughly encircled by three cloudy belts. One would be around the earth at its greatest girth. This would be the equatorial storm belt. In each of the temperate zones there would be a less distinct cloudy belt, with white spots fairly evenly spaced along it, like while beads, completely encircling the ball. These white spots would all be moving along from day to day and would cover the familiar features of the continents.

They are the succession of rainy and clear weather so familiar to us. A stormy sky looks dark to us because we are under it, but it would appear very white and brilliant to any one looking down upon it. Similarly, the clear sky would seem darker to an outsider, just as it seems lighter to us.

The earth is not the only world which possesses clouds. Several of the planets are cloudy bodies. Take Venus, for example. Venus is the earth's twin sister in most respects, but while holes through the cloudy strata are common on earth, they are rare on Venus. Our neighbor planet presents an unbroken sea of clouds, that completely veils its surface. One can imagine that the normal conditions on the land of Venus must be like those on earth on a dark and sultry hot day.

Jupiter is a much larger body than either Venus or the earth. In fact, these two spheres would seem tiny and insignificant if placed beside the great planet of the solar system.

Jupiter is one of the cloudest planets of all. Whereas most of the air on the earth lies within fifteen miles of the surface and most of the air on Venus within about fifty, the air on Jupiter is over 1,000 miles thick. There are many stratas of clouds floating in this great shell of atmosphere, some high and some low.

There are winds on Jupiter that blow steadily around the ball at a rate of over 200 miles an hour. We see these hurricanes catch the cloud masses as they rise, and whip them out into long, narrow streaks, carrying them often completely around the globe, a distance of 276,000 miles.

SOME PURIFICATION

By Guy F. Lee.

We went crusading with the aim
[We fondly told ourselves]
Of shoving things of nasty fame
Back on the hindmost shelves;
The world was to be revamped and made
Angelic in its thrall,
With not a soul of doubtful grade
A-tall.

No selfish purpose was to stand
[We ate it up, this drool];
Hypocrisy was to be banned,
Perfection was to rule;
Our neighbor we would love with love
That should the whole earth span—
The Heav'ns transplanted from above—
O man!

But when ensued the Paris farce,
The Shantung grab, and such,
Our dreams of purity grew sparse.
We fought to beat the Dutch,
We pulled our allies from a hole
And sent the boche pellmell—
Did they applaud us in our role?
Wott'ell!

And here at home, where is that slick
And mighty impulse now?
The Dollar Mark gave it a kick
Upon the noble brow.
But ne'ertheless, some change I see
In echo of war's curse:
We're not "as bad as formerly"—
We're worse!

THE LORD HELPS HIM WHO HELPS HIMSELF.

There was a time, within the memory of the average adult, when milk was 5 cents a quart. In many metropolitan back yards, in most suburban and in all village pastures there were cows. Many men, reflecting upon their childhood, can call to mind the bucolic picture of themselves, arrayed in negligent knickerbockers and single gallus, escorting the family cow to the grass plot.

The average back lot was prim with rows of corn, of potatoes, beans, cabbages, peas, tomatoes—all rugged members of the vegetable family and qualified to set the dining room table a-groaning.

Mother and the girls had not yet acquired that peculiar distaste for needlecraft which is so characteristic today. Between meals the sitting room carpet was flecked with bits of ravelings, discarded basting threads, odds and ends of cloth, and unfurled patterns. The same boy whom we but recently perceived in the sour task of "hi-ing" the cow to the pasture has inadvertently thrust his head in at the door, only to be seized by mother and the girls and draped with unspeakable dress goods, the women folk critically observing the hang of the skirt, the accuracy of the flounce, and the copiousness of the shirring while this unwilling model frets and fidgets in very disgust at his unmanly employment.

There was a time when the farmer smoked—with hickory, mind you—his own hams; when mother and the girls made the kitchen unapproachable with their canning, filling the air with the redolence of fruits and vegetables.

There were winters with everything snugged down all tight and warm. The cellar held its barrels of apples and its bin of potatoes; the shelves were packed with jars of things to eat. Then entered a process, or, rather, the development of a process, called the division of labor.

Mother visited the grocery one day and asked concerning the cost of canned tomatoes. She took her pencil in hand and discovered to her horror that a great many persons, each one charged with a special act in the process of canning tomatoes, could prepare them more cheaply than she could by carrying out the whole manufacture alone. So she left off putting up tomatoes and bought them instead.

Carrying her investigation into the various foods, she found that she could buy all of them more cheaply than she could produce them. She found that the cow was eating too much and that she could buy of the milkman and save money because the milkman could handle a dozen cows with almost the same ease as one. He had only to milk them. They would do their own eating. So mother began buying her milk.

The new process extended to the towns and cities with enormous strides. Flat dwelling became as luxurious as life in a regal palace. The tenant had only to push the button, and ice, milk, heat, groceries, and meats appeared as if by magic. Life was become very pleasant indeed.

Suddenly something snapped. It was the snap itself which snapped. Prices went up, and the luxurious recipient of all these favors found himself in the middle; too far from his base of operations—the cow and the salad patch.

In the days when he had the cow and the garden patch, he was safe behind a fortification that couldn't be taken. But when he sold the cow and the garden went to weeds he had cut himself off from reinforcements, got clear out away from the protecting walls, and was in the land of the enemy, which chortled and hissed on every side.

The division of labor, which seemed such a beneficent thing to mother when she discovered the technique of quantity production, began to develop new complications. Each worker in the complex process and each machine employed began to make such demands that the meek and unobtrusive tomato, the very heart and soul of the industry, was entirely lost sight of.

The patient and reflective cow, thrust out from under the family roof and become a cog in a fearsome industrial establishment, was no longer a pastoral bit in the domestic background, but a haughty monopolist. Upon her palatable ware were based the demands and controversies of the milkers, the carters, the railroads, the distributors, and the milk wagon drivers. Instead of being intimately related to the cow, your flat dweller found himself a half dozen times removed; and with each new agency thrusting itself in between the flat dwelling consumer and the cow he used to milk, the price went up because each intervening agent had to "get his."

Mother had found it so easy to buy ready made dresses that she quit the homely business of strewing the rug with bastings. The girls found, too, that industrial dressmaking could produce so many new styles; new ones every week; new hats, shoes, stockings, lingerie; it was astonishing.

Truly astonishing to father, who had to pay. More astonishing when he reflects upon how wonderful it was to have the cow chewing away at its cud and furnishing milk and cream galore for the coffee, the breakfast food, for the peas and the puddings. Continuously astonishing when he recalls the brave rows of canned vegetables and fruits on the pantry shelves. Yet more astonishing when he thinks upon the swiftly changing styles and the days when he was the handy model for the sitting room dressmaking bee.

We wonder if the tendency is not back to that day of self-help. For example, THE TRIBUNE is able to show that women are venturing upon that return path; 5,000 TRIBUNE dress patterns were distributed in July; the average monthly distribution is more than 4,000; at the rate of 48,000 a year.

Milk at 15 cents the quart argues the necessity of a cow in the back lot, and we think the tendency is in that direction. Eggs at 60 cents a dozen—5 cents apiece—convinces the householder of the utility of a few hens; and potatoes at from 85 cents to $1 a bushel is making the housewife turn to the garden.

The pendulum is swinging. In the trip from the garden to the kitchen the profits are too many. The people are finding it out and replacing the garden where once it was—at the kitchen door.

"PUT UP OR SHUT UP"

Nothing could be abler from the point of view of forensic tactics than the course adopted by the president in his "report" to the people on the treaty of Versailles. The key to it is the defensive offensive of classical military theory. Mr. Wilson spends his eloquence upon what he considers the merits of the treaty. He does not fall back upon a defense of its weaknesses. He does not meet doubts; he sweeps on in a thrilling charge of emotion to a dazzling triumph of hope over experience.

We admire these tactics, justified to the convinced believer doubtless. But we cannot think it either judicial or, from the standpoint of national safety, judicious.

If we could be as confident in the teeth of experience as Mr. Wilson; if we could afford, either from our knowledge of him or of human character and events, to accept his amazing certitudes, his confident predictions of results shrouded for most of us in the darkness of the future, then indeed we should sympathize with his impatience at the insistence of senators in the conscientious performance of their constitutional duty and as a sovereign citizen we should dispatch a telegram forthwith to sign on the dotted line.

But Mr. Wilson's tactics leave our doubts unshaken. If we concede that his assurances are plausible, if we agree that the merits of the treaty may be assayed much as he assays them, if—which is much easier—we freely grant that what he declares the treaty aims at singly and nobly is altogether desirable, nevertheless, since we claim no prophetic inspiration, we must continue to consider the alternative possibilities so shrewdly ignored by Mr. Wilson's enthusiasm, and we must continue to insist that so far as we may devise safeguards against them it shall be done.

We are as desirous of avoiding war as Mr. Wilson. We are as anxious as he to lay the foundation of wiser international relations. But we cannot accept his assurance as against our own view of the uncertainness of all human projects, and we do not propose to find ourselves, if we by cautious prevision can avoid it, not only disappointed of Mr. Wilsons' golden hopes, but seriously embarrassed or vitally injured by their failure.

Mr. Wilson pours forth his lavish drafts upon the future. We say, so far, so good, but we propose to provide as well as we can against the human chance that they may be returned "no funds." It has happened before in the affairs of men.

Following his line of defensive attack, Mr. Wilson challenges the doubters with "Put up or shut up." Well, we put up certain reservations and amendments. They are there for his consideration and for the senate's and the people's. The issue between Mr. Wilson and the reservationists is not as he apparently would have the public believe, whether the treaty is to fail, but whether it is to be accepted as it stands or with the reservations and amendments proposed.

The essential reservations, in THE TRIBUNE'S opinion, are those determined upon after protracted deliberation by the majority of the senate committee on foreign relations. They are summarized as follows:

1. Unconditional right to withdraw from the league.

2. Assumption of no obligation to guarantee territorial integrity of nations under Article X, or to employ troops for coercive purposes or to govern alien territory under a mandate without the direction of congress.

3. Full freedom to determine what questions are domestic, none of which, such as immigration and tariff, shall be subject to consideration by the league.

4. Exemption of the Monroe doctrine from any interference by the league and declaration that the United States is the sole interpreter of the doctrine.

Besides these, we hold that the treaty should be amended to equalize American and British representation in the league. We think the labor section should be given more consideration, but we do not think it desirable that American representatives should be excluded from the various commissions provided for in the treaty.

The important thing at the moment, however, is to save from the tide of Mr. Wilson's confident optimism our sane consideration of the alternative possibilities, to join with him in hope without losing hold of the safeguards proposed by a calm consideration of honorable self-interest and natural security.

OUR LITTLE JOKE ON THE RUSSIANS.

In the Archangel district, where we have lately stepped from under, a group of nonbolshevist Russians faces the unrelenting fury of the slowly encircling bolshevists. Herein is a pitiful little international joke which should indicate to governments the need of thinking through to logical conclusions instead of snapping at temporary expedients.

The Archangel Russians stood pat for a program of sane government. In this they sought the support of the allies, and were accorded it. England and the United States undertook to guarantee the integrity of the anti-bolshevists. Upon this guarantee alone depended the fate of the Archangel group.

Now when we have by the force of arms guaranteed integrity by shooting the bolshevistic advance, and when we withdraw that armed protection, this seems unescapable: the Russians no longer defended are prey to the vengeful fury of the bolshevists—which is precisely what is taking place.

The essential wrong lies not in that the American troops were withdrawn. It is in the absurdity of sending them there in the first place; in the shortsightedness of starting something we could not finish.

Had there been a definite purpose in Russian intervention, a purpose sufficiently powerful to require the dispatch of American troops, these troops should have been sent in numbers adequate to the task. As it was, only a few troops went to Russia, which of itself seems proof that either the bolshevists were underestimated or there was only a half hearted reason for sending them.

The allies should have dominated Russia or stayed out. They could not hope to dominate with a few detachments of soldiers. The net result of our Russian invasion has been to arouse the hatred of the bolshevists against the democratic Archangel group.

THE striking thespians for whom we have a real compassion are those who are compelled to do picket duty. The publicity attending this obligation must make them wince. It apparently has not occurred to the managers to turn the calcium on the pickets. That would rout them in a hurry.

EVEN BOLSHEVISM IS NOT SO BLACK AS IT'S PAINTED.

[From the London Times.]

Interrupting a tramway strikers' meeting in Petrograd, Bolshevists arrested those taking part in it and executed the chairman and a few others in the presence of the rest.

AFTER finishing a novel or other piece of fiction, it was ever our practice to go over the last draft and check up on the "woulds" and "shoulds"; these occasion trouble to nearly all writers. Sometimes it was necessary to hold a clinic on a particular "would" to decide whether it ought to be a "should." But evidently Dr. Wilson is never in doubt. Observe the airy way in which he tossed 'em off in his Columbus speech: "If I couldn't have brought back the kind of treaty I brought back, I wouldn't have come back, because I would have been an unfaithful servant."

MAY we not (to coin a phrase) remind the readers who complained of the age of the how-did-you-find-your-steak-sir wheeze, that when we label a thing "sure fire" we desire to convey the intelligence that we do not consider the wheeze original. Of course, we could head it "This Has Been Printed Before" or "This Is Old Stuff," but we must avoid the utterly obvious. A gadder wrote to us last week, "You had a paragraph this morning that was too damned obvious." Most of our readers resent diagrams, and we strive to please.

THOSE QUEER WESTERN NAMES.

Sir: "So you're from the west," said Doris, whom I met today at luncheon at the In Yan Yan Ke Club, Annawomscutt, R. I. "I know some awf'ly nice western people," she continued. "They live near Chicago: 'Glencoe' I think the name is, but I'm not sure—western names are awf'ly queer, aren't they?" "Uh-huh," said I in the dialect of the aboriginal Rhode Islander, and tabascoed another quahaug. Annawomscutt, by the way, is just east of Papoughsequogh on the Cocumscussuc Pike, between Quonochontaug and Choppequonsett, where the old Wampanoag road leads to Potowomut.

ONE who supposed that Mr. Somerset Maugham had written only one novel, "Of Human Bondage," entreats us to recall the title of the yarn of his we read this summer. After tremendous exertion we have burst a memory cell. It was "The Magician."

"MEMORY, THE WARDER OF THE BRAIN."

[From the Plainfield Enterprise.]

Memory is a wonderful human attribute. Even the things one wants to forget cling like an indellible ink spot. A memory was tested Thursday when Harry Perkins arrived in town. Chet Brownson owns the safe that Harry owned fifteen years ago before he sold the meat market to Wilson. The inside combination had not been worked since Perkins owned the safe and evidently Harry had not had occasion to think of it since, but it happened he had been taught it when a mere child and the memory stuck, so on the second trial the lock yielded and he knew his memory had served him correctly to reach back fifteen years.

From "The Autobiography of Any Movie Actress."

(Helen Wells in Vanity Fair.)

I have often been asked to give advice to girls who want to go into the "movies." To the question of whether or not the life is a dangerous one for a young girl, I can only answer, "yes and no." In the "movies," as in every art, I cannot deny that there are snares and pitfalls lying in wait to lead the wanderer's feet from the "narrow and straight path." She will meet all sorts of men—those kind who will give her fatherly advice and have her best interests at heart, as well as those kind who fall for every pretty face, only to drop it and pursue the next one, leaving a trail of broken hearts behind them. There are, alas, only too many of these fickle charmers—perfect Don Quixotes—to be met with in a moving picture actress' career. A pretty girl must make up her mind that she will receive a great deal of attention, some of it, perhaps, unwelcome. As to whatever dangers or benefits may attend the career of a girl who is not beautiful, I'm afraid I really can't say. It is a subject about which I know nothing about.

I have often been asked what has been my greatest asset in life, and I always answer, "My sense of humor." It has helped me over many a rough place, and has always enabled me to see the "silver" lining to any "storm cloud" that has come up on the highroad of life.

Perhaps this little verse—I'm too modest to tell you who the author is!—will help you as much as it has me. I have always taken it for my guide:

When the sun no longer shines in your heart
And it seems like life is so gloomy and dark,
Just wear a smile and you will see
The world will soon smile back at thee.

Sir: Joan's tale of Rip Van Winkle's dog reminds me of the time I went to hear the Jefferson brothers, Joseph and Thomas, play "The Rivals" in Marquette, Mich. Back of me sat one of the natives, and one of those know-it-all men from Chicago. He started in by criticising the opera house, comparing it unfavorably with those in his beloved city, and when his companion inquired if he had ever seen the elder Jefferson in "The Rivals," replied: "Oh, yes. You know, it was written for the old man."

HEALTH NEWS FROM EUROPE.

FROM Germany some news of health conditions is beginning to leak. But little has come and it will be a long time before anywhere near full reports come out.

In the first place, it will take the disorganized government some time to gather data, and in the second, many of the scientific journals have been discontinued and others are not coming to this country.

Dr. Taylor has made a report on the food supplies, which indicates that while not everybody has had enough, poor nutrition is not greatly in evidence. Dr. J. A. Miller, who has been on the tuberculosis commission in France for several years, reports that the birth rate of Germany has been falling off for a number of years and prior to the beginning of the war it was lower than that of Great Britain and the United States.

In the German cities of more than 200,000 inhabitants the birth rate in 1913 was 20.9, while that of Berlin was 17.9. The birth rate of American cities is around 25. The stories of crowds of German children in the streets are founded upon congregating—the result of curiosity natural to children, and also upon a mental comparison with the relatively childless condition of France, especially in the north and east. The kaiser knew what was in the wind when he offered to be godfather to every eighth child of a German family.

In 1916 the birth rate of the cities fell to 12.3 and of Berlin to 11.6. In 1917 of the cities to 10.9 and of Berlin to 9.9. The death rate in the cities in 1913 was 12.2 and in Berlin 12.3. Therefore, the population in 1913 was still on the increase though the total increase for the year was far less than the former 800,000, and also was only a fraction of the yearly increase in population in this country.

German emigration is negligible. A year or two before the war the number of emigrants in a year was only 23,000, and for several years it had not been much in excess of that figure. Emigration is not a factor in calculating German population.

In 1916 the death rate of the cities had risen to 14.9; of Berlin to 18.2. In 1917 to 17.9 and 23, respectively. These figures are apart from the military rates. It is probable that in every year since the war began the German empire has been losing population by reason of an excess of deaths over births.

Tuberculosis is a good index of the strain under which a people have been and their lack of proper nutrition. The tuberculosis rate of German cities was 1.5 in 1913, 1.6 in 1916, and 2.3 in 1917; of Berlin, 1.7 in 1913, 2.6 in 1916, and 3.1 in 1917.

There is very little information available from Austria-Hungary, and the probability is that satisfactory figures from that country never will become available. The best figures obtainable are those furnished by the British statistician, Mallet. These figures indicate that Austria-Hungary has suffered from the war far more than Germany did.

In one group of people there were 7,311 deaths from consumption in 1913. In 1917 among the same group of people there were 11,755 deaths from the same disease. Great Britain has come out of the war in very good shape from the standpoint of national vitality.

The birth rate has not declined faster than it was declining before the war, and the death rates have been held low. The people have been fairly well nourished. There has been an increase in the tuberculosis rate. This increase will hold for several years. This proves that the nutrition of this people has suffered somewhat.

Dr. Miller reports that the French did not suffer for food during the war, but there has been some shortage since the armistice was signed. In fact, the food situation in various parts of Europe is either more difficult now or threatens shortly to become more so than during the existence of hostilities. The armistice checked some of the relief agencies and greatly lessened the activities of war industries, while the delay in the consummation of peace makes difficult the growth of industries necessary to compensate.

The death rate of France has been higher than the birth rate certainly since the early days of the war.

Early in the war Prof. Landouzy of France made some very alarming statements relative to the prevalence of tuberculosis in the French armies. The international health board and the Red Cross, learning of these reports, sent Dr. Briggs over to investigate. He made a report based on the Landouzy figures which caused the sending of a tuberculosis commission to France.

Dr. J. A. Miller, whose report I am drawing on extensively, was the chairman of that commission. When figures as to the prevalence of tuberculosis in the French army drawn from the reports of Briggs and Landouzy were published in this column and reprinted in the Paris edition of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, the French deputies debated the subject, denying the truth of the statements.

An investigation made by Maj. E. C. Rest and others in the French army showed that Landouzy had grossly exaggerated the prevalence of tuberculosis in the French army and that Briggs' report overstated the case.

Nevertheless the American commission has remained in France and it is planned to keep it there for a number of years longer.

This spring the Academy of Medicine debated for two months whether tuberculosis should be made a reportable disease. Many of them frankly admitted that they needed the same kind of effort to control tuberculosis that was employed in England and Germany.

If other proof was needed, this discussion showed that France was not up to standard in their fight against consumption.

Dr. Miller reports that the statistics of Paris do not show any increase in the prevalence of tuberculosis, but the impression of the men doing tuberculosis work in that city is that the disease has increased since 1914.

No information, extensive enough to be worth while, has come from Italy. In the stretch between Venice and Trieste malaria is ten times as prevalent as it was before the war. Instead of having a few cases, and those limited to the late summer and autumn, in 1918 malaria prevailed during every month of the year, and the cases during July, August, and September were both numerous and severe.

In this district the people were subjected to great privations. Many of those who lived in the swampy lands and who were accustomed to go into the mountains were compelled during the war to remain in the lowlands. There was no possibility of protecting themselves against mosquitoes or of having sterilizing treatment for malaria. They did well to live through the privations to which they were subjected.

Since the Italians suffered so much from insufficient food, their tuberculosis rate must have risen. In the earlier years of the war the people of Belgium got along very well. The American commission in Belgium reported that conditions were fairly satisfactory up to July, 1916. Hundreds of infant welfare clinics were organized and the baby death rate was lower than that of the United States.

After the early days of the war there were no epidemics of typhoid or other preventible disease. In the autumn of 1914 they had a bad epidemic of typhoid in the British-French occupied area at the northwest, but the army took this situation in hand and quickly wiped out the disease.

But even as early as 1916 it was evident that the children were undernourished and that consumption was on the increase. In the Lucas report it was stated that a large proportion of the older children were tuberculous. The Americans who, prior to that time, had been furnishing milk for babies, extended their work and gave food, and especially milk, to all children of school age.

In the Miller report it is stated that the adults in a large part of Belgium have been trying to live on 1,800 to 2,000 calories of food a day. They should have had twice as much in order to do the labor required of them and keep their health.

It will be found that tuberculosis has increased greatly, and this will offset their freedom from typhoid and other forms of contagion. Perhaps we will never be able to get close figures from Belgium.

They will never be able to get track of all of their scattered people. No figures are available from Serbia or any of the Jugo-Slavic or any of the Balkan countries.

Serbia suffered fearfully from typhus in the early part of the war and from famine later. They must be badly decimated. The same holds true of Roumania. There are no reports as to condition in Bulgaria or Turkey.

Polish and Czecho-Slavic nations are too young and as yet disorganized to have any demography statistics.

Before the war the Russians were noted for statistics. The old statistical corps is scattered and the general disorganization would not permit the gathering of statistics were they still available. The world has no knowledge of conditions in Russia. Their army had more deaths than any other, but it is a safe guess that famine, disease, neglect, and disorganization will kill several times as many.

From the standpoint of conserving life, the rule of the czar will compare favorably with that of Lenine and Trotzky.

FEARS TO GAIN WEIGHT.

"2. What kind of a diet can I use to reduce?"

REPLY.

1. Women 5 feet 2 inches may weigh from 112 to 148, according to their age, without being overweight. You should not be so timid about giving your age.

2. Avoid candy and all sweets. Do not eat more than three small pieces of bread a day. Eat no waffles, biscuits, spoon bread, or any other food made from flour or meal.

$6 A WEEK.

Chicago, Aug. 29.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Thanks for the editorial, "Give the Carpenter a Chance." I am a carpenter and I can say that there has been no secret referendum taken at any time on any question in this strike. There was no vote taken for a strike or for what we should strike.

In the spring there was talk among the men that we really ought to have 90 cents an hour to keep up with the cost of living. During June some jobs went on strike for 90 cents. The next thing I knew we were all out and our officials were demanding $1 an hour. I don't know where they got the authority. But if a sensible man gets up in a meeting and attempts to talk about anything except $1 an hour, he is ruled out of order or hooted down by certain radicals.

Several men who have left town to work elsewhere have told me that if they liked the town where they went they would take their families and stay there. They are about disgusted with some of the union tactics in Chicago.

Our president says we will hold out indefinitely, as we are being paid $6 a week. I wonder how long he would stick if he were getting $6 a week?

MAY HAVE TO MAKE NEW DECLARATION.

Appleton, Wis., Aug. 31.—[To the Friend of the People.]—My first papers were taken out Nov. 14, 1913, at the Circuit court of Chicago. Came to this country on Oct. 17, 1911. Applied for citizenship during the war, but was denied to me as an alien enemy. What can I do?

READER.

If the alien's declaration of intention shall be more than seven years old after he shall have resided in the state of Wisconsin one year at least, he must, before he may file a petition for naturalization, file a new declaration of intention and wait two years before applying for citizenship.

SMOKELESS COAL WILL REMEDY.

Chicago, Aug. 31.—[To the Friend of the People.]—The large apartment building at the southwest corner of Buena avenue and Clarendon avenue has a large chimney, which smokes so badly that it is a great nuisance. Whenever the wind is from the northeast, as it is when we have a cool spell, this smoke is blown into the apartments in Crescent place, thus damaging thousands of dollars' worth of decorating and causing a bad smell of smoke in the rooms.

A. C.

I have had an investigation made of the complaint regarding the nuisance occasioned by the emission of smoke from the chimney of the apartment building at 4178-94 Clarendon avenue.

The owner has been notified to supply the water heater with smokeless coal so that the nuisance will be abated.

Acting Smoke Inspector.

LIGHTS IN SUBWAY.

Chicago, Sept. 1.—[To the Friend of the People.]—The viaduct at Sixty-third street, one block west of Robey, is one of the long, dark viaducts of this city, poorly lighted, and about a block long. This is growing to be a menace to the neighborhood. Cannot something be done to celan up this viaduct and provide for sufficient light to make it safe to walk through?

H. A. C.

The above is a combined Pennsylvania railroad and Baltimore & Ohio C. T. R. R. subway. The main portion belonging to the Pennsylvania is now wired and will be connected to service within a few days. Plans are in preparation for wiring the B. & O. portion and that too will be lighted in the near future.

WM. G. KEITH,

WAIT A YEAR BEFORE REMARRIAGE.

Chicago, Aug. 26.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Can a person divorced in the state of Arkansas marry in the state of Illinois within a year? If not, can they marry in any other state and live in Illinois as man and wife legally?

M. A.

If the ground of divorce was one recognized by Illinois you could not marry in Illinois until after the expiration of a year. You cannot go to another state to marry with the intention to return to Illinois and to avoid the law of Illinois, and have the marriage legal in Illinois.

OUR AUTOCRATIC ARMY

by Stanley MacDonald

(A second article on the relation between officers and soldiers in the American expeditionary forces.) (In printing this article The Tribune does not make itself authority for the statements therein contained.)

It was while crossing the Atlantic that I was forced to begin the reconstruction of my ideas regarding the new democracy of the American army. Whenever a certain high ranked officer on board decided to rise and walk about the ship life became a veritable nightmare. A bugler far ahead of him announcing his approach, and nobody was comfortable on the boat until his gracious majesty had passed. Sometimes he roared out a harsh reprimand to some unfortunate who was too seasick to know or care much about what was going on; sometimes he deigned to march on with his staff in haughty silence. As I stood at attention, often for a sickening length of time, down in the stuffy hold of that boat carrying 10,000 passengers, and watched the performance, I wondered wherein lay the difference between our democratic army and the one we were going to fight.

At Brest we found conditions fully as bad as any description given them by the American press since that time. We had been at war over a year, and there was surely no excuse for that Black Hole of Calcutta at the very entry to France and the theater of war. With new packs varying in weight from sixty to seventy-five pounds, we painfully wandered around in the mud, at the end of an all day wait and climb, while the camp authorities took their own good time in showing us the way to bunks and beds. Finally we went to bed—in a hut which had no windows or doors—spreading our blankets on the mud and water of the rain soaked, natural floor. During the week we were there we begged to have a fire at which to dry our clothes and stop the chills which were fast taking our men to the hospital. But we were laughed at by the camp officers, and we had to go without. Later we secured wet sawdust to spread over the ground, and, when we were allowed to go to bed at all, we endeavored to sleep a little, cold as we were and damp; and through exhaustion sometimes rest came to us. From experience, I know that under the excitement of shell and bomb in the lines, one can live and bear it until he is relieved. But Brest was not at the front. The food was a positive disgrace to any country, let alone to rich America.

Several nights we were taken down to the docks to work the night shift at the hardest of manual labor. Instead of using mechanical means installed for raising supplies into the warehouses it pleased the officials to make pack mules of the men who had landed there on their way forward. All night we toiled, without pause or rest but for a midnight meal, carrying on our backs seventy-five pound boxes of corned beef or one hundred pound bags of sugar up two flights of winding, unlighted stairs, with ceilings that caught and unbalanced our load, and we turned to fall in line again! In the morning we lay down in a soggy tent with hands torn and bleeding and with back and sides sore and bruised, only to be turned out within an hour or so for further detail.

When we moved forward in French box cars we were not issued sufficient canned food to last us for the whole three days' traveling, and when we asked for more we were refused. From a company history, we learned later, that while we remained stowed away, hungry, forty-two bundled men with packs to every small box car, the officers left their coach at one city and enjoyed a sumptuous dinner, which the major had very thoughtfully ordered there in advance. When we reached our temporary destination, we were left sitting in the road for five hours, while the officers calmly went out to dinner and secured for themselves proper living quarters. Late in the evening we formed in mess line and were afterwards sent to barracks.

THIS absolute callousness on the part of officers towards their men was the rule rather than the exception, so far as I could see or learn. Instead of the affectionate care of the French officers towards their troops, which inspired the tribute of the poilus when they speak lovingly of "my captain," or the friendly brotherhood of interests which made Canadian officers and men eager to serve and die together, there was too often in the American army a feeling of loathing and disgust on the one side, and an empty, inflated sense of God given superiority on the other, which ruined any possibility of that fellowship of spirit which was to make our army truly great.

The mess officer was allowed full control of the food supplies, and he could arrange it so that the officers could choose the best of everything before any reservations were made for the mass of the men. Protests and pleas met with idle promises and little other result. When special boxes of sweets or fruit were ordered from the states it rested with the officers whether or not they should be handed over, and sometimes they were not. There were men in some outfits who actually went hungry for lack of good, wholesome food, or for lack of a sufficient quantity of any kind, and most of their francs or marks from pay day went to buy enough to keep them from becoming ill.

In the matter of physical comfort it little concerned a legion of officers how the men fared so long as their own backs were warm and unburdened. The examples of Samaritan generosity were as sweet as they were rare. And what did it matter to the colonel, alone in his five passenger car, how dripping wet and tired the solitary doughboy might be, trudging along for miles in French mud and winter rains, so long as he had had a good dinner with plenty of wine, and was warm and—kept his dignity!

In Germany, last spring, the detachment commander took a notion to have us assemble from all over town for personal inspection, at 6 o'clock in the morning. So, before daybreak, for no possible good reason, we were reviewed by a man who did not know enough to refrain from breaking through the lines or from dismissing us from open formation. On the way home, full pack inspections were held again and again, each time accompanied by the childish threats of "Court martial, Court martial!" or "We won't let you go home," if there should be found any minor lack of equipment. After standing hours at a time in the burning sands at Le Mans, we were ordered to a village some miles away, to march at midday when the sun was hottest: again with no possible reason for choosing such an hour. The simple truth was, nobody cared. Two men fell out because of the combined heat and the strain of the weight on their backs, and the colonel from his car expressed himself, so I was told, as "surprised and disgusted" at such weakness. I wondered that the men were not kicked into the ditch and left there, as, in the story common in France, was done on other occasions in certain [illegible]

BUT further, the army has advertised the care it takes of the health of its men. I went with a friend of mine to the company dentist to have a tooth filled. He said he was sorry but he had not the material with which to fix it, and that he should have to leave it till he went home, although he was afraid that then it would be too late to save it. When we arrived overseas I had asked for some aspirin for a cold, and had been told that all our supply of medicine had been thrown overboard because there had been no one to carry it ashore. And ours was a hospital company!

Even in the hospital many of the doctors forgot the sympathy of their profession in the new pride of being officers. A private, feeling sick, went to the officer of the day and asked him for some medicine, after the regular hour for sick call. "You're too late," came the rough answer. "Get out of this: I'll teach you military discipline!" One boy from Minnesota received a severe reprimand from one doctor because he forgot to say "Sir," and he never would go on sick call again, no matter how poorly he felt. Lieut. Gray, who was first of all a true medical man, went into the sick room one morning and stopped to ask a patient how he was. In replying the boy called him "Doctor." Then quickly correcting himself he called him "Lieutenant," and, knowing the officer well, he told him of a similar error he had made the day before, with a captain, and of the "bawling out" he had received on account of it. "Never mind, sonny," said the lieutenant, "call me what you like; I'm a darned sight prouder of being a doctor than I am of being an officer." When the officer made the rounds of the ward in a base hospital, in which I was a patient for a long time, every man who was able to be up had to stand at attention by his bed until the last man was visited. We must not forget that a doctor was an officer, even when we were sick on Christmas day.

Following lectures innumerable to us enlisted men concerning "how we must act on the trains so as not to be injured," one of our officers attempted to board the train at the mouth of a tunnel and was instantly killed. One lieutenant flourished a revolver before his men—much as a bolshevik commisar from New York had flashed a dagger before me in Russia when I went to him to request a pass—and addressed them as follows: "We've got the drop on you fellows over here. I may use my gun on one man in this company, whom I have in mind, before I'm through around here." Again, this same officer undertook to help another officer censor the mail in a room where there were two or three other workers. Finding an ardent love letter, he proceeded to read it aloud, ridiculing it to those present. Against the angry protest of one of the nurses, he stammered in hurt surprise: "Why, but I'm an officer!"

Sometimes I wondered if those superior officers were not beginning to realize the indignities which men of their class had been allowed to heap upon the millions who had come to France proud to belong to America's army, and believing that, as members of that army, they had exalted positions of trust in a fight for right and freedom. They had come thinking of rank as pertaining to greater responsibility, greater leadership. They had not thought it mattered much else; they were not professional soldiers, and as for the discipline, they knew that without it an army would be useless, so they were willing to submit to that. It was a shock to them, in the "army that was to be different," to find that rank appeared not to represent, to the great mass of officers whom they met, leadership or added duties and responsibilities; on the other hand, it stood for new privileges, more pay, better food, finer clothes, arrogant disdain, and fixed lines of social distinction—and little else.

There was not the pride there should have been in our hearts when we saluted our officers; we came to begrudge them the slightest sign of respect. We knew that in America they dared not be so neglectful, so contemptuous; we were in France, and they thought that when we came home we should forget. That was the secret. In the ranks of enlisted men I have met and lived with merchants, farmers, laborers, lawyers, doctors, colored men, foreigners, members of the editorial staffs of great newspapers, scholars, wealthy business men, and preachers of the gospel. And I have seen officers, too blindly stupid to realize the democratic fabric of our forces, treat the mass as though it were composed only of fools, criminals, or naughty children. The French army makes no boasts as ours did of its democracy, yet its privates included some of the greatest of living Frenchmen, who could step from the ranks after the war and lead the mass of their former officers. The French army recognized this and all went well. There was iron discipline, but no snobbery, no uncomfortable cramping for the sake of some flighty young officer's pride.

THOUSANDS of our men lost, at least for the time, that love of country which was our joy and our security. The only reason why more of the men did not attain to the depths of bolshevism was because they saw that the officers who were the most ignorant and radical and "idealistic" in theory became the most insolent, hardened officers in practice. It was the experience of Russia over again. Proletarianism on the throne makes the worst sort of master. One of the most nagging, hidebound men with authority whom I met in France was a young fellow who seemed to be kind hearted until he was given any power. Then he was merciless. He had never gone to school a day in his life, and he had secured his position by wheedling for it when he was still in a southern camp on this side. The officers whom all American soldiers honored and revered were those men possessing the education of life and of experience and carrying hearts too royal to be sent astray by a temporary leadership of army men, who were, like themselves, engaged in war, not as a pleasure or for sordid ambition, but as a plain patriotic duty which they were eager to finish quickly, so as the sooner to return to the regular routine of home and business life.

After all, it was the system that was at fault in France—the system, from the very fountain heads of power. Vicious acts of officers were condoned; there was a more or less unwritten law, "The king can do no wrong." Officers saw the drift of the tide, and, dropping their old ideas, fell into the easiest way. It can truly be said that it was their natures which were mostly ruined by the Prussian plan. The enlisted man had no practical way of remedying his case, and the higher authorities, like the ostrich, hid their heads in the sand and "saw or heard nothing wrong." While President Wilson was speaking so eloquently of the boys who were helping to lead the world to the Elysian fields of world content, those boys were impatiently straining at the bonds of one of the firmest military bureaucracies that has ever cursed the earth.

Now, after leaving the ranks of the American army, I am convinced that the average American soldier suffered quite as much at the hands of the military authorities in France and Germany, in comparison to his status and priviliges in civil life, as did the average Russian on the eastern front. True, the German received harsh treatment, and he was but a despised cog in a terrible machine of conquest. But he had been brought up to believe that his life first of all was an automaton of the state. He had been trained to bow to authority on all sides, and to accept it as given by Almighty God through His sole agents, the Prussian autocrats. To him it was not an unnatural treatment; and it was to smash this devilish system—before it smashed us—that we went to war.

It may be that the United States will never require another army to go overseas. But that is a dream, the illusion of which is fast fading away. It will at least pay our government to possess the happy assurance that another army could be raised, if necessary, as large as the one which has just returned. But, unless the necessity is stayed for a generation, the task of securing such a force would be greater than one cares to contemplate. Thinking men are not talking idly when they say openly: "The next army will find two men missing: myself and the man who comes after me!" "I shall be a conscientious objector the next time!"

GEE! WHAT IF MOTHER WOULD STRIKE

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

by Fanny Butcher

Last week's best sellers in a leading book store were:

FICTION.

"The Branding Iron" [Houghton-Mifflin], by Katharine Newlin Burt.
"Moon and Sixpence" [Doran], by W. Somerset Maugham.
"Dangerous Days" [Doran], by Mary Roberts Rinehart.
"Christopher and Columbus" [Doubleday-Page], anonymous.
"Old Madhouse" [Henry Holt], by De Morgan.
"Mary Oliver: A Life" [MacMillan], by May Sinclair.

NONFICTION.

"The Journal of a Disappointed Man" [Doran], by Charles Downer Hazen.
"Last Letters of a Living Dead Man" [Mitchell-Kennerly], by Elsa Barker.
"Set in Malice" [Brentano], by Gerald Cumberland.

"SYLVIA and Michael" [Harpers], by Compton Mackenzie, continues the roving adventures of "Sylvia Scarlet" and answers to some degree the imperative call which "Sylvia Scarlett" left for an ending. The earlier book didn't end. It simply stopped. Now that "Sylvia and Michael" has come, with the author's note that it is the third book of Sylvia, and published separately only on account of the difficulties of production, the sense of incompleteness which Sylvia left is assuaged. It has, however, appeared too long after its first two parts to retain the sense of its being one with them. It is not one with them artistically. "Sylvia Scarlett" was not an epoch making novel. It was, however, a good reproduction of the life of a sensitive little girl who had amazing and often grewsome experiences, and of that child grown to a woman who translated her experiences into her art. The Sylvia of "Sylvia Scarlett" was as child and woman a fascinating artist, an intriguing character. The Sylvia of "Sylvia and Michael" is a dowdy character. She has many thrilling experiences, does a lot of dangerous jaunting about in war times, in search of adventure and her soul, but she is neither fascinating nor an artist. "Sylvia and Michael" is a good story, but it isn't a good book. It is full of intrigue, but it is not intriguing.

"Women and World Federation" [McBride] is the word of a thinking woman to other thinking women on the question of a stable future peace. Florence Guertin Tuttle believes unswervingly in a league of nations to enforce peace, but she believes even more unwaveringly that no stable future peace is possible without the constructive aid of all women in man's dealings, whether that peace be international or industrial.

"The Mystery Keepers" [John Lane] goes all of the mysteries which Marion Fox has previously concocted one better. It's the most uncanny and spooky of 'em all. A family feud dating back to medieval times which results in the mysterious death by violence of each succeeding heir to the family estate—que voulez vous encore?

Three volumes of war records have just appeared, each one of them of unusual interest. "What America Did" [Dutton], by Florence Finch Kelly, is a complete almost statistical record of what was done by the United States in the war, both at home and abroad. "Canada at War" [Doran], by J. Castell Hopkins, compiler of the Canadian Annual Review, is an exhaustive record of the part which Canada and especially Canadian soldiers took in the great struggle. It contains the remarkable "Epic of 100 Days," by Capt. R. J. Renison, called "A Story of Five Cities." The third volume is a small one called "The Sword of Deborah" [Doran] and is the tale of the part English women took in the war by F. Tennyson Jesse. Miss Jesse has taken to her task—an official one—the charm of style which has already won for her countless American admirers.

Another volume of a record in the war especially interesting to Chicagoans is "The Story of the Rainbow Division" [Boni & Liveright], by Raymond S. Tompkins.

For the person who likes to hire a pilot for the passage through the dangerous rapids of modern poetry, "New Voices" [Macmillan] is hereby suggested, and given an excellent character by one who has just accepted its services and is greatly pleased with results. Marguerite Wilkinson has made a thorough analysis of modern poetry under such chapter headings as "The Pattern of a Poem," "Organic Rhythm," "Images and Symbols," "The Diction of Contemporary Poetry," "Certain Conservative and Certain Radical Poets," "How Poems Are Made," and has grouped the spirit of "Contemporary Poetry" under such emotions as Democracy, Patriotism, Love, Religion, Nature, and Personality, and she has written a chapter on "Poetry for Children," which ought to start groping mothers toward the light. After each chapter there appear contemporary poems to illustrate her assertions. Unlike the anthologies which have, at best, no more discussion than is found in an introduction, "New Voices" is most informative about the burning questions of poetry.

Speaking of French literary matters, Jacques Rivière's La Nouvelle Revue Française is reappearing after the long intermission caused by the war.

"Small Things" [Appleton] is Margaret Deland's first putting of pen to paper since the devastating death of her husband. It is illuminating that her first literary work should be a setting down of the small things that dulled her own sorrow in her participation in the great international sorrow. A little book of war experiences, "Small Things" is in no way remarkable except for the obvious revivifying power which those experiences had for Mrs. Deland, a power which she never sentimentalizes about in relation to her own sadness. Perhaps, now that she has found her writing voice again, she will speak as she used, with the tongues of men and angels.

"Mummery" [Doran], Gilbert Cannan's newest story of genius, is almost wholly unconvincing. It is almost as though Mr. Cannan had said: "I must have bizarre characters. I must write of genius and the stage. I must have my heroine beautiful and a great artist." And thus having his ingredients for a good literary pie, forgot to cook them, jumbled them, quite raw, into one of his famous crusts, and served them cold. It takes the fire of genius to bake such a pie to set before the discriminating King Reader of 1919. We have had too many good novels this year. Two years ago "Mummery" might have been savory to our taste. But then we were on a war diet.

Three recent additions to the Penguin Series [Boni & Liveright] include "The Curious Republic of Gondour," by Samuel L. Clemens; "Sketches and Reviews," by Walter Pater, and "Japanese Fairy Tales," by Lafcadio Hearn and others. The Mark Twain book includes passing articles written for the Galaxy and the Buffalo Express, nothing which will detract from the effulgence of the reputation for humor which Mark Twain had, is having, and will continue to have. Walter Pater's book made me realize how essentially alike all reviews are, and made me read again some of the "Early Reviews of Great Writers, 1786-1832," which are preserved for their comments on the work, not for their inherent literary qualities, as Pater's are. And they were strangely similar! There is little of that exquisitely embroidered prose which makes Pater's "Marius the Epicurean" one of the rarely lovely word tapestries of all literature. As for the Japanese Fairy Tales, Lafcadio Hearn wrote only four of the twenty. It would be a useful volume, however, for the mother pursued by the cry "Tell me a story."

If you were one of the privileged few who met that fiery young Irishman, Shaw Desmond, in New York in the spring, or if you were one of the many admirers of his first novel, "Democracy" [Scribners], you'll be interested to know what Mr. Desmond thought about his work: "It is a sociological novel—a novel because I believe in the novel as the highest form of creative art, a sociological novel, because the real creative novelist of the future will also be a sociologist. Don't misunderstand me, the sociological novelist must be artist first and scientist afterward. His work must be primarily fiction and not a mere framework on which to hang social data. In my novel there is not a single word of sociological propaganda. I worked out my scheme through depicting the life of my characters. . . . 'Democracy,' while dealing with the period before, during, and after the war, was accepted by my English publishers two years ago for production after the war. Subsequent events have not necessitated the alteration of a single word of my account of the outcome of the struggle."

David Pinski is the literary Moses of the modern children of Israel. He is leading them from the bondage of sordid Hester street into the promised land of mental and spiritual beauty. He has seen the vision of a Yiddish literature and he is spending his life proclaiming that vision. He is one of the most earnest of modern writers, and one of the most gifted, though one of the least known. He pugnaciously clings to a language which has never been an absolute language, is not formally taught, which lives, like the sagas of old, by mouth to mouth teaching. Determined that it shall have some importance in the literary history of the world, he uses that language as though it were the tongue of the gods. His plays are acknowledged masterpieces both in Europe and here—thanks be to the labors of love of Dr. Isaac Goldberg in making them available to us. The first volume of David Pinski's short stories to be translated has come from Dr. Goldberg's understanding pen. "Temptations" [Brentano], it is called, and it is a group of stories all with the theme of temptation, some ironic, some modern, some biblical, some Talmudic, some satiric, but all of them remarkable. "Beruriah," a Talmudic tale, is, according to Dr. Goldberg, one of the greatest short stories ever written. "Drabkin" is a keen satire on the socialist turned labor "boss." One of the most gripping things about Mr. Pinski's work is a fact of life, not an accomplishment of fiction. And that fact is, that he, this leader of his chosen people, fired with his vision, is a newspaper editor in New York City, practically unknown outside his circle, and yet worshipped, literally worshipped, by his people all over the United States, who, through his enthusiasm, are actually coming to look upon Yiddish as a literary language.

Edward Bellamy's "Looking Backward" is so forward looking in spite of the fact that it was first published in 1887 that the Houghton-Mifflin company has brought out a new edition of the story, which had a wider influence in the United States than any book since "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

MAURICE MAETERLINCK, TRANSLATOR

by James Gibbons Huneker

THE agreeable news that Maurice Maeterlinck will for the first time visit the United States and lecture here at Carnegie hall next January may set people rereading the great Belgian poet, philosopher, and patriot. That he is still a favorite with our literature loving public, any librarian will tell. No doubt he will have a message for America in addition to the thrilling story of his part in the great war. His plays, first jeered at, never reached average theatergoers, with the exception of "Monna Vanna." That most exquisite of fables, "Pélléas et Mélisande," framed in magical music by Claude Debussy, has been visualized in opera by the genius of Mary Garden. But it is Maeterlinck the moralist, the philosopher and mystic, who has made the profoundest appeal to his American audience; as playwright he is known and admired by a minority, and, be it said, a minority of taste and intellect.

Just at present, after the "high-brow" has been laughed off our map of contemporary culture, the "low-brow" is getting his innings. Brotherhood of blatherskites and the noble proletariat are seated in the saddle. We shall, no doubt, be edified by the revelations of taste displayed in the Seven Arts; have we not already assisted at the spiritual banquet spread for us by the upholders of jazz music? "Jazz and Jesus" is the latest combination advertised in certain churches where religion is elevated to the dignity of a breakfast food—canned ideals, frozen food, pickled politics, chewing gum, the "movies," a vulgar literature, a degraded theater, patriotic prohibition, opera conventionalized, and a deification of noise that is become a national neurosis. Culture is certainly humming the country over. For the regnant "low-brow" the work of Maeterlinck is negligible. All the more reason, then, that he be sympathetically studied by intelligent people. He is a distinguished thinker, a distinguished artist; both a mystic and a meliorist.

It is of another side of this versatile Fleming that I would speak: Maurice Maeterlinck, translator of Shakespeare, specifically of "Macbeth." Now, the way of the translator is hard. Maeterlinck tells us this with gracious style in his French version of "Macbeth"; his introduction to the play is simple and perspicacious. A loving student for years of the English poet, he is acquainted with the vast commentary that has parasitically incumbered that giant oak; his notes reveal the depth and breadth of his reading of the exegetists.

A literary critic has asked: Why translate Shakespeare? The answer is obvious: Because he is Shakespeare. No English writer, with the possible exception of Chaucer, is so difficult to transpose to another language; yet Shakespeare has been translated into nearly every language, and is still Shakespeare. Marlowe and Milton, Shelley and Keats evaporate in translation; but Shakespeare, even when shorn of his music, remains the essential Shakespeare. He is lyrical in Italian, sturdier in German, in French more rhetorical. Yet his essence is not lost. The same cannot be said of Goethe in French, Ibsen in English, or Dante in Dutch. If, as has been asserted, the philosophy of Shakespeare is borrowed from Montaigne, his humor from Rabelais, his history from Plutarch, Holinshed, his stories from Bandello and other Italian romancers, and if his poetry is not translatable, what then is the secret of his power even when garbed in a foreign language? Maeterlinck does not precisely ask this question, though he is conscious of its complexity.

HIS introduction poses as a preliminary the merits of the trilogy, "Hamlet," "Lear," and "Macbeth." The last named he considers is a solitary peak in the domain of tragedy which Aeschylus alone could have climbed. Critics may disagree with this contention. "Lear" has been called the Himalayan summit of the tragic. However, we needs must fall in line at present with the Belgian poet, as he is chiefly concerned with "Macbeth." He finds the play a sort of biography, more or less legendary; indeterminately it floats on the border of legend and history. The form is confused, the chief characters unsympathetic. "Macbeth" is not a "pièce bien faite." It is too long.

Of the more than two thousand verses, about one-fifth must be suppressed for stage representation. This history of two crowned assassins is repugnant; for their intelligence is mediocre, their show of repentance null; in a word, there is little in the machinery of the drama to win our approbation. All the qualities that do not go to the making of a masterpiece are abundantly present. Nevertheless, a masterpiece "Macbeth" is, and one that quite o'ercrows Goethe, Racine, Corneille—we are now quoting Maeterlinck, who sets himself the task of solving the enigma. For all scholarly Frenchmen from Voltaire to Faguet a play is literature as well as moving drama. It must logically develop according to immutable canons; if not Greek, then Gallic. Maeterlinck, with his Flemish temperament—one is tempted to add, his Gothic fond—has no such academic scruples. His own theater shows him a poet who first supped on the horrors of the Elizabethan and later dramatists. He knows Marlowe as well as Webster, John Ford, and Beaumont and Fletcher. "Macbeth," with its tremendous painting of sinister souls, âmes damnées, stirred him to his very marrow.

He dwells upon the impersonality of the English poet, his conversational diapason, the realistic speech encountered so often; above all, Maeterlinck exposes his favorite thesis: that a dramatist of the first rank always suggests an "interior dialogue," (see his remarks on Ibsen's "Masterbuilder"). This is markedly the case with Shakespeare. Maurice Barrès has said: "For an accomplished spirit there is but one dialogue, that between our two egos—the momentary ego that we are, the ideal ego toward which we strive." The very pauses in "Macbeth" are pregnant. The detestable crime is only the framework about which hover echoes of the supernatural voices of the human conscience, and overtones of guilty souls flood the air. Maeterlinck does not revel in transcendal ecstasies. If he is the poet in dealing with the poetic elements of Shakespeare, he is the man of the theater in his analysis of dramatic motivation. He recognizes the miraculous in "Macbeth," because he knows, as Goethe knew, that every great work of art is incommensurable, even to its creator.

AND the translation! There's the rub. If a landscape is a state of soul (Amiel's "état d'âme"), so is a translation. Maeterlinck rehearses the various attempts to domesticate Shakespeare in the French language, from Pierré Letourneur, François Victor Hugo—not to be confounded with his famous father—Benjamin Laroche, Maurice Pottecher, Alexandre Beljame, to Maeterlinck himself. (He does not mention the "Hamlet" of Marcel Schwob and Morand.) Fidelity to the rhythmic music, verbal music, poetic spirit, local color, idioms, interpretations—how many rocks there are in the road of the conscientious translator, tormented by the supreme majesty and the humanity of Shakespeare's speech! Maeterlinck gives as example the lines (Act III., last scene):

> Strange things I have in head that will to hand
> Which must be acted ere they may be scanned.

Hugo renders it thus: "J'ai dans la tête d'etranges choses qui reclament ma main et veulent être exécutées avant d'être méditées," which I submit is clumsy, colorless, as well as unrhythmic. Beljame's version is better, so, Pottecher's. Guizot, Montégut, Laroche, and Georges Duval are also adduced. Best of all is Maeterlinck's attempt: "J'ai dans la tête d'etranges choses qui aboutiront à ma main; et qu'il faut accomplir avant qu'on les ait méditées." Here we are far from the lovely French variation of "Frailty, thy name is woman!" which was translated: "Mlle. Frailty is the name of a lady."

Maurice Maeterlinck, with his fund of poetic sympathy, his subtle intuitions, tact, knowledge, and verbal virtuosity, can successfully bridge the gulf that lies between the genius of the French and the English languages. Here are a few specimen single lines which show the agile mind of the translator: "When shall we three meet again?" "Quand nous retrouverons—nous?" Or, "Fair is foul, and foul is fair": "Le laid est beau et le beau' laid." Literal, to be sure, yet euphonic.

Of necessity the onomatopoeia is missed in the speech: "A drum! a drum! Macbeth doth come." This is rendered: "Le tambour! le tambour! Macbeth arrive ici." Nor is "Etéins-toi, éteins-toi, court flambeau!" altogether akin to "Out, out, brief candle!" But "Frappe donc, Macbeth, et damné soit celui qui criera le premier: 'Arrête! C'est assez!'" retains a tithe of the primal rhythmic vigor and assonance of "Lay on Macduff; and damned be he that first cries, 'Hold, enough!'" "Hang out your banners on the outward walls" is thus given: "Déployez, vos bannières sur les remparts extérieurs," a faithful enough transcription.

Some of the tirades are admirably paraphrased, strange as they may sound to English ears. The ferocity of Lady Macbeth's speech, Act. I., Scene 5, misses neither in meaning nor in its terrible intonations; and Maeterlinck has fairly succeeded with such a verbal snarl as:

> . . . Hie thee hither,
> That I may pour my spirits in thine ear
> And chastise with the valor of my tongue
> All that impedes thee from the golden round
> Which fate and metaphysical aid doth seem
> To have thee crowned withal.
> (Act. I., Scene 5.)

IT is a brilliant performance, this translation, and far superior to work for which many a mediocrity has been rewarded with a seat in the French Academy. This "Macbeth" sustained the trial of a public hearing at the Abbey of Saint Wandrilla, the home of the poet-translator, Georgette Leblanc assumed the rôle of Lady Macbeth.

It may be remembered that Maeterlinck's first ambitious play, "Princess Maleine," set whirling the extravagant praise of the late Octave Mirbeau in the Paris Figaro, Aug. 24, 1890, in the course of which he matched the young, unknown poet from Ghent with the august Shakespeare ". . . . plus tragique, que Macbeth, plus extraordinaire en pensée que Hamlet . . ." which must have embarrassed the modest author. Either Mirbeau had not critically read Shakespeare, else he was indulging in mystification. Blaque! Ah! that fatal "plus," the uncritical overplus how it does jump from the pages smiting the optics with its unexpected and impertinent humor. As a matter of fact, "Princess Maleine," with its tumultuous imagery, its appalling machinery, is but an undigested compound of "Macbeth," "Hamlet," "Lear," and, as Arthur Symons has sagely remarked, with more of the Elizabethan violence to be found in Webster and Tourneur than Shakespeare.

In his apologia for the static theater, really an apologia for his own temperament, Maeterlinck asked: Does the soul only flower on nights of storm? "But to the tragic author, as to the mediocre painter, who still lingers over historical pictures, it is only the violence of the anecdote that appeals . . . whereas it is far away from bloodshed, battle-cry, and sword-thrust that the lives of most of us flow on, and men's tears are silent today, and invisible and almost spiritual." But the tears of mankind flowed after the poignant griefs of 1914, and Liège and Brussels and Antwerp. The Time-Spirit ever surprises. And since then Maurice Maeterlinck wrote "The Burgomaster of Stillemond."

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

THE HAS BEEN.

The mob once hung upon his heels
And gave full tongue to peals on peals
Of wild applause where'er he'd go,
Because, you see, he had the dough:
One day he got the well known gate,
A common lot, a common fate—
Now where he goes and how he fares
Nobody knows,
And nobody cares.

Once people fought to greet this guy
And madly sought to catch his eye,
But he ignored the average mutt,
For filled was he with honors—but,
One day he got the well known can,
A common lot for mortal man—
Now where he goes and how he fares
Nobody knows,
And nobody cares.

He might have gone upon his way
Unmindful of the raucous bray;
The ringing cheer was heated air,
It didn't get him anywhere.
For when they put him on the shelf
He sat all by his little self,
And later on his tomb was writ
This sympathetic little skit:
Hic Jacet
EZRA WHATSHISNAME,
Who once possessed a wondrous fame.
Now where he goes and how he fares
Nobody knows—
And nobody cares.

A Message to Bookkeepers

Wishing to Earn $100 a Week

By Victor Schwab

(Note:—The statements made here are not suppositions. They are facts—all procured after thorough research. Any well-informed business man will verify their accuracy.)

Few Bookkeepers Realize Their Opportunities

Either from lack of interest or from insufficient foresight, most bookkeepers do not realize the opportunities that lie before them. A knowledge of bookkeeping is the very groundwork of accountancy—and yet the call for 125,000 high-salaried accountants goes unheeded. Building upon their present knowledge is all that is necessary to transform these bookkeepers into trained accountants with incomes of $5,000 to $15,000 a year. A few bookkeepers have, it is true, at last realized that opportunity is actually HAMMERING at their doors—and these bookkeepers who entered the accountancy field are earning four and even five times their former salary. Many bookkeepers, however, still do not seem to have heard the clear call for them to open the door and grasp the opportunities that are waiting. Every bookkeeper will realize that accountancy holds excellent opportunities. He should also realize—and realize now that, as a bookkeeper, he is in a good position to build upon his present knowledge and prepare to grasp one of these big positions for himself.

Why Accountants Are Needed

Any business authority knows that the accountant is the axle upon which the whole vehicle of business turns. He devises systems for the efficient regulation of business, prevents waste, loss and mismanagement, and prepares the way for expansion. He is a positive asset. No matter how large his fees or income may be, it is only a very small fraction of the revenue he produces for the firm who retains him. There is a very great shortage of accountants. The causes are well known. Even in normal times the supply has always been much below the demand; and now—but let me give you the concrete reasons.

The New Spirit of America

The new spirit of America—progressiveness, enterprise, expansion—means a great deal to the accounting profession. American business is branching out in all directions—foreign and domestic. And what firm would think of asking banks or stockholders to finance expansion unless its affairs had been investigated by an accountant? Commercial competition is now more intense than ever—and business men know that accountants prevent waste and misdirected energies and win trade.

The business of our enlarged merchant marine will create a great need for accountants—trade can no longer be conducted haphazardly and without system or foresight. The tremendous expansion of banking, both in foreign and home fields, means another "hue and cry" for accountants. The National City Bank of New York already has more than 45 branches in South America, Central America and Europe, and, like other American banks, continues to grow rapidly. Accountants are indispensable to the business of banking.

These are only a few of the many reasons for the great BUSINESS shortage of accountants. And that is not all. The accountant is also very necessary to the administration of public affairs. Those who may have escaped the sharp eye of business are snapped up by our Government, States, cities, our educational, charitable, and even our ecclesiastical institutions.

A new spirit in Government, State, city and institutional affairs has asserted itself. Business like regulation of public interests is the cry to-day. Recently over 1,000 accountants were called to perform the well-paid duties of analyzing the business systems of various cities. The Government recently issued a call for hundreds of accountants.

Considering that these are but a few of the many reasons for the great need of accountants, and that any other business man can quote from his own experience many other equally pertinent reasons, it can be said with positive certainty that those possessing the foresight to prepare at once for this uncrowded field will be amply repaid with a future of great opportunity and of excellent financial recognition.

* * * * * * * *

Do you consider yourself justified, after reading the above statement of facts by a well-informed writer, in continuing throughout your life as a bookkeeper? If you do there is no more to say. But if you are interested in knowing how you can build up your bookkeeping knowledge into C. P. A. proportions, how you can earn $3,500 to $15,000 and even more a year in a pleasant, dignified profession, or even if you wish to advance yourself without trying specifically for the C. P. A. degree—then there is an important message which you really ought to hear.

New Opportunities for Bookkeepers

Do not think that a position of accountant is beyond you. Do not lapse into the rut of indifference as so many other bookkeepers have done. Do not be discouraged because you are not in a position to attend an accountancy school. The necessity for this has all been removed. Since its inauguration, over 14 years ago, the Universal Business Institute of New York has been aiding those desirous of rising to high positions in the field of accountancy. Thousands of bookkeepers from all over the world have taken advantage of the opportunity and, through the correspondence instruction given by the Institute, have become accountants of outstanding merit. But RESULTS TALK—and here, in their own words, are some of the results gained by other bookkeepers:

> "I have every reason to be thankful for having taken your course of study, as when I commenced it I was receiving a salary of $110 per month, while the last position I held paid me a salary of $300 per month as Chief Accountant in charge of 110 men."—G. H. SCHOFIELD, Richmond, Va.
> "One of your men started here at $750 a year. After an elapse of only eight months he has been nominated Accountant at $3,500 a year."—H. V. O'NEILL, Santa Fe.
> "After completing your prescribed C. P. A. Course I passed the North Carolina examination last year as a Certified Public Accountant."—J. M. CULBRETH, C. P. A., Richmond, Va.
> "Since I began your course my salary advanced more than 60%."—L. A. THEISEN, Jersey City, N. J.
> "As a benefit derived from my study with your Institution I am holding the position of Chief Accountant, Bureau of Public Works."—R. REINOSO, Manila, P. I.

You can study the Accountancy course right in your own home in your spare time. The instruction is given by correspondence and you are under the supervision of our staff of experienced Certified Public Accountants, Cost Accountants, or Attorney-at-Law, each of whom is of recognized ability and of many years' practical training.

Under our system each student is a class of one. By our method of instruction the instructor examines your lesson papers and gives you the personal and sympathetic attention and understanding which removes that common fault of machine-like correction, stereotyped question and answer papers, and the turning out of instruction as if it were so many nails or bolts. Free from the entanglements of red-tape theory; thorough, resultful, and practical in every way, it is small wonder that the students of the Universal Business Institute have reached such high positions and big salaries in the field of accountancy.

Trained Men Are Better Paid

"The changed scope, character and methods of modern business demand men with a superior training. The school of experience—a long road—is wasteful as a teacher of general principles. Present conditions require a superior training such as only the schools can give."—F. A. Vanderlip.

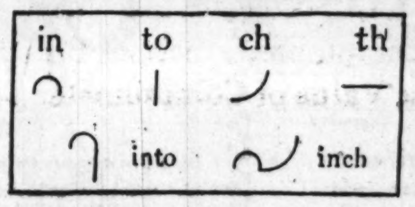
Boyd Shorthand

Simple, Legible and Rapid



Best for Secretaries and Reporters

The question is often asked, "How does the Boyd System differ from another system?" Answer:

(1) There are only TWO systems of shorthand known: (a) the Boyd System, based on the syllable, the vowel being expressed with the consonant, and (b) the Single Letter System, first used in 1767, and rehashed today under various names, but all have the same peculiar arrangement of the consonants and all are learned in the same time. For example, p is a light line, and the same line thickened or lengthened is b. A small dot or loop with a mark in it is one vowel, and the same dot thickened or loop enlarged is a different vowel. The distinctions are very delicate, and the loops with extra markings, so-called light line shorthand, are longer than the longhand.

(2) BOYD SHORTHAND is learned in less than half the time required for another method, and the writer is more efficient in every way. It takes at least six months' hard study to graduate with poor results in an old system.

(3) In BOYD SHORTHAND there is no distinction less than the "plus" and "multiply" signs in arithmetic, the difference being an angle of forty-five degrees. In the other system there is a mark coming in between, causing confusion.

(4) In BOYD SHORTHAND words of one, two and three syllables are written in full with the highest speed, and the proper spelling of the word is followed. All words can be written in full, but long words are abbreviated in the usual way; for instance, "ad" for "advertisement." There is no skeleton writing, such as using "t" for "to" or "it," as many as twelve, destroying the natural spelling of the language, and then guessing which is which, as in the other system. If a writer of the old method is a poor speller or appears dense in study, it is the fault of the shorthand system.

(5) BOYD SHORTHAND is a logical and mathematical system, producing harmony in thought. When a thing is learned it is finished. There is no reverse thought, causing uncertainty. ORDER BEGETS ORDER. In the other system there are hundreds of rules beginning with such indefinite words as "sometimes," "often" and "generally," causing the mind to think in a scattered way, with results far reaching in their damaging effect. CONFUSION PRODUCES CONFUSION.

(6) One of the principles of teaching is that if a rule is given and there are exceptions to this rule, these exceptions must be named. Boyd Shorthand conforms to all the recognized rules of teaching, while in the old method the rules of pedagogy are set at naught, as the exceptions are so numerous that no attempt is made to classify them.

(7) Boyd writers hold the world's record for speed and accuracy, and are frequently promoted over those writing another method, though the latter are longer in the employ of the firm. A court reporter of twenty years' standing states he never knew any one who could get an exact transcript with an old method. They make sure to get names and such like correct, but these they write in longhand. It is necessary to rush to the typewriter with the shorthand and trust to the memory to fill in what cannot be read. The Boyd System does away with this inconvenience, as the writing can be read a year from now as easily as it is today, and the most rapid speech is taken exactly as spoken.

The "Boyd Shorthand Instructor," the "Boyd Letter Writer" and the "Boyd Shorthand Dictionary" are standard publications, making a complete course. They are sent prepaid to any address for $1.50 each.

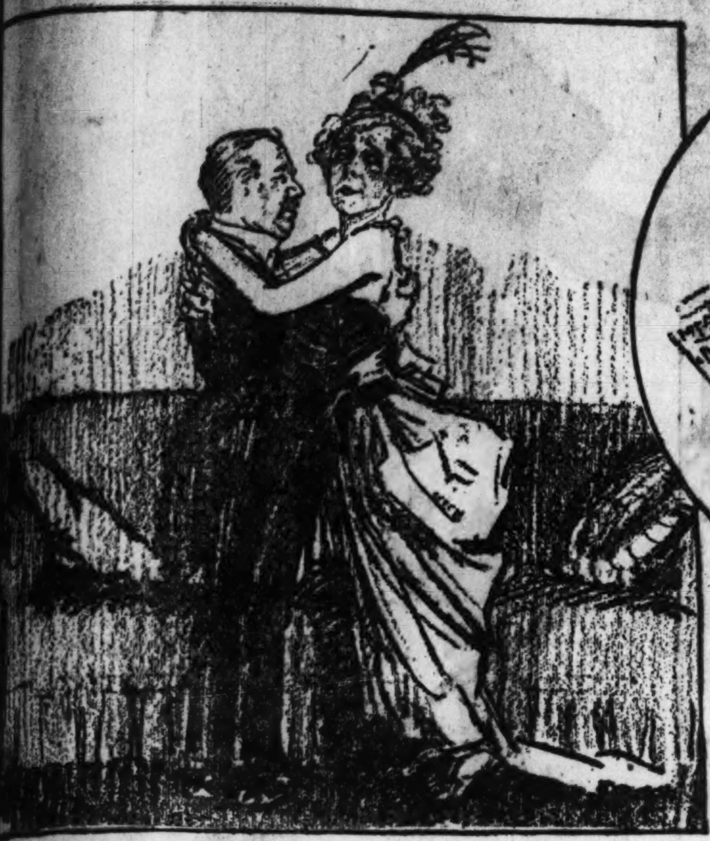
AMONG US MORTALS

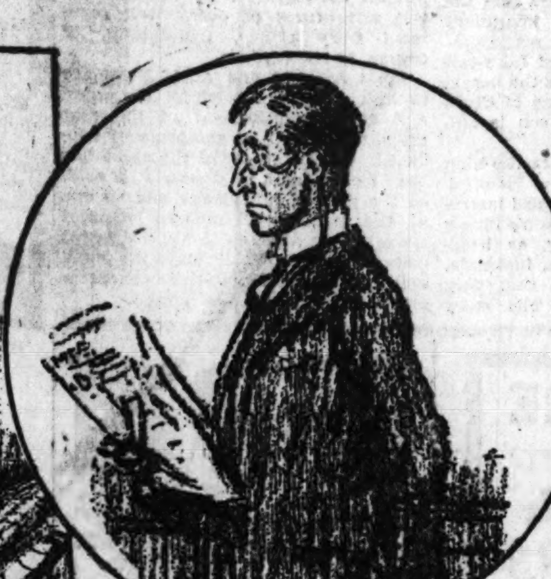
STRIKES

By W. E. HILL

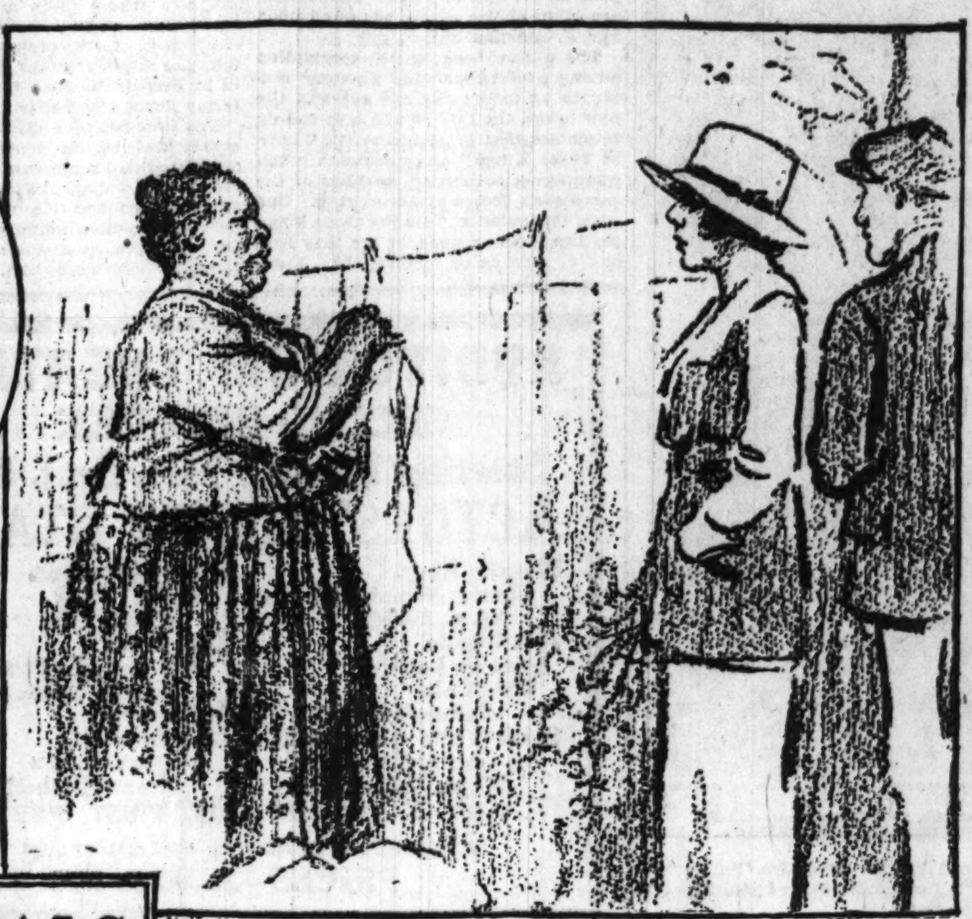
(Copyright, 1919, New York Tribune Inc.)



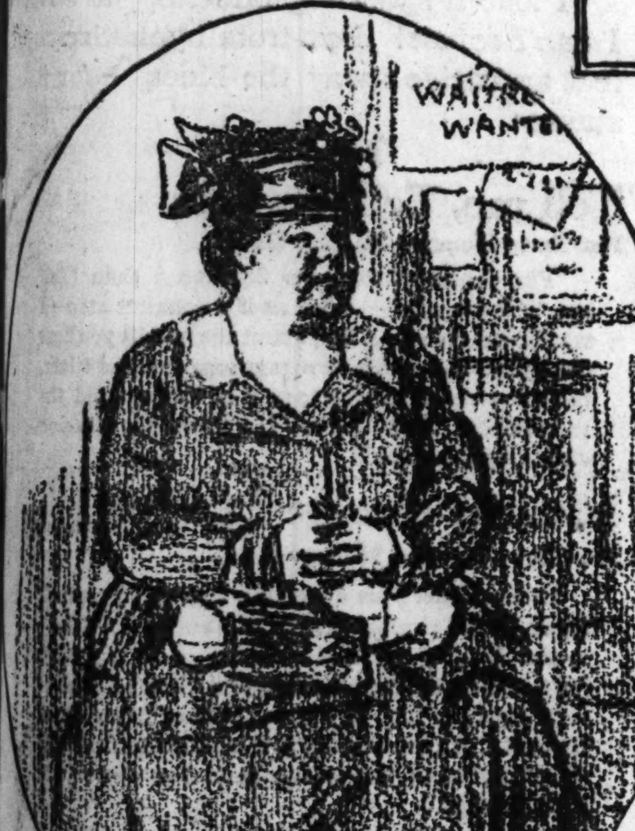
Manager Bangham simply won't let the striking actors end his show. Manager Bangham is playing the leading juvenile role himself, and Miss Tessie Shad, who has been understudying everything and everybody in a No. 8 "Within the Law" company the past season, plays the heroine. Miss Shad always wanted a chance on Broadway, and it was just by luck that she got the part instead of the wardrobe mistress.



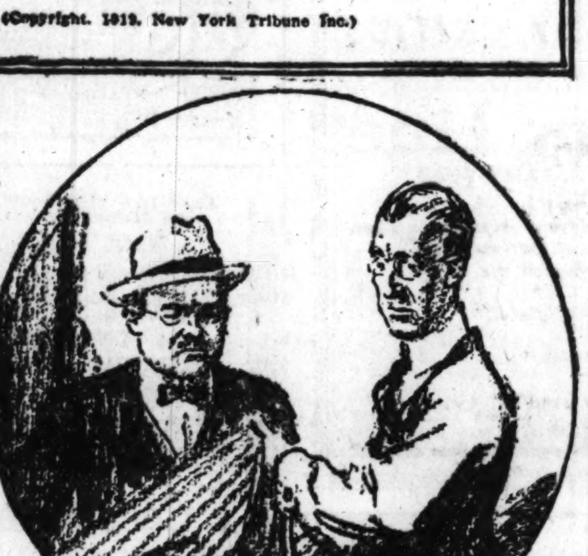
One of the most terrible conditions of modern times is to be a member of the downtrodden middle class. They get it going and coming. Mr. Harrod, professor of sedentary English, has a salary of $1,200 a year and a family of five. Professor Harrod is seriously thinking of learning to be a motorman.



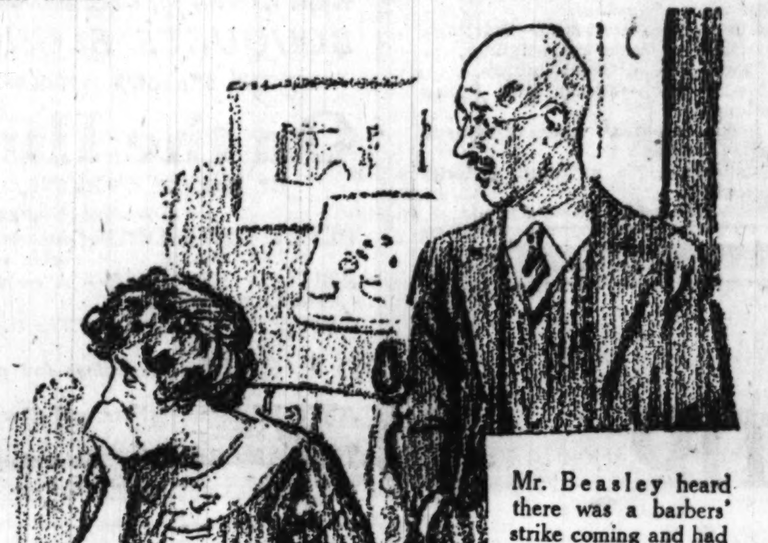
Mrs. George Washington White, while not exactly on strike, has a way of dealing with the capitalistic class that is just as effective in keeping them in their place. Yes, she can do Mrs. De Lancy's wash, but can't tell when, or whether she can send for it or not, or how much it will be, or when it will be done. Mrs. De Lancy is all but apologizing for asking such a favor of Mrs. White.



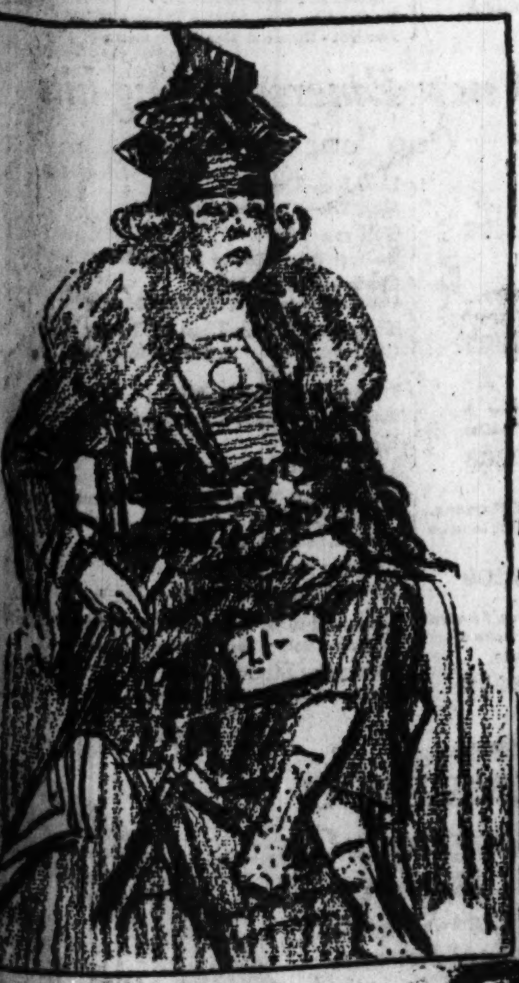
Selma, the cook, who, being practically on strike half the time, with gratifying results, has no need of a union membership.



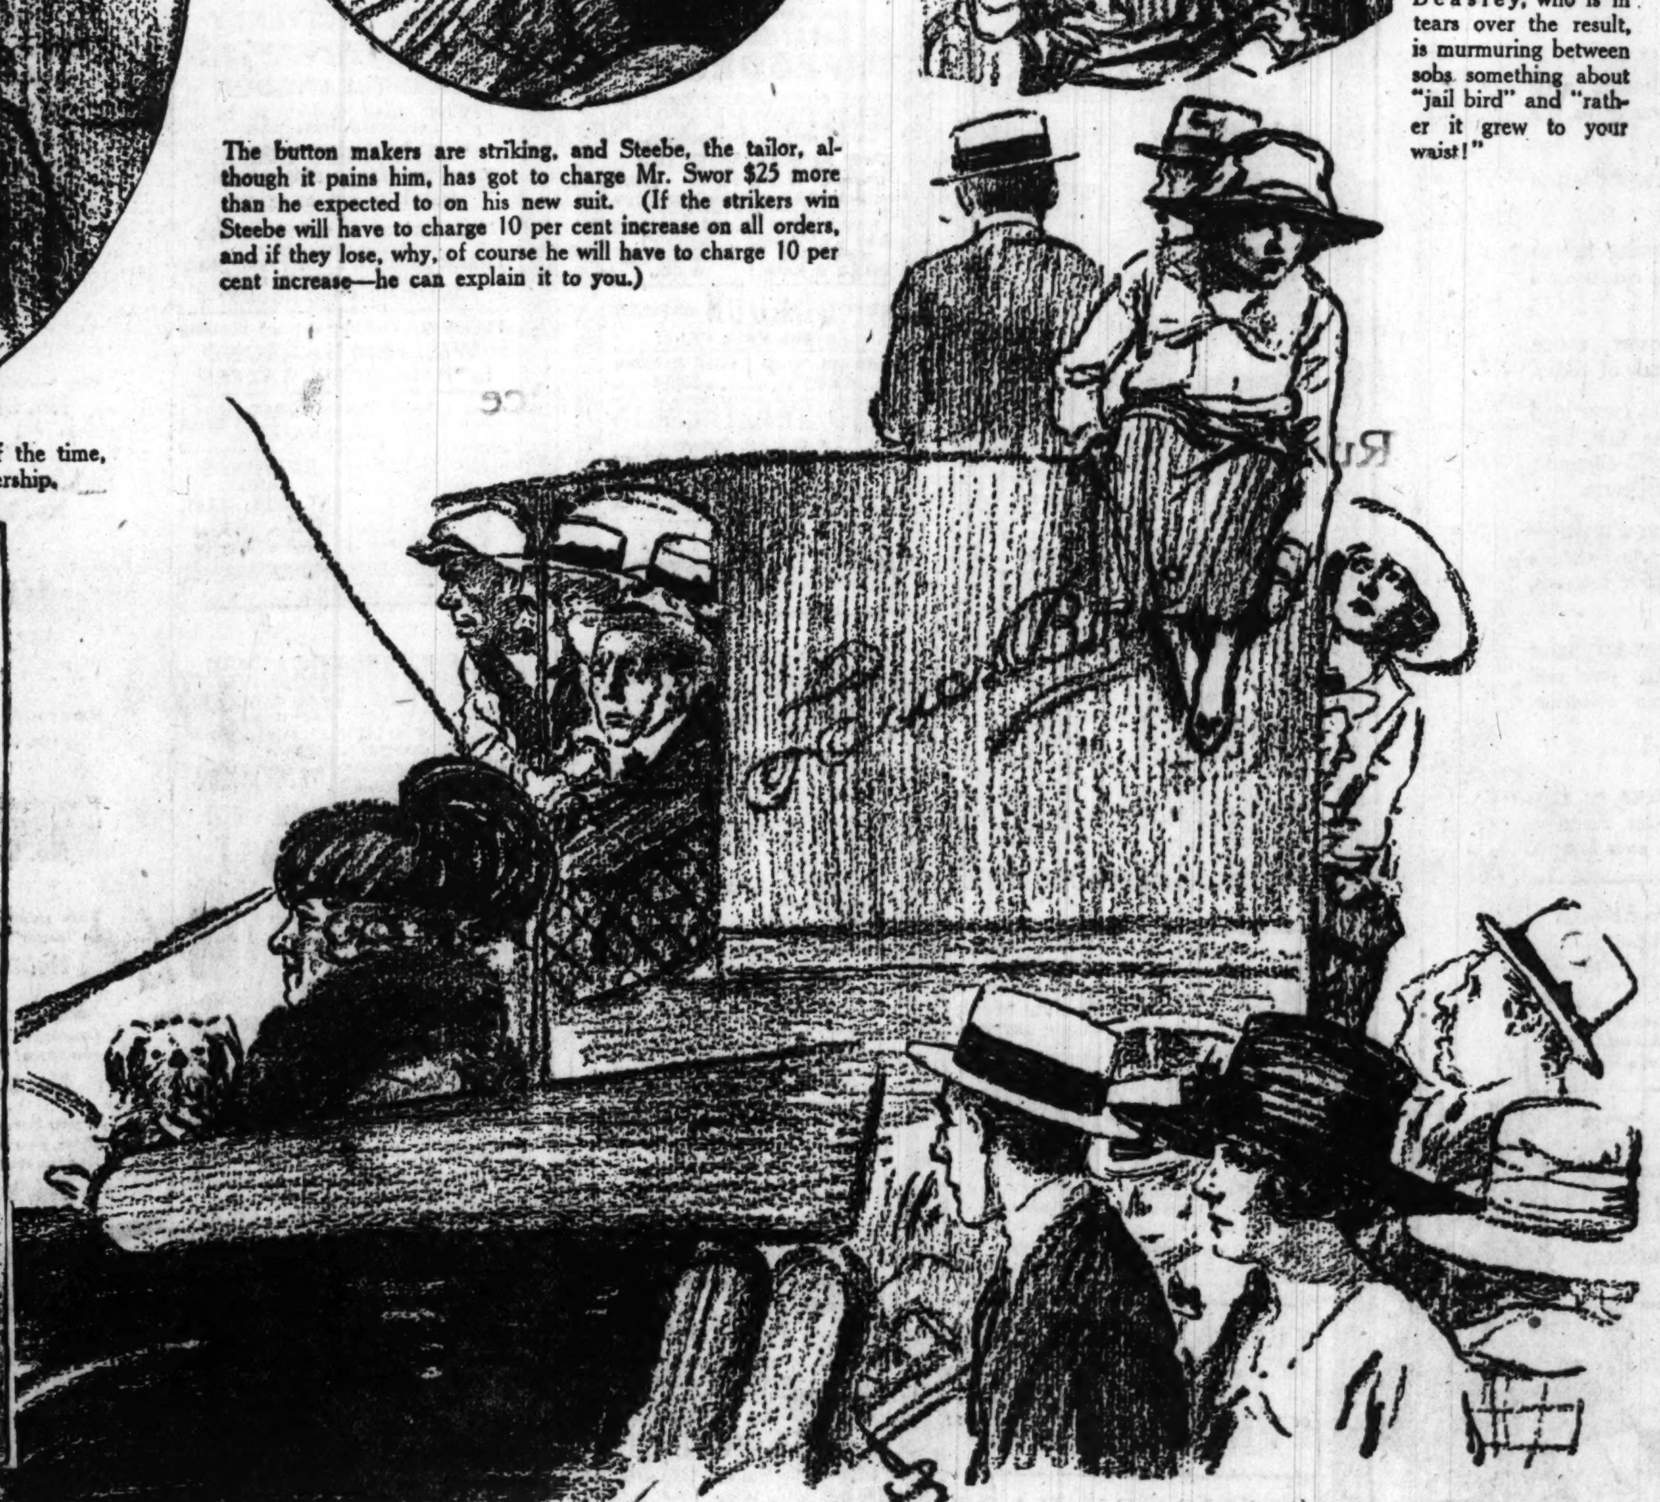
The button makers are striking, and Steebe, the tailor, although it pains him, has got to charge Mr. Swor $25 more than he expected to on his new suit. (If the strikers win Steebe will have to charge 10 per cent increase on all orders, and if they lose, why, of course he will have to charge 10 per cent increase—he can explain it to you.)



Mr. Beasley heard there was a barbers' strike coming and had his head shaved. Mrs. Beasley, who is in tears over the result, is murmuring between sobs something about "jail bird" and "rather it grew to your waist!"



Jessie, striking chorus lady from the "Hug Me Tight" company, listens to a rival chorister making a speech. "Just let that dame try to dictate to me!" is Jessie's comment.



Mrs. Tobey, all alone with just little Peep-Bo, in a big seven passenger town car, is having such an amusing time watching the crowds try to get home from work during the New York street car strike. "The people do look so comical!"

Burns Mantle's Letter

(The actors' strike was settled at an early hour Saturday morning. As intimated in the following article by Burns Mantle, it was a victory for the Equity association. Because of its interesting details leading up to the settlement, Mr. Mantle's letter is permitted to stand as written.)

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The crisis in the actors' strike is at hand. This week, I believe, will see the turn—either in a more or less complete victory for the Actors' Equity association or in the issuance of a final defi by the managers and the squaring away of both forces for a long drawn out and excessively costly fight in which the organized labor issue will be freely admitted and squarely met.

If the managers hold firm in their refusal either to compromise or to arbitrate there is nothing that can keep the strike out of every city in the country in which there are theaters and representative groups of men affiliated with Mr. Gompers' federation.

The managers, encouraged by George Tyler's success in Chicago, began the week full of pepper and determination. Rehearsals were called for a half dozen companies. As fast as the actors appeared they were signed up to the new Fidelity association contract. If they failed to appear their places were filled with anti-Equity players.

It is no longer the actors' fight. The stage hands and the musicians have taken it over. Both the Hippodrome strike and that which put an effective quietus on the announced productions of the Gallo Opera company were called not by the actors but by their scrappy associates. The Equity association had given both these attractions a clean bill of health and advised them to go ahead. But the stage hands and musicians, discovering that if they did go ahead the Messrs. Shubert, in the case of the opera company, and Charles B. Dillingham, then manager of the Hippodrome, would share in the profits, calmly but firmly announced that there would be nothing doing—and had their way.

The Hippodrome is back in line. Mr. Dillingham resigned and the management increased the salaries of the chorus girls from $25 to $35 a week. Accepting this concession, Marie Dressler, president of the Chorus Equity association, blew her little whistle and the girls returned to their jobs. But the opera company is still idle.

The curbstone conversationalists continue the most interesting feature of this unique struggle. One such buttonholed me the other evening and drew me into the shadows, where the scouts could not see him.

"Do you know how this thing strikes me?" said he. "The managers are up there now holding their daily meeting. I'm for them, understand? I think they have been badly treated and I think they deserve more from the public in the way of sympathy than they are getting. But—this is what happened:

"Three weeks ago the actor came to the manager, a stubborn little boy, understand? And he asked the manager either to let him have a new contract or to submit the old one to a third party for correction.

"'Whadyoumean, correction?' said the manager. "run along, little boy. You irritate me. Get out! I'm tired seeing you around. Beat it! I can get a million like you!"

"So the actor ran away and picked up a stick. And pretty soon he began to grow. And he kept on growing and the stick became a big stick and now he's beating the life out of the manager. Am I right?"

Assuming a neutrality that best becomes a noncombatant, I allowed that perhaps he was.

"Sure, I'm right," said he. And then, suddenly changing the figure, he said: "The score stands 2 to 1 and we're mighty close to the ninth inning. The actors scored, first, with an assist from the Federation of Labor; again, by winning the sympathy of the public. The managers got a run with George Cohan's Fidelity league. And there you are—2 to 1 and the ninth inning called."

One boy, a stanch Equity man, delivered himself of the following: "You know what is going to beat the managers—what has beaten the managers?" he queried. "No," I said, "what?" "The war!" he answered cryptically, and then went on.

"When the war came the actor never thought of himself as a fighting man. He was always a bystander. He may not have lacked courage, but he disliked fighting. And he lacked confidence in himself as a fighter.

"But the war came, and the draft. And those who did not enlist from choice, as a lot of fellows did, were forced in by law. And they discovered that they were just as good fighters as anybody. For the first time in their lives they felt that they were important members of society. They were doing something big, something fine, something worth while. Did you see them in the parade? How they marched—and how many of them there were in that A. E. F. section?

"Those fellows came home with a new idea of what liberty, and freedom, and human rights mean, and they came home with the courage to fight for what they conceived to be right. Now, then, add to that section the thousands and thousands of actors and actresses on this side who were not eligible for the draft. What have they been doing the last two years? They have been raising money for Liberty loans, and making speeches for war charities, and urging recruiting, and talking about the rights of men. And they, too, have come to have a new idea of what fighting means. Do you think that spirit can be broken? Never! And the sooner the managers realize it and agree to a decent compromise the sooner they will be making money again, and the sooner we will be working."

"This talk about the validity of an actor's contract makes me tired," confessed an angry manager. "Listen; I've always signed Equity contracts—ever since there was such a thing. And I've signed other contracts with chorus girls. And do you know what happens? I know girls who have signed as many as six or seven contracts a season—signed them in the summer when the signing was good and then waited until August or September, when rehearsals were called, and taken their pick of the lot of them. The show that looked safest, that seemed certain of the longest New York run, they grabbed. The others they let go. And the manager who had sued them would have been the laughing stock of the town."

Finally an honest bystander drew attention to one curious phase of this most amazing struggle. "So far as I can see," said he, "the actors haven't the least chance of getting the best of it." "Why?" "Well, by their own statements the fight is being waged by the high priced leading people, the stars and players of their caliber. A majority of these, I understand, are able to walk into any manager's office and make practically their own terms. They have nothing to gain either in the way of money or working conditions. On the other hand, if they lose they are certain, or so it seems to me, to be boycotted, to be put on a sort of secret blacklist. The managers are not the kind of men who will easily forget. Altruistic, I call it. Damfoolishness, I suppose a lot of people think. But I never heard of anything like it happening before. Did you?"

We were impelled to admit that we never had.

ART by Eleanor Jewett

Good Pictures in Artists' Exhibit at All American

THE "Midnight Serenade," by Ramon Shiva, is one of the attractive paintings in the exhibition of pictures shown now at the Coliseum under the auspices of the All-American exposition. Though attractive, it is not new to us. If I remember rightly it made one in the exhibit held last season by the Palette and Chisel club.

One wonders a bit at first at the name, but later one sees reason in the poetic license taken so graciously. It is a serenade—this mosaic of broken lights on the rippled surface of a shadowed blue bay. A fringe of colored lamps trembles on the horizon. From the low circling sky yellow shafts of starlight stream. And the melody of the waves, hushed in the dawning darkness of late night, floats on the wind, wraithlike as some tenuous figment of song remembered out of the wild spaces of an opium smoker's heaven.

I shall—I suppose I must—in the course of the next few paragraphs continue to give an adequate or inadequate discription of those paintings in this exhibit that for various, usually intangible, reasons struck me as being among "those to be mentioned." But, first, as a matter of preface and perhaps apology, I do want to raise again the question of catalogs. At most press views of exhibitions catalogs are conspicuous by their absence. Thus making the matter of reviewing, which is generally encouraged by those responsible for the exhibits, a difficult and sometimes unsatisfactory undertaking. One attributes, in divine ignorance, a painting to J, but one finds later that K is its author. One speaks of "The Tale of Men," only to find that that tide is a backwater and that the real tide is hanging in an obscure corner at the other end of the gallery. Such events are a misuse of the imaginary faculty. They are discouraging.

In this instance the All-American differs in no way from its confrères. Speaking of catalogs, I was told, "O, yes, they are ordered, but not here yet. You may find the name and artist printed on the list yonder."

I had already found the "list yonder." Yonder was right. As high on a pillar as a tall man might reach was tacked in each room devoted to the exhibition of pictures a typewritten list of the pictures in that room. So one trotted to painting, to list, to painting, to list, until whether the list tallied or not with the painting became a problem so insignificant compared with the energy involved that the enthusiasm with which the search had begun ended in lethargy. And this, mind you, is not a single nor yet a personal complaint. It is the voiced rebuke that came to me from a number of perfectly strange people. And to it I added my voice, with the promise of writing of it also here.

One of the most excellent paintings in the exhibit, if not the most excellent, is not even listed. It is a scene placed in Russia, and by, as well as the name could be made out upon the canvas, Leon Solspara. It possesses color, vitality, gayety, and atmosphere. The occasion is one of jollity—market day or a street fête. The uncaring spirit of the Russian plays through it. It lives for the moment and what will come next is a matter of no importance.

Second to this, "Cottonwoods," by William Ufer, stands out as signally belonging to the world of material fancy. It is beautiful. A sweep of pale green grass, grown wild, lies at your feet, framed by a thin row of delicate, threadlike trees that stand etched against the yellow ground of the line of sand colored houses which backs abruptly to a purple range of mountains.

There are a number of strong portraits hung. Christian Abrahamson shows "Chief Justice Olson," a striking canvas, where, from a dark background, there looms suddenly forward the determined, brisk features of the subject.

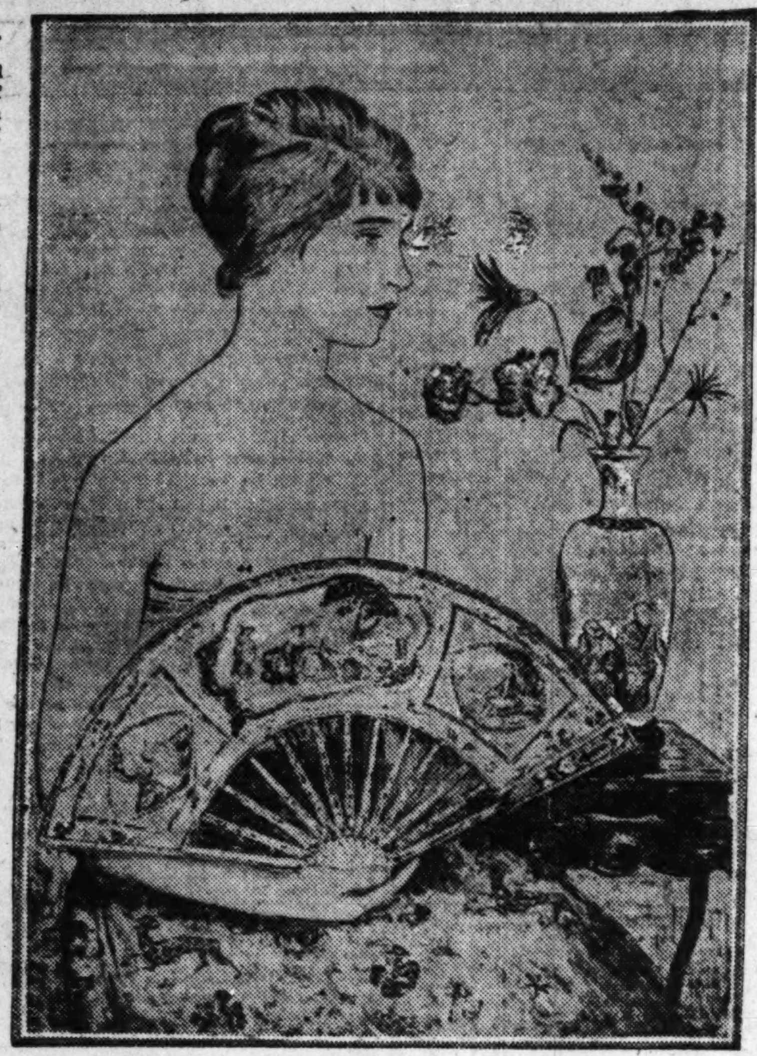
The "Portrait of Zemaite," by Jonas Sileika, is the painting of an elderly woman, a Lithuanian writer, whose age does not possess her. It is a splendid character study. One of the most important portraits I can remember in many an exhibition.

"Portrait of My Mother," by Hermine Stellar, is a charming likeness. "Madame Estrid Clauday," by Claude Buck, shows an unusually handsome woman. To those who know her it brings forcibly before them the features and personality of Katherine Keith Adler, the young author of "The Girl."

There are many more paintings that should be spoken of. Among them are "Summer Waves," by Charles Hallberg; "Spring Morning," by Charles Dahlgreen; "From Trondjem, Norway," by Karl Ouren; "The Essex Hills," by Engle; "Silver Dawn," by R. Ingerle; "Crowded Shore," by Beatrice Levy, and "Spirit of Summer," by Charles M. Lessar.

Victor Higgins is represented by two or three canvases showing, as he only can show, the life and sunshine of the southwest. Birgir Sandzen has two paintings hung. Much as I like these—and, to be honest, that is not any too much—I prefer to them his wood cuts, which, done in the same mood and spirit, yet possess a delicacy and refinement of touch that is lost in the larger work.

"At the Edge of the Lake," by Josef Tomanek, brought back keenly to mind this young painter, whose pictures last fall it was my good fortune to see, and of whose work I have for my own one example. He is one of our younger artists who gives excellent promise of becoming great. Honors were his during the years he spent at the Art institute, and more honors probably will be his with the passing of time. This picture shows a glimpse of the dune country. It is a bluff rising steeply and sand intrenched from a quiet reach of water, ribbed with scant brush and crowned by scattering pines. There is atmosphere and a serene feeling for nature in her simpler moods about it.



"Girl with Fan," by Henry Golden Dearth, at Art institute exhibit.

The Art Alliance of America is well represented in the exposition. There are numerous examples of handcraft shown. From the bench, the loom, and the easel have come samples of what men and women can make, and make beautifully.

An interesting feature is the wood carving of Mrs. Christiana Jensen. It is seen in a number of pieces of beautiful furniture—tables, china closet, and suchlike things. The pieces are of walnut and represent the labor of many hours. But the result is worth the effort. Rarely has more beautiful work of this kind been shown in these times. The story goes that the Danish king wished to purchase one of these pieces, but was refused because the artist wished to keep and show it in exhibition.

The exposition closes next Sunday.

"The Love of Three Oranges"

BY LUCY CALHOUN.

PERHAPS the most sensational of all the new works to be offered the public this year by the Chicago Opera association is the fantastic affair called "The Love of Three Oranges," an opera composed by a young Russian named Serge Prokofieff, who was discovered by Cleofonte Campanini, and who is called the "enfant terrible" among modern composers. "Futurist" and "Barbarian" are other choice names bestowed upon him by startled critics.

There has been much speculation among professional and amateur musicians as to the plot and score of the new opera, the title of which so closely resembles that of Montemezzi's "Love of Three Kings" as to occasion much punning—a realization, perhaps of the composer's dream of advertising. One says, for instance, "Do the three kings get the three oranges, or are they lemons?" And so on. Since, then, there is so little known about the plot of the opera a summary of the story may not be amiss.

Let the timid be assured at once that in the story at least there appears nothing bolshevik about the musical revolutionist's work. What bombs are concealed in the staves of the score remain yet to be exploded.

There are four acts, ten scenes, and a prologue in the new opera and the action takes place in an imaginary kingdom where there are magicians, sorceresses, and all sorts of fairy-tale characters. In the prologue the herald tells the world that the King of Clubs is in despair because his son is suffering from hypocondria.

The first act then discloses the king surrounded by an army of doctors, armed with all manner of weird instruments. They diagnose the son's illness in every conceivable way, as headache, indigestion, neuralgia, insomnia, etc., and finally announce that only laughter can cure him. The story which follows shows the attempts of the court clown to make the prince laugh and of Fata Morgana to defeat this purpose.

Morgana sends the prince in search of the three oranges which are the big mystery of the opera. In the search for them the prince encounters the giant cook, he meets the Princess Ninetta, who is turned into a rat, and he has all the conventional but modernized adventures of every well regulated fairy prince, triumphing, of course, in the last act.

Boris Anisfeld and Adolf Bolm are to look after the scenery, costumes, and stage management of the new piece, which is to be sumptuously produced. The composer of the opera has been looked upon in Russia, it is said, as the peer of Stravinsky and as one of the leaders of modern musical thought. In addition to his orchestral compositions Prokofieff plays the piano and has composed ambitious concertos and sonatas for that instrument.

1914

By Field Marshal Viscount French, of Ypres

INSTALLMENT XVII.

DETERMINED that every possible effort must be made to prevent the recurrence of such a situation as I had just witnessed, and at once hurried off to find Foch. He was with d'Urbal, and we all went thoroughly into the situation.

Foch told me that on the morning of the next day [Nov. 1] a French mixed force, up to the strength of a division, would concentrate on the line St. Eloi-Wytschaete at daybreak, and advance from that line to attack the left flank of the forces in front of us. Similarly the 9th French corps on Haig's left would be ordered to attack southeast against the enemy's

I sent Barry [one of my A. D. C.'s] and Brinsley Fitzgerald [my private secretary], who were both with me throughout the day, back to Haig with a full account of my interview with Foch. They returned later with the information that the line of the 1st corps had been completely reëstablished, and that just before dark Kavanagh's 7th cavalry brigade [1st and 2d life guards and Royal Horse guards] had done some good work in driving back the enemy.

At the end of the day the brigade [illegible] became available to close a dangerous gap which had occurred on the right of the 7th division. In the woods the Household cavalry encountered large numbers of Germans, whom they cleared out, capturing many prisoners and inflicting heavy losses. Haig reported that they were of great assistance in restoring the line.

Throughout this great day [Oct. 31] the flank of the 1st corps had held fast to their ground. But the wooded country which intervened enabled superior forces of the enemy to penetrate to a dangerous extent between them.

In fighting such as this it was inevitable that troops should become much intermingled and mixed up. It was not only so as between larger or smaller units of the same army, but also by reason of the fervent loyalty and fine feeling which has happily always been so strongly marked a feature among the allies.

Not many hours of darkness had elapsed, however, before new anxieties arose in connection with the line held by the cavalry on the Wytschaete-Messines ridge.

Events hardly less momentous than those of Oct. 31 were before us.

Ready to "Welcome" Kaiser.

THE importance attached by the Germans to the fighting of Oct. 31 and Nov. 1 was emphasized by the presence of the emperor at Courtrai. An intercepted wireless message informed us that he was to go to Hollebeke, no doubt with the intention of heading a "triumphal entry" into Ypres.

Our airmen endeavored to give him a warm a reception as possible and we had information that his quarters were changed at least once in consequence of their activity.

I issued an order of the day to the troops, announcing the presence of the august visitor on our front and urging them to give his majesty a good demonstration of what the "contemptible little army" could do. Right splendidly did they respond.

Throughout the night of the 31st-1st the 2d cavalry division was heavily attacked all along the Wytschaete-Messines ridge. The enemy gained a footing in the village of Wytschaete, broke through the line north of Messines and turned the left flank of the trenches held by the London Scottish. With devoted gallantry the reserve company of this battalion made repeated charges with the bayonet, which checked the enemy's advance and enabled the battalion to hold the position. This it did until daylight. The Germans were then discovered to be well round both flanks, and a retirement became inevitable. This was carried out steadily under heavy rifle and machine gun fire in the direction of Wulverghem.

At 3 a. m. the 12th Lancers, the Northumberland Fusiliers, and the Lincolns made a counter attack and reëstablished the original line. The cavalry fought on foot with the bayonet in the narrow streets of the village, and were reported to me as equal to the best infantry in such work.

By 6:30 a. m. the enemy had been reinforced and were able to drive back the 2d cavalry division with the troops attached and reoccupy Wytschaete. This loss, coupled with the enemy's seizure of the ridge north of Messines, rendered the latter place untenable by the 1st cavalry division. They retired slowly to an intrenched line north of Wulverghem.

Somewhat the same kind of situation arose here now as on the day before at Gheluvelt. Since the night of Oct. 30 the cavalry corps and attached troops had been holding on to the Wytschaete-Messines ridge against overwhelming numbers of the enemy. They were utterly exhausted and the French marching to their succor were still some way off.

At 5 a. m. two battalions of the 2d corps were dispatched from Bailleul to Neuve-Eglise, and further reinforcements were ordered to follow them an hour later. These troops had only themselves just got back into reserve after a most trying and exhausting experience on the right of our line lasting for nearly three weeks. They also stood in dire need of rest, but they were the only reserves of any kind at my disposal.

French Check Enemy Advance.

AT 10 a. m. on the 1st the exhausted 2d cavalry division was retiring on Mount Kemmel, which they were in no condition to hold if the enemy pressed on vigorously after them. But once again, as on the 31st, the situation was saved by a desperate effort. Some battalions of French infantry attacked on the left of the 2d cavalry division and checked the enemy's advance, which was finally held off until, some time later, the head of the 16th French army corps arrived and regained the western end of Wytschaete.

The 3d corps had reported early in the morning that the position of its left flank was rendered precarious by the loss of Messines. With the support furnished by the 2d corps, as narrated above, Pulteney was able to draw back his left toward Neuve-Eglise and form a flank facing north, covering the important artillery position on hill 63. This move had threatened in flank the German advance on the Wytschaete-Messines ridge, and assisted greatly in securing the retirement of the cavalry in good order.

At a quarter past 12 p. m. the situation was as follows:

The 1st cavalry division occupied an intrenched position running to the east and northeast of Wulverghem, in touch on the right with the reconstructed line of the 3d corps and on the left with the 2d cavalry division.

After the successful advance of the French the 2d cavalry division was drawn in to the south of Wytschaete, and its left was in touch with the 16th French corps, holding the western border of that village.

The 1st corps was also heavily attacked on Nov. 1. On the front held by the 1st division part of the 1st brigade was driven from its trenches, but the position was retaken by counter attack, and in the evening the line held was the same as on Oct. 31. The 1st division was much exhausted and weakened by heavy losses. The 7th division remained only two thousand strong. The 3d cavalry division was given temporarily to the 1st corps, and assisted to hold the position. The 9th French corps on the left of our 1st corps was unable to make any progress during the day.

Information came in toward evening that the enemy was again massing against Gheluvelt. I went to Vlamertinghe to consult with Foch and d'Urbal, who told me that nine French battalions and some batteries would reach Ypres early on the morning of the 2d. Foch promised me that he would at once dispatch two battalions of zouaves to support Haig's center.

Coast Line Threatened.

REVIEWING the situation as it presented itself on Oct. 31 and Nov. 1, 1914, I believe that the vital interests of the British empire were in great danger on both these days. That is to say, the whole coast line from Havre to Ostend was within an ace of falling into the hands of the enemy.

In recalling the fateful hours of those two wonderful days and nights, I think we were perhaps in the greatest danger between 2 a. m. and 11 a. m. on Sunday, Nov. 1. Had the French 16th corps arrived only an hour later than it did, the German advance from the line Wytschaete-Messines would have gained such volume, strength, and impetus that nothing could have saved Mount Kemmel from falling into their hands. A vital wedge would have been driven into the very center of our line.

The enormous numerical and artillery superiority of the Germans must be remembered. If they had turned the situation to full account, we should have seen all the French, British, and Belgian troops lying to the north of an east and west line through Mount Kemmel, cut off and hemmed against the coast.

The greatest threat of disaster with which we were faced in 1914 was staved off by the devoted bravery and endurance displayed by the cavalry corps under a commander, Gen. Allenby, who handled them throughout with consummate skill. The same high praise must be given to those two redoubtable divisional leaders, Hubert Gough and De Lisle.

The cavalry was admirably supported and helped by Shaw and Egerton with the splendid battalions of infantry which composed the brigades they commanded, and none of us will ever forget how those French battalions on the left of the 2d cavalry division checked the enemy by their gallant and determined advance at the most critical moment.

It is no disparagement, however, to the other troops engaged if I lay stress on the fact that it was the cavalry alone who, for more than a fortnight previously, had been disputing foot by foot every yard of the ground to the River Lys. They had fought day and night with the utmost tenacity, and the battle of Oct. 31 and Nov. 1 were but the climax to a long and bitter spell of heroic effort.

For the information of non-military readers it is necessary for me to explain that a cavalry division fighting on foot is at a great disadvantage as compared with an infantry division. When horses cannot be used in the fighting, they have still to be looked after, and this takes many men away from the fighting lines. A cavalry division consists ordinarily of three brigades, but when employed in the trenches they get little more than half that number into the firing line. They have nothing like the same "gun power" as an infantry division. But the mobility of the cavalry arm will always be found to compensate in large degree for these manifest disadvantages. Taking into account the losses they had suffered, they can hardly have opposed 2,000 rifles to the onslaught of what has been computed at more than two German army corps.

Praises Territorial Troops.

OF late years our custom has been to train our cavalry to fight on foot, and in the present war we have reaped the fruit of this wise policy. But the instinct which must be inculcated in the horse soldier to regard his horse as his chief reliance must always disqualify him to some extent for the role which our cavalry were called upon to fulfil throughout the momentous issues in the history of the war of which this chapter treats. I may mention in passing that it was this same cavalry spirit, or instinct, with which the British cavalry is so strongly imbued, which enabled them to show to such splendid advantage in the mounted combats of the earlier phases of the war.

I must add a few words as to the fine part played in the fighting of Nov. 1 by the Oxfordshire Hussars and the London Scottish. They were the first territorial troops who fought in the war.

After disembarking at Dunkirk the Oxfordshire Hussars took part in the important operations connected with the Belgian retreat from Antwerp, and rendered most valuable aid in the defense of the Wytschaete-Messines ridge when that piece of ground was held with such marvelous tenacity by the cavalry division against overwhelming odds.

As for the London Scottish, their services on these two days are well summarized in a memorandum sent in to me by Allenby.

"The London Scottish," he wrote, "came under my orders on the evening of Oct. 30, 1914, and were detailed to the support of the Second cavalry division on the following morning. They went into action at 10 a. m., Oct. 31, with a strength of twenty-six officers and 786 men, and occupied trenches in conjunction with the Fourth cavalry brigade. They held these trenches throughout the day, being subjected from time to time to heavy artillery and machine gun fire. From 9 p. m. onward during the night of Oct. 31-Nov. 1, the Germans attacked the trenches of the London Scottish continuously, and at 2 a. m. they succeeded in turning the left in large numbers. The situation was restored at the point of the bayonet by the reserve company. By daylight on Nov. 1 the Germans had, however, turned both flanks, and it became necessary to retire. The retirement was directed on Wulverghem, and was carried out steadily under heavy rifle and machine gun fire. At 8 a. m. the same morning the London Scottish went forward again to take their places in the trenches alongside the First cavalry division, and there they remained until relieved at dusk that evening.

"Throughout these operations, which lasted for two days—viz., Oct. 31 and Nov. 1—the losses of the London Scottish amounted to 278, or about 34 per cent of their strength. Rarely, if ever, have second line troops sustained unshaken so high a percentage of casualties.

"E. H. H. ALLENBY, Lieut. Gen.,
"Commanding Cavalry Corps."

I sent the following message to the officer commanding the London Scottish:

"I wish you and your splendid regiment to accept my warmest congratulations and thanks for the fine work you did on Saturday. You have given a glorious lead and example to all territorial corps fighting in France."

I saw the battalion personally a few days later and said a few words to the men on parade. How they had suffered was only too pathetically apparent. While there was work to be done and an enemy to be held at bay, no other thought filled any of their minds than to die fighting—if necessary, to the last man. But when these territorials returned for a term of well earned rest to their cantonment, with the excitement and danger behind them, a severe reaction came upon them. The heavy losses among their friends and comrades bowed them down with grief, for they necessarily lacked as yet the professional training and stoicism of men whose real business is war.

This exhibition of natural feeling only excited in me a deeper admiration for the splendid courage and endurance they had displayed when unsustained and unassisted by the influence of that iron discipline which only a long course of military training can inculcate. They were urged only by the spirit of noblesse oblige, and the higher ideals which inspire all who have taken up arms against the Germans in this war.

Not a Man to Spare.

ON Nov. 2 the 16th French corps and Conneau's French cavalry division were holding the Wytschaete—Messines ridge, with a detachment of our first cavalry division supporting Conneau.

The troops who had fought so well on the 1st were absolutely tired out. They had suffered tremendous casualties and could not be counted on for the moment even as a reserve. They were withdrawn to rest and refit.

It was with great difficulty that the French troops were able to maintain themselves on the ridge. The Germans were very active, and the fight constantly swayed backward and forward. The western edge of the plateau and the outskirts of the villages marked the extreme limit of the allied advance line.

For some days I had felt considerable anxiety as to the condition of the 1st corps (1st and 2d divisions and the 7th division).

I had constant messages from Haig asking that his tired troops might be given some rest after all their hard work, but I was driven almost to my wits' end to find means of giving him the relief he sought. His chief of staff, John Gough, came to my advanced headquarters, at Bailleul, and discussed the subject fully with me.

I thought perhaps Foch might be able to help me, but when I went to interview him he said that while the present crisis lasted he could not spare a single man for this purpose. All I could do was to send two very tired brigades of the 2d corps up to Ypres on the morning of the 5th to relieve the 7th division, who then came back into billets round Locre in a shattered condition.

The next day the remainder of the 2d corps, which was resting, followed to Ypres to afford what further relief was possible to the 1st corps. The 2d corps was now scattered in detachments along the whole line, and the only reserves available were two or three lately arrived territorial battalions and the wornout 7th division, reduced to less than a brigade in strength.

Willcocks about this time felt anxiety as to the line his Indian troops were holding, and sent his chief of staff to me at Bailleul to ask if he could be reinforced. Under the conditions then existing I was most anxious that the Indian corps should hold its own without assistance and, after calling into consultation other officers of great Indian experience, I refused to do so, pointing out that he had four battalions of the 2d corps in close reserve behind him.

My faith in the Indian troops was justified, and a day or two later he reported that the Indians were doing well and that he was full of confidence in them.

During the early days of November strong French reinforcements began to reach Ypres. The 20th French corps detrained in that area on the 4th and 5th.

It was about this time that both our intelligence departments and that of the French became very optimistic on the subject of a great withdrawal of the Germans from the western front. The Russians were going on from one success to another, and large entrainments of German troops were reported at Roulers, Thourout, Tourcoing, and other places.

Whatever may have been really going on, our hopes were, as usual, doomed to disappointment, for the pressure on our front became greater and greater. But our eyes were always turned toward the east, and, as I have explained in a former chapter, the Russian "Will-o'-the-Wisp" continued to uphold us and keep our eyes centered upon it.

Leaders of Men.

SEVERAL territorial units now began to be landed in France, among others the Artists' Rifles, the Honorable Artillery company, the Queen's Westminsters, and Hertfordshire territorials, and the Warwickshire battery and horse artillery. I spent a morning riding about among them, and was deeply impressed by the wonderful spirit which pervaded them. The only thought they had was to prepare themselves in the shortest possible time to take their part in the fighting at the front.

The Hertfordshire battalion was commanded by an old friend of mine whom I can never think of as other than "Tom Brand," under which patronymic I had served with him for a long time, both in peace and war, and learned his great soldier-like qualities. By this time, however, he has succeeded his father, the famous speaker of the house of commons, and had become Viscount Hampden. I watched him at the time of which I am writing exercising to the full the power, which he possessed in an extraordinary degree, of instilling the real fighting spirit into the men he commanded and afterward led with such great skill and gallantry.

It was a power which he possessed in common with his intimate friend, Lord Cavan, who fought for a long time side by side with him in France. These two men bore a strong resemblance to one another in the marvelous influence they seemed to exercise over those under them. Both men struck me much. Lord Cavan, like Hampden, was "a dugout" and commanded first a brigade and then a division of the guards, until he was selected for the command of an army corps, with the utmost gallantry and success.

Closely associated with my early recollection of the territorials in France is the Artists' Rifles. They were before the war classified with some few others as an officers' training corps. Our losses in officers in the campaign up to then had been prodigious, and I was trying to devise some means to fill up their ranks. What I saw of the Artists' Rifles and the men of which the corps was composed induced me to think of turning them to this purpose.

They were commanded by a most valuable and efficient officer, Col. May. Him I consulted about it, and with his help an officers' training school was established, which was the first of many which have since sprung into existence. The Artists' Rifles were instrumental in quickly meeting some of our pressing needs in this important respect, and may be said to have laid the foundation of that officers' school of war whose ramifications were soon to extend not only behind all the fighting lines but throughout the United Kingdom. It is interesting to recall the fact that the conversion of certain picked territorial battalions into officers' training corps before the war was another of Lord Haldane's brilliant conceptions.

Some fine work was done on the evenings of the 6th by Kavanagh's 7th cavalry brigade, Cavan's 4th guards' brigade, and Lawford's 22d brigade of the 7th division. Moncey's detachment of French troops, posted on the right of the 1st corps, had been driven back over the canal and a serious position was created.

Counter Attack Costly.

OUR troops counter attacked with great effect. Lawford's brigade (2d battalion, the Queen's 2d battalion, R. Warwickshire regiment, 1st battalion R. Welsh Fusiliers, and 1st battalion S. Staffs regiment) capturing a good many prisoners and machine guns. The counter attack was successful and the situation was restored.

We paid dearly for this success, however, in the loss of some very valuable lives. Amongst others Gordon Wilson, commanding the Blues, and Hugh Dawnay, commanding the 2d Life Guards, were killed. Wilson was an excellent cavalry leader. He had done splendid work with the 3d cavalry division ever since they landed, and his death left a big gap.

Up to three or four days before his death, Hugh Dawnay had been my liaison officer with the 1st corps. The occasion of his going back to his regiment arose in this way: The 2d Life Guards were getting very weak in officers, and he had an idea that he ought to be with them. He felt this very deeply, and told me so in a conversation we had together on the subject. The first time he spoke to me about it I told him that, whilst I sympathized with all he said, yet I considered it was his duty to remain where he was. I reminded him of the highly important work he was doing so well, and told him that it would be most difficult to replace him in that work, whereas it would be comparatively easy to put his regiment right as regards officers.

The next day he came back to me and repeated his request with great earnestness. He told me he could never be happy or contented in his mind if at this juncture he did not take his place beside his brother officers in his old regiment. It would indeed have been difficult for any soldier to refuse such a request, or fail to understand and enter into Dawnay's feelings.

I felt that it was weak of me to give way to him, but I did so on the understanding that his absence was only to be temporary. Of course, he might easily have been killed in the performance of his staff duties, nevertheless when I heard he had fallen I felt that, in the interests of the service, I had done wrong in allowing him to go.

It is necessary to steel one's heart against any kind of sentiment when conducting a great war, and in the loss of one of the finest and most valuable young staff officers I have ever come across I learned a lesson never to be forgotten.

On several subsequent occasions similar requests were made to me without avail, notably in the case of my friend Clive of the Grenadiers, whose services and help I can never recall without admiration and gratitude.

MAKING ANIMATED CARTOONS.

By Mae Tinee.

IT'S awfully nice to be back again chatting with you on a Sunday morning. [At you!] The best part of going away, after all, is coming home. A rest is a wonderful thing, but wouldn't it be awful if a perpetual rest were wished upon us? Can't imagine anything worse on earth than twenty-four hours a day with nothing that really had to be done.

The average human after two weeks of sweet relaxation can pity the idle rich with a vengeance, for he knows they need it.

To get down to business, however—Wallace Carlson, who makes the animated cartoons for Bray-Paramount, came in to see me not long ago. Remembering how many questions are constantly coming in on animated cartoons and how they are made, I asked if he wouldn't write me a letter explaining in detail just how the process was accomplished. He was good enough to comply with the request and I will pass the explanation on to you.

Before getting off the subject of Mr. Carlson himself, here's about him:

He's a blond with blue eyes, wavy hair, nice teeth, ingenuous smile. He's tall enough and heavy enough; a little bit shy at first, but responds nicely to kind treatment. Now here's his letter:

Animated cartoons are produced by long and tedious labor. After the scenario has been approved the work of "stacking up" hundreds of drawings begins. Every little movement of the character means a separate drawing; for example, a man raising his hand to salute would take about four drawings to bring his hand from his side to position of salute. The body of the man and rest of the drawing, which would not change position in the action, is traced on the different drawings by the assistant, only the action part being drawn in by the animator.

To make a man walk across a scene the figure will be advanced about three-sixteenths of an inch on each succeeding drawing. In one drawing the man will be balanced on the ball of one foot and the heel of the advanced foot; in the next drawing the advanced foot would be flat on the ground, and the other foot would be just leaving the ground.

A careful study of action is necessary in order to keep figures balanced correctly. Natural action greatly exaggerated is the funniest. Of course, the impossible is the animated cartoonist's forte, as he can make a man swallow a lake easier than he can make him take a dose of cod liver oil.

The completion of the drawings (which will number between 1,500 and 2,500 for a 500 foot picture), does not end the labor; in fact the most tedious part then begins. The drawings are photographed one by one on a specially constructed table illuminated by powerful lights. As each drawing is put in place it is registered on the long roll of film contained in the camera above the table by a turn of the crank. It takes sixteen exposures to make a foot of film, and for 500 feet it takes 8,000 turns of the crank, by which time any animator becomes thoroughly cranky.

Pretty Eileen Percy will probably soon retire from the screen. She was married recently to Ulrich Busch, now working in pictures at the Gasnier studios, Glendale, Cal. A contemplated honeymoon trip around the world is the knife that will sever Miss Percy from the screen.

"Ten thousand a week, please!" Theda Bara is said to have requested of Mr. Fox when the time came for her to sign a new contract with that company. "Nothing doing," Mr. Fox is reported to have replied. And now they tell us that the inimitable Theda is spreading her wings for a flight by herself. In other words, she is reported to be organizing a company of her own. But you can't believe everything you hear.

Set your mind at rest regarding Constance Talmadge. She declares she positively won't marry for years to come. "The dear public," says Constance, "has a positive mania for marrying me off. But you know I don't want to marry until I'm really sure I've the right man. Men are more settled than women. Women can skip over a dozen love affairs while a man is making up his mind to one. I want to steady down and be able to keep my mind on the only only when I get him. Haven't even cast an eye on him yet."

A Mrs. Wong was engaged to build the fearful and wonderful coiffure that Helen Jerome Eddy wears in "The Dragon's Daughter" with Sessue Hayakawa. Mrs. Wong was long on hair dressing but short on discretion. She hadn't been about the studios a day before she was caught whispering in various ears cryptic remarks regarding "$2,000" and "lottery." And then the police came. The perfect hair dresser had been discovered. She conducted a lottery.

Claire Whitney, according to word from the coast, is suing her Belgian husband, who goes by the name of H. von Haegardaen, for divorce, grounds being a Belgian wife. Miss Whitney requests an annulment.

That handsome caveman Rockcliffe Fellowes is soon to be seen in a picture that promises well—"The Cup of Fury," from the story by Rupert Hughes. Mr. Fellowes, as I remember, was always winning his women by the o. f. method of dragging them to fastnesses, mountain, and desert, when they proved obstreperous and treating them to vigorous doses of authority until they were tamed.

BITTERSWEET: Thank you, but I didn't consider it a compliment. "His Majesty the American" is the first picture made by Douglas Fairbanks under the new "big four" contract. Now that you speak of it, I believe he did "discover" Eileen Percy.

K. N.: How nice of you to send me your picture! You are quite as good looking as many on the screen—but that won't get you anywhere. If you happen to be near a studio some time, drop in and let the studio manager give you a once over. You never can tell! For a list of studios you will have to send me a stamped, addressed envelope. Glad to oblige you.

L.: Bet your name is Lena. Is it? Thanks for your cordial little welcome. I'm mighty glad, too, I'm back.

ONE WHO ENJOYS: I hadn't seen the poem before. Thank you for sending it. You columnites are so nice!

ALICE M. P.: Of course you may "kick." The doctors all say there's something wrong with a baby that won't use its legs. If you read the review on the picture you mention you know how mother feels on the subject. You're wise to stay in bed when you have a chance. Write again some time.

INTERESTED READER: I will send the list of studios requested if you will mail me a stamped, addressed envelope. No trouble at all.

E. R.: No, Mary Pickford played in "Tess of the Storm Country." Norma Talmadge was starred in "The Secret of the Storm Country." I reckon that's what you're thinking of, isn't it?

A. B. C.: Well, no disgrace about acting in burlesque, is there? Now that you mention it, I believe that the actor one time did tell me he played in the company you mention. It was thoughtful of you to remind me and kind of you to take time to write a letter. Thanks.

"THIS KNOCKS 'EM OUT OF THEIR SEATS" IN VAUDEVILLE

M'VICKER'S.

Vine and Temple:

"I've a question I'd like to ask you."

"Go right ahead."

"What is the difference between the Declaration of Independence and marriage?"

"I don't know, what is the difference between the Declaration of Independence and marriage?"

"The Declaration of Independence was the beginning of man's liberty, and marriage is the finish."

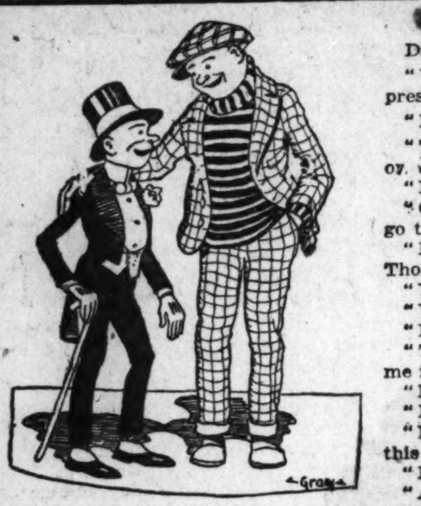
"Why do you consider marriage such a hard proposition?"

"Because it takes grit to propose, sand to go through the ceremony, and rocks to support a wife."

"And yet, a man doesn't know what real happiness is until he gets married."

"Yes, and then it's too late. Why is a condemned man given the best things to eat?"

"Because he hasn't got long to eat."



"Why is an engaged man permitted to talk?"

"Because he hasn't got long to talk."

"Are you against marriage?"

"No, I'm up against it."

RIALTO.

Dalh and Walling:

"Will you accept me as a Christmas present?"

"No, thanks, I prefer useful gifts."

"This morning I dropped my watch on the floor."

"Did your watch stop?"

"Certainly. Did you think it would go through?"

"Did you take that message to Mr. Thompson as I told you to?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"What did you find out?"

"Mrs. Thompson."

"The doctor who lives next door to me is no gentleman."

"How is that?"

"It's a lady doctor."

"I'm sorry about the fight we had this mornig."

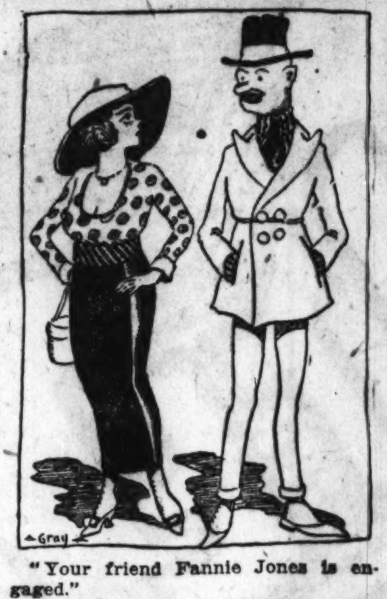
"I'm glad you're sorry."

"And I'm sorry you're glad."

"How many times have I told you not to play poker?"

"But, my dear, I won last night."

"Well, why didn't you say so before?"



"Your friend Fannie Jones is engaged."

"What, Fanny Jones engaged? Wall, I've always said that no matter how homely a girl may be, there's always some fool ready to marry her. Who's the poor simp?"

"I am."

Fisher and Gilmore:

"Which is correct, 'I are a fool,' or 'I am a fool?"

"I am a fool."

"I thought so."

"One minute. I was merely trying to elucidate your interrogation from a rhetorical standpoint."

"You certainly look worried."

"My landlord told me he'd give me just three days to pay my rent."

"And what did you do?"

"I told him I'd take Washington's birthday, the Fourth of July, and Christmas."

"Have you traveled much?"

"For a while I was constantly on the go, and then again for five years I lived in one place."

"Do you recall which jail it was?"

"No jail at all. I was in 'Aurora.'"

"That's worse than jail."

PLAYER ROLLS
SEPTEMBER
Bulletin

Q R S Co.
Chicago, Ill.

Have You Heard These Exclusive Q·R·S Numbers?

No. 750—TELL ME

It is a big hit ballad. It is a favorite Fox Trot. This is a player roll you will play over and over again and enjoy it better each time. Words by J. Will Callahan. Music by Max Kortlander. Played by the composer and Lee S. Roberts.

No. 870—PATCHES

Fox Trot. Words by J. Will Callahan. Music by Lee S. Roberts. Played by the composer and Kortlander. Just to be a boy again, a barefoot boy in patches! Mr. Roberts' melody vividly recalls all the old boyhood memories. This Fox Trot roll is one that you will enjoy over and over again.

No. 820—LAZY EYES

Waltz Ballad. Words and music by Ruth Bingaman and Lee S. Roberts. Played by the composer. A dreamy, languorous, delightful melody, fully carrying out the suggestion of the lyric of "seductive eyes" with a hint of insincerity. A wonderful player roll selection that appeals to everybody.

News and Comment of MOTORDOM

Conducted by JOHN L. SPELLMAN

Signs Point to Makers Adopting Different Brake

May Shelve Rear Wheel Method for Old Transmission Type

WITHIN the last year automobile manufacturers have shown a tendency to revive the transmission brake. Previous to a year ago the number of makers who used this type of brake was less than one-half a dozen.

A double set of rear wheel brakes has been the type used almost universally since automobiles were first made in America. Now there appears to be a move to shelve this method of stopping machines in favor of the transmission pattern.

It requires less effort on the part of a driver to use a transmission brake, according to the experts. They make the flat claim that this method makes for ease of car control.

In extremely hilly country the claim is made that the double set of brakes for the rear wheels is better than the transmission type. This is because with the former method the service and hand brakes can be used alternatively, thus reducing the chances for excessive heating of the braking apparatus.

Tractors in Cuba.

The tractors used on the sugar estates of Cuba, according to a consular report, are of two kinds—the round wheel and the track layer types. They are used almost exclusively for plowing. In the northern section of the Cienfuegos province, owing to the hard, sticky, clayish soils, the track layer type seems to be most successful.

Another Unfair Town.

Chicago motorists are reporting that the authorities at New Buffalo, Mich., are taking an unfair advantage of most of the automobile parties passing through there. Fines of $10 and costs are assessed for no reason at all, according to the complaints made to THE TRIBUNE.

Medals for Drivers.

Secretary of War Baker has authorized the presentation of medals to the members of the army truck train, which has finished its transcontinental run over the Lincoln highway. The train is now in California. The train will be given a reception in San Francisco tomorrow.

Haynes on Memorial Association.

Elwood Haynes, president of the automobile company bearing his name, has been named as a member of the executive committee of the Roosevelt Memorial association.

Another Show.

The Detroit Automobile Dealers' association is to have a closed car salon in the Arena gardens on Oct. 6-11.

Pointers for the Motorist

Tire chains are practically always used in wet weather and care is necessary to keep them from getting rusty. The chains should always be dried off before they are returned to the tool box after use. Especially should the clamps be looked after. A little cup of grease or vaseline will prevent rusting and eliminate the trouble of prying them open or using a hammer to close them. There should always be carried in the tool kit a crosspiece tool and one or two extract cross chains. With this tool broken cross chains may be removed or replaced very easily.

A very handy weapon to make easy the examination of the inside of a casing when looking for punctures, fabric breaks, or weak spots is a wedge made of a substantial stick of wood three-quarters of an inch thick and three to five inches long, depending on the size of the tire. This wedge may be slipped between the beads and pulled around the entire circumference of the casing with one hand, leaving the other free to hold the tire.

Car owners should be reminded that shellac is not satisfactory for painting rims; it peels off too quickly. Graphite paint is better for this purpose and even ordinary paint is to be preferred to shellac.

Operating the engine without sufficient water or with no water at all may result in injury to the spark plugs. To give service without cracking the plugs must be properly cooled and provision for this is generally made in the water jacketing system. When the water runs low the plugs become hotter and there is great danger of their being damaged.

Few motorists realize that a comparatively large quantity of water gradually accumulates in the crank case, mixing with the oil, and forming an emulsion, which has impaired lubricating qualities. This accumulation of water is more pronounced in winter than in summer and is found to a greater extent as the number of cylinders increase. This brings out the importance of changing the oil every 1,000 miles, and for the best lubricating results every 500 miles, in which case the old oil may be run through a chamois skin to remove the water, after which it may be used again.

The best medium for use in cleaning terminals that have become corroded is a strong solution of washing soda. After the parts have been cleaned and are dry they should be given a light coating of vaseline to prevent a return of the trouble.

An air vent is put in the bowl of a carbureter to equalize the pressure between the gasoline in the bowl and the atmosphere, to obviate the formation of a vacuum in the bowl. It is vitally important to keep this hole open and not allow it to become clogged with foreign matter of any sort.

Exhaust Echoes

CHICAGO'S subway experts can get some ideas at the plant of B. F. Goodrich Rubber company at Akron, O. For several years a system of underground bores has been successfully operated at this plant. There are more than four miles of tunnels in the system, which is used for interdepartmental transportation. During the last year the system averaged 40,000,000 pounds of freight matter per month. The system is operated the same as a railroad, having train dispatchers and regular running schedules.

Another Speed Trap.

A speed trap is being operated on the Dixie highway at One Hundred and Forty-third street and Western avenue, according to complaints received by THE TRIBUNE. This is in the village of Posen, and the claim is made that autoists are fined for speeding even when they are not making more than ten miles an hour.

Prices for Michelin Tires for small cars:

Tire Size	Plain Treads	Universal Tread Non-Skids	Ring-Shaped Tubes
30 x 3	$14.40	$15.60	$3.35
30 x 3½	12.90	19.90	3.95
31 x 4	—	27.90	4.50

(Note: Prices do not include war-tax)

Michelin Tires of all sizes are famous for their durability. This is equally true of the smaller sizes, which surpass all other makes for sturdiness and service. For example, the tread of the 30 x 3½ Michelin Universal, is over ¾ of an inch thick. Let us show you a section of this tire in comparison with other makes and judge for yourself whether you too, should not use Michelins.

Loose Auto Parts Need Attention to Stop Squeaks

Car Owners Can Prevent Annoying Noises if Rattles Are Traced

BY HIGH SPEED.

IT is when you drive your car over rough roads that all sorts of rattles and squeaks are heard, most of which you cannot locate. I have heard so many say that they would like to know where certain noises are coming from because once located it is usually an easy matter to find some means of remedying them. The next time you are confronted with this problem the first thing to do is to attempt to find the location of the sound, that is, wheher forward or rear. After that keep in mind the kind of a sound it is, that is, whether tinny or more solid in character. The average owner allows the parts to remain loose until the car goes to the shop, all because of his inability to find the exact cause. Here is an easy way to trace certain noises:

Fenders are commonly blamed for a lot of noises that are caused by license plates, hood, lamps, and other attached parts. When the car is stopped grip the fender firmly and pull and push it in all directions. If you can detect any looseness first find out if the supporting brackets are loose. These brackets are attached to the frame and to the fender. The bolts holding the bracket in place against the frame or the fender attachment may be loose and these may easily be tightened. Some fenders have insufficient points of attachment, so that no matter how tight they are against the bracket they will make a noise. Some owners rivet an extra piece to such fenders and bind them more firmly against the frame. The makeshift method is to force sticks of wood between the fender and the frame to cause binding.

Mud aprons and mud pans are common causes of noises sometimes difficult to find. The apron on front under the radiator is usually held in place by small bolts and nuts. If these become even slightly loose the apron may cause an uncomfortable noise because of car vibration alone. The underpan attached to the frame often becomes noisy because of frame weaving.

I have seen owners attempt to trace a noise and tighten everything in sight without getting results. Head lamp glass fronts will confuse an owner in this way. They will rattle in their frames and emit a tinny sound very much like that of a loose license plate. In company with the noises mentioned is that produced by a cooling fan. Few owners suspect a fan of making a noise, but loose blades or end play in the fan often produces the tinny sound so common to the cheaper grades of cars.

Some of the low priced cars on the market are fitted with radius rods and poorly designed gearshift mechanisms. The radius rods must have freedom of movement up and down but not necessarily sideways. In going over rough roads these radius rods may rattle and make it very difficult for one to give an exact location to the sound. Brake rods when they are long or of small diameter and not well supported at the ends will rattle in the same way. The radius rods usually have some means for preventing rattle, but the brake rods have not. Because the brake rods move it is very difficult to provide means for preventing them from rattling. In some cars wooden guides can be installed; in others a coil spring arrangement can be used. The usual difficulty is in finding some point of attachment for the anti-rattling device. For the Ford car and certain others, special anti-rattling devices may be purchased at accessory stores.

A most peculiar sound is produced by the hood when frame weaving causes it to move. Often it produces a squeak. The pads (often of leather or fabric) between the hood and cowl and hood and radiator, when badly worn make the sound worse. Some owners oil these pads so the hood will slide over. In the cheaper cars it is almost impossible to cure a hood from making noises.

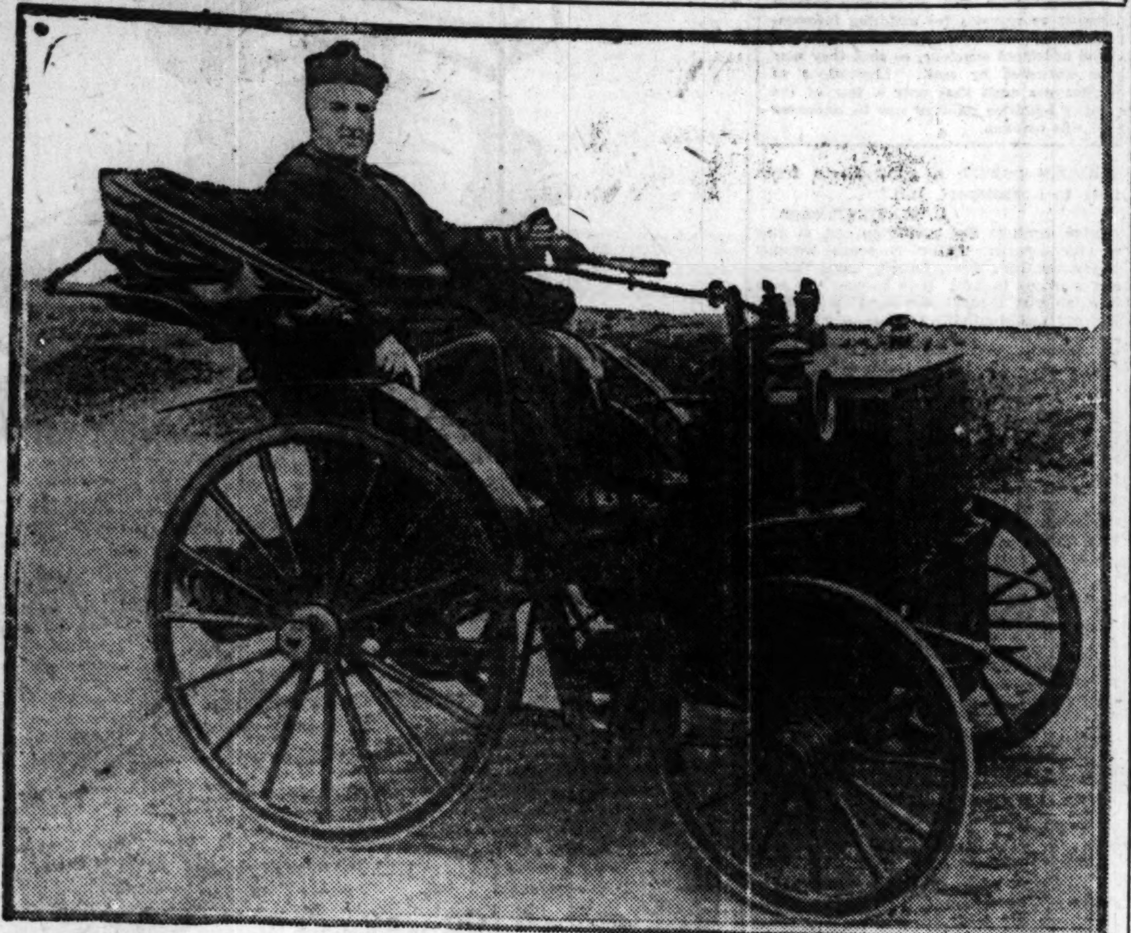
Spring shackles with wide play may be noisy on a road that is only slightly rough. Often the sound is like an engine knock and the owner does not know what on earth to look for. This sound may sometimes be heard only when a turn is made.

The best method to use to find any of the noises mentioned is to handle each part. For example, if the head lamp glass fronts are suspected thump the glass with the hand and listen for the sound. If the tie rod is suspected grasp it firmly in one hand and try to shake it to produce the sound you hear when the car is in motion.

France's Oldest Auto



THE OLDEST AUTOMOBILE IN FRANCE.—The photo shows its present owner, a French abbé, driving along a country road near Paris. The make of the machine is Panhard. The automobile is the first ever built in France.

The EXPERTS SAY

RATTLING TIRE CHAINS.

THE common method of locking spare tires is to use a chain and padlock. The only trouble with the idea is the noise incident to the rattling of the chain and the fact that it mars the finish of parts with which it comes in contact. Some car owners cover this chain with a bit of hose, but this is usually too stiff and is somewhat noisy and even permits marring of the finish. A bit of leather or heavy substitute, the length of the chain and wide enough to form a tube to enclose the chain, offers a satisfactory solution of the problem. Turn in the edges of the leather case and if you cannot do the job yourself, the nearest harness maker will make the tube for you.

TOOL ARRANGEMENT.

An admirable idea in the arrangement of tools in the home garage is to give each tool a number, which is painted it. The same number is painted on the walls or racks in the place where the tool belongs. In this way it is a simple matter to return each tool to its proper place so that it is ready when it is next needed.

POWER LOSSES.

Leaks mean power wasted, lost. The leak may be of water, fuel, or oil, but no matter what it is it wastes power. Slight leaks here and there may cause a total loss of power that will be serious. There are dozens of joints in the engine, and each one may spring a leak under certain conditions. Good gasketing is the best insurance against leaks, but it is not all the battle. The joints must be inspected frequently. If you are not sure of the existence of a leak, squirt a little oil over the suspected spot; bubbles will tell the tale of a leak. Cylinder head holding down nuts should be tightened occasionally. The inlet manifold, if it is outside the casting, should be tightened to the carbureter and cylinder block. Remove the pan under the engine and see if there is any dripping. Go over the three major systems, water, gas, and oil, and stop any leak found. For oil paper gasketing is best. Use wrapping paper and be sure there is no break in the gasket at any point, around the stud holes. Asbestos coated with graphite makes the best gasket for inlet manifolds, carbureter flanges, and similar locations. Joints that carry hot gases should be fitted with gaskets of copper covered asbestos. In certain cars special types of gaskets are recommended for various locations. These types should be purchased from the service stations and used as directed. The important thing is to insure against leaks, for every leak means a power loss.

Overheating Preventive.

In cars that use thermo-syhpon cooling the water system should always be kept completely filled. If the water level drops considerably the circulation of the water will be reduced and may even be stopped altogether. With a pump system the pump continues to force the water through the system. regardless of how much or how little of the liquid there may be, but the circulation of the syhponic system is simply a natural flow and this is interrupted in case a considerable portion of the outlet pipe is empty, resulting in overheating of the engine.

Zion City Folks Make State Offer to Complete Road

Want to Pay $90,000 of $150,000 to Construct Boulevard

THE last remaining stretch of bad road between Chicago and Milwaukee, that part of Sheridan road which runs through Zion City, may be converted into a boulevard.

At a conference last week in Chicago between state, Lake county, and Zion City officials, the latter made a proposition to pay $90,000 of the $150,000 necessary to construct a hard road through the lace making community. This would construct a road about one and one-half miles long and would complete the Chicago-Milwaukee Sheridan road route.

The state officials were inclined to look with favor on the offer, and in all probability it will be accepted. Much of the road is faced by vacant property, and the Zion City officials said they had to have state aid to finance the project because of this.

Under the plan offered by the Zion City folks a fifty foot wide roadway would be built through the town. The road now is impassable after a rain and nearly so in dry weather. Motorists call it the road with no bottom. It is the only drawback now to a nearly all boulevard drive to Milwaukee.

For the last two years efforts have been made by all agencies to have the Zion City people build a good road through their city. At first the claim was made that they did not want motorists passing through their place.

In the last year this sentiment has changed. The Zion City folks have profited by having automobilists pass through their community. Most of the motorists who use the Zion City "road" are found to be persons who respected the laws of the city, and the Zionists are now inclined to favor welcoming motoring parties.

So far there has been no objection to the state giving financial aid for the building of the road. If the present road was developed along each side there probably would be some objection to this, but as most of the road is lined with vacant property it looks as if the state would have to come to Zion's aid or the road will not be built.

KOKOMO
5000 MILE GUARANTEE

There's the Tire for My Long Tour

Because:

It is impossible for me to buy a better built tire. The conservative guarantee means that all Kokomos give 5,000 miles before adjustment is ever requested.

The majority of Kokomo tires run 6,000 or 10,000 miles before they wear out.

Regardless of service rendered and miles it has run, if a Kokomo tire ever proves defective an adjustment satisfactory to the owner will be cheerfully and promptly made.

LONG-LIFE Kokomo TIRES AND TUBES
5000 MILE GUARANTEE

You and I have bought cheaper tires hoping we were getting tires that cost as much to build as Kokomos but sold for less.

We have discovered that the price was low and that the quality was low, as indicated by the short life of the cheaper tires. Some of them guaranteed high mileage and proved defective at 3,000 miles. The tire that gives me the greatest satisfaction is the tire that gives me the greatest mileage free from trouble. I put on Kokomos and forgot my tires for 10,000 miles. I know that it is impossible to buy better tires, to buy cheaper mileage and to buy more miles per tire.

DERF 360 SPARK POINT PLUGS

Another Wonderful Triumph for Derf Spark Plugs!

IN a dependability run, conducted by the Tower Motor Co., with an Overland car, Derf Spark Plugs again proved their superiority over any other plug. Seven days and seven nights the car was run, under the most unfavorable conditions, and not once did the motor miss fire! The run covered 3707 miles at an average gasoline consumption of 21.30 miles per gallon!

This absolutely proved our claim that the Derf saves 20% to 35% gasoline; that it is the most dependable plug made and that it lasts longest.

In fact, Mr. M. R. Coon, Mgr. of the Tower Motor Co., wrote us: "Derf Plugs are certainly all that is claimed for them—and then some!"

Can you beat that? There are hundreds of similar triumphs. You can't even approximate the Derf's record with any other plug.

Prove it yourself. What the Derf saves for others it will save for you. Get a set today and learn what it means to have the Derf give you more power at less cost! $6.20 for four, $9.30 for six.

Why Good Roads.

In a recent issue of Bradstreet's the following appeared:

"Wholesale trade is good, but considerable complaint is heard from country dealers on account of very bad roads.

"Country retail trade, however, has been affected by the bad roads. These have also affected live stock receipts, which are below normal. Hogs still continue to rise, the highest price paid this week being $20.40. Practically no progress has been made by the farmers in their field work, moisture in the soil being excessive in some sections.

"Heavy country roads caused by continuous rains have prevented country travel and thus reduced retail trade."

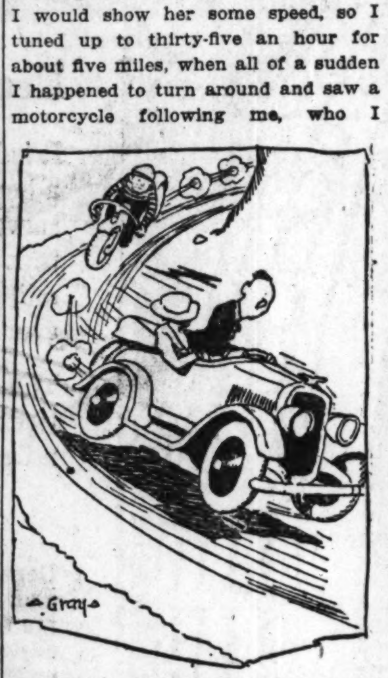
Got a Match?

While motoring home from a picnic a short time ago, about 9:30 in the evening with my girl friend, I thought I would show her some speed, so I tuned up to thirty-five an hour for about five miles, when all of a sudden I happened to turn around and saw a motorcycle following me, who I thought was a motorcycle "cop," and without a second thought I speeded up to forty-two an hour with the thought that I might leave him.



But to my regret he was riding right beside of me. He waved to me to stop, which I did, with the thought of paying the judge $25 in the morning.

When I had come to a dead stop, the supposed motorcycle cop came over to me and begged my pardon for stopping me, as he only wanted some matches to start a campfire with, as he was making a cross country tour with some friends and they were to camp in the vicinity. So I gave him the matches after being relieved with the thought of saving $25. E. H.

Look for Asparagus.

I have driven a Studebaker coupé for several years, and, like many women, know nothing about the internal workings of the car. But my car has become very sensitive to any unusual sound that would indicate trouble. Recently there was a strange, thud-like noise at intervals, most certain to occur when I turned a corner. I took the mechanic out with me so that he could hear it for himself before taking "Little Willie" to pieces—sort of an X-ray trip, as it were.

"Yes," he said, "pretty bad. Sounds like a bolt had dropped out of the engine." When the car was returned to me after spending several hours on the operating table, there was a can of asparagus on the floor. When I drove by the office to pay my bill there was a "ain't that just like a woman" grin on the faces of the "innocent bystanders." I was informed that after going over the car carefully they could find nothing wrong until they unlocked the compartment at the back. There they found the can of asparagus which had been overlooked when I had taken home some "cash and carry" groceries. The can had been rolling merrily around, and when I turned a corner would hit the side of the car, making a thud. Now whenever a car is turned into the shop with some diagnosed ailment, the boys say: "Guess it's another case of asparagus in the carburetor!" C. S.

English Custom Saves Him.

I had been driving most of the day in my new car and was tired from a long trip. I had some guests. I asked if one of them could drive and give me a chance to rest and continue to drive later.

Among the guests was an ex-English "Tommy." He said he thought he was capable of driving. I turned the wheel over to him at Adams street and Michigan avenue. In a few minutes I discovered that the car was being driven along the left hand side of the street at about twenty miles an hour.

A "cop" stopped us and I had to go to court the next day.

The ex-soldier explained that in England all traffic drives to the left, instead of to the right, as in this country.

This was a help and the judge had the matter explained to him. S.L.

England Lifts Ban.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 6.—Great Britain has repealed all restrictions relating to the importation of motor trucks, passenger cars, motorcycles, and farm tractors, the repeal taking effect Sept. 1, according to a report from the department of commerce. This means that American manufacturers of these automotive products can now ship freely to Great Britain.

It is reported at the same time, however, that the complete abolition of restrictions may only be temporray. A new ration plan allowing cars and trucks to be imported in proportion to the average amount imported in the years 1912-'13-'14-'15 may be arranged.

Up to the present time importations have been rationed on the basis of 50 per cent of the 1913 imports in average monthly quantites up to Sept. 1, 1919.

New French Roads.

French dispatches recently stated that the entire road construction program there will cost nearly two billion francs, which it is estimated by Mr. Bedouce, budget reporter, will give France a road system superior to that before the war. One hundred and seventy-six million francs have been allocated to road repairs in the invaded regions.

More Good Roads.

$40,000,000 highway bond issue was passed by a 7 to 1 vote by the people of California recently. Another $10,000,000 will be spent by the counties of the state in this manner and $10,000,000 of federal aid will be expended to certain post roads. This makes a total of more than $60,000,000, which will be expended in California on the betterment of highways in the next three years. In the event of the passage of the Townsend measure, creating a national highway system, California will receive an increased mileage over and above that mentioned.

$H_2O+C=H_2+CO$

The above formula tells a story that interests every motorist. It tells the story of carbon prevention. In plain English as applied to motors, it means that steam and carbon, when subjected to the terrible heat inside your motor, are transformed into hydrogen and carbon dioxide. The hydrogen explodes and the carbon dioxide passes off through the exhaust. Thus no carbon remains. You have always known that steam is the best solvent for carbon, But until now, perhaps, you did not know how steam could be injected.

The Automatic Steam Carburetor

takes a tiny bit of water from the supply pipe and turns it into steam by the use of heat from the exhaust manifold. It injects this steam into the intake manifold between the gasoline carburetor and the motor. It vaporizes the gasoline that constantly condenses around the walls of the intake manifold, giving a highly vaporized mixture which responds much more readily to the spark.

Inside the explosion chamber the steam performs two functions. It decomposes into its two component parts—hydrogen and oxygen. Hydrogen, the lightest of all gases, explodes with the carbon to form carbon dioxide, or in some cases carbon monoxide gas, and is discharged through the exhaust.

This is the chemical reaction that takes place. The results are: 25% to 40% of your gasoline bill is saved, carbon is eliminated, motor cleaning and repair bills are almost entirely done away with, your car will run from five to seven miles per hour faster, you will get one-third more miles per gallon, your intake manifold will always be hot, and you will feel more power and pep in your motor than it ever had before.

Thirty minutes will convince you, but these dealers are authorized to allow you to use the Automatic Steam Carburetor thirty days, and refund the purchase price if you do not find that it does all we claim for it. The first cost is only $15.00, and there is no other cost, because there is no up-keep. The Automatic is made for all internal combustion engines—automobile, truck, tractor, motor boat or aeroplane—whether burning gasoline, kerosene, alcohol or benzol.

Some Satisfaction

To the woman who drives her own car and glories in it, there is some satisfaction in knowing that the Swinehart Tires on which she depends for security and safety are in fact dependable—

—some satisfaction in knowing that this dependability is due entirely to the time, care, knowledge and experience that goes into their making, and not to any so-called "special processes," "tricks," or "fancy frills"—

—some satisfaction in knowing that the Swinehart Company, makers of high grade tires for years, is back of every tire bearing its name—

—and there is still more satisfaction in knowing that Swinehart is the tire without a Single Government Rejection.

Swinehart Tires are made in both Fabric and Cord—both give more guarantee mileage for your money than you ever would expect or have a right to expect.

Ideal Cellular Truck Tires

This patented construction makes this tire semi-pneumatic and eliminates the dangers due to blowouts and punctures, so common in pneumatic truck tires. No spare tire is necessary, because the tire often outwears the truck. This cellular feature also makes the tire anti-skid and non-heating. The many advantages are obvious.

Let your next tires be Swinehart—and see that the truck or car you buy are equipped with them.

Road Work Plan of Cook County Ahead of Others

Quinlan, County Superintendent of Highways, Leads in Work

SEVENTEEN well known highways lead to Chicago. For these all of the terminal approaches within Cook county have been completed or are under construction except two.

If every county superintendent of highways in the country has done as well as George Quinlan of Cook, Lincoln highway would be finished by Thanksgiving. Of the fourteen miles of that thoroughfare in this county, six have been paved and the other eight are scheduled to be completed by Nov. 15.

On the other hand, there is two miles leading out on West Lake street which have not been improved. That will be the approach for the Cannon Ball trail leading west across the state through Aurora, Mendota, and Galesburg, also for the Starved Rock trail, the Chicago, Kansas City, and Gulf highway and the Grant highway. This is one of the stretches which will be undertaken next year, if the public approves of the proposed bond issue this fall.

The Alton way, leading out the Plainfield road, has four miles under contract within Cook county. The other twelve miles must wait more money.

The Illinois Valley way, going down the valley through La Salle, has an approach to Chicago of twenty miles within Cook county. Six have been improved and the other fourteen are under construction.

The nineteen miles of the Dixie highway in Cook county are in daily service and the fourteen miles of the Milwaukee road, out through Wheeling and Libertyville, are completed.

The resort route, out to Fox Lake, is another completed job in Cook county. Sheridan road is also finished so far as the county is concerned, although most of it outside of Chicago is through the north shore villages.

Only nine of the fourteen miles of the Egyptian trail within Cook county have been paved.

The Belt line has its approach over that of the Illinois Valley way and Chicago itself supplies the entrance for the Detroit-Chicago road, the Ade way to Indianapolis, the Liberty way to Logansport and Kokomo, and the Jackson highway to Lafayette and Indianapolis.

The branch to Chicago of the Valparaiso-Joliet highway is over the Lincoln highway.

Da Vinci's Tank.

When the British started their tank drive against the Hindenburg line many thought that something new in the line of instruments of warfare had been evolved. Delving back into history, a student of self-propelled vehicles reports that tanks were used in the wars of the fifteenth century by the Italians.

The first armored tank was built and operated by Leonardo da Vinci. His model was crude, but it had an engine, an accelerator, transmission, and drive shaft, all parts of the modern motor vehicle. The engine had human connecting rods, slaves being used to turn the crankshaft. The accelerator was a heavy whip. The drive shaft ran half the length of the tank and was geared through a transmission to the rear axle.

The tank was a slow, lumbering vehicle with a company of archers and shield bearers in close formation standing all around the edge of the body. The contraption was used to protect engineers digging trenches.

U. S. Invades Calcutta.

There are more motor cars on the streets of Calcutta than any other kind of vehicle. The number of privately owned cars is said to be about 4,000, and there are approximately 500 taxicabs. It is thought that American cars will soon predominate the strets of India. All the motor cars imported into Calcutta since the signing of the armistice and the removal of the import embargo have been of American manufacture.

Form the habit of taking the trouble when you pull up at a curb to observe what kind of a curb it is. It will save you money.

If it's what the builders call an integral curb, with a "battered" or slanting face, as shown in the upper picture, the car may be driven in close without injury to tires or rims. If it has the ordinary vertical face, keep away. Parking too close means trouble.

The integral curb was first developed in suburban towns north of Chicago, and is rapidly gaining in popularity with road builders.

Good-Bye Dobbin.

Figures compiled by the New York sanitary bureau of the department of health and reported by Harry T. Gardner, secretary of the Automobile Dealers' association, show a great decrease in the number of stables, and, anturally, in the numbers of horses occupying them. In 1917 there were 108,036 horses. The most recent figures show a shrinkage of 32 396 horses.

Chicago, too, shows a falling off in the registration of horse-drawn vehicles under the wheel tax law. In the four years ended May 1, this yeara, the number of such vehicles decreased from 49,582 to 32,489. This diminution of about 34 per cent compared with New York's falling off of about 30 per cent.

Auto Wages Increase.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 6.—Wages in the automotive industry increased from the average weekly individual wage of $18 in 1915 to $17.08 in 1916, $19.54 in 1917, $23.01 in 1918, and $25.74 in 1919, according to figures made public by the federal department of labor.

Women Build Roads.

Shortage of male labor at Lecompton, Kas., recently resulted in a feminine addition to the contingent. The unusual sight of women swinging pickaxes, wielding scythes, and smoothing out ruts on the roadway was witnessed, and as a result Lecompton roads are all in good shape now.

A Market at Last.

A great opportunity for the sale of satisfactory signaling devices seems to have been opened in California, as its new motor vehicle law, which went into effect last month, provides such positive regulations regarding signaling when about to turn or stop as to make it practically imperative for closed cars and trucks to be equipped with some approved signal device.

The law on signaling provides that extending the arm horizontally beyond the side of the vehicle toward which the turn is to be made indicates a turn in that direction. Extending the arm vertically, with the hand pointing upward, indicates a turn in the direction opposite to the side from which such signal is given. Intention to stop or abruptly check speed is indicated by extending the hand and arm out from and beyond the side of the vehicle and pointing in a downward direction. The arm signal must be visible from the rear.

If not so visible, by reason of construction of the car or otherwise, the car must be equipped with a mechanical or electrical device certified as adequate by the motor vehicle department.

Trucks Make Good.

Des Moines, Ia., Sept. 6.—The motor truck development tour of the National Association of Truck Sales Managers has completed its third week.

The tour is getting down to practical work in hauling goods to, from, and about the farm, and at practically every stop lectures on motor haulage are delivered.

The enterprise so aroused enthusiasm among Iowa dealers that it was decided to hold a state truck tour, leaving Des Moines Oct. 13.

Certified by Goodrich More Mileage Adjustment

WHENEVER you buy anything, something measures it out, certifying how much of it you get. It may be by count, by a yardstick, or a pair of scales.

¶ The tire user has settled on the mile as his measuring unit of service.

¶ Goodrich, accepting his measurement, certifies both the quality and quantity of Goodrich Tires with the Goodrich More-Mileage Adjustment—6,000 miles for Fabric Tires—8,000 for Silvertown Cords.

¶ Goodrich is making big, powerful, enduring tires, the best Goodrich's long experience and skill can produce. It has pleased thousands of Goodrich dealers and users to tell us they "are the best tires the rubber industry has produced."

¶ At every step in making these tires, relentless inspection, watchful of Goodrich's good name, is on guard to see that each tire comes forth physically fit, truing up to the high quality set for Goodrich Tires.

¶ Then Goodrich Certification steps in, and measures out to the tire user in his own unit the least he with proper usage will get from a Goodrich Tire.

¶ It gives tire users the peak standard, at once a gauge to appraise the value of other tires, and a surety bond for the Goodrich Tires he is buying.

INSURANCE MEN.

Also commercial or specialty salesmen looking for the livest, snappiest selling proposition ever gotten out, should write at once for contract to sell new policy, Form 205. Good districts and towns open everywhere. Large first commissions, perpetual renewals, square deal contract.

New, unique selling plan produces large, immediate cash earnings of $100 to $200 per week. Insurance experience not necessary if you are a seller. Men now with us making this money and at the same time building up a big, nonforfeitable future renewal income.

This new policy marks a new era in accident-sickness insurance. It is in a class by itself. There is no policy in existence which even begins to compare with it. It gives absolute, full, clean-cut, unrestricted coverage, and on top of that possesses twenty-five points of positive superiority over any other policy of any other company.

A few of these points are:

1. Both accident and sickness coverage in full force from date of issue.
2. Accident covering clause specifies simply "Accidental Bodily Injuries." The obnoxious wording "External, Violent or Accidental Means," or even "Accidental Means" not used in this policy.
3. At slight extra cost policy made noncancelable from date of issue.
4. Absolute freedom from all obnoxious and ambiguous phrases, such as "independently of all other causes," "solely," "directly," "exclusively," etc.
5. Quarterly or annual premiums. If paid annually, accidental death benefit increased 50 per cent from date of issue.
6. Accidental death benefit doubled for all travel accidents.
7. Specific lump sum payments include loss of speech, loss of hearing, rigid joints and other new features.
8. Accident disability not required to be immediate from date of accident.

Seventeen other equally strong and original exclusive features. This policy is 20 years ahead of anything else on the market. It places disability insurance on the same high plane as life insurance. No medical examination.

Best of all, the rate is only $10 quarterly for a policy providing $5,000 death and $25 a week for any accident or sickness. Proportionately low cost for larger or smaller policies. Strong million dollar stock company, legal reserve, guaranteed fixed cost, no assessments. Can you sell it? You'll say you can! Apply direct to home office, by letter only, Department 205, Suite 411 Commerce Bldg., Kansas City, Mo.

25 SALESMEN.

$25,000 A YEAR AND UP.

IN REAL MONEY.

A few of our salesmen in the last year have made as much as $50,000. About a dozen others have made better than $25,000. Needless to say we have had perhaps the best paying sales proposition in the country and one of the hardest for the average man to sell.

A few weeks ago we put a sales plan into operation of having high powered, experienced salesmen do closing for new men in the field, which enabled a much larger percentage to make good. The last week we have put into effect a new sales plan which makes business incomparably easier to secure. This plan makes a sale step by step, and the strain is taken off of every step all the way through. By this plan it is a very simple matter to create prospects, and we pay the salesman a bonus of $50 on each prospect as soon as they are qualified. Without the payment of any money on the part of a prospect, or without obligation to buy, we then pay his expenses on an attractive inspection tour, costing hundreds of dollars.

We have a line-up which makes any salesman better than $25,000 a year who will qualify only two prospects a week. One new man, who answered a recent Tribune advertisement, qualified two this week, the first day he was in the field. The consensus of opinion of new and old salesmen is five prospects a week. Your commission on each prospect who buys averages considerably better than $500, and in the past, under much more difficult conditions, we have closed better than four out of five. If you want to become a real money maker stop and figure out the earnings of a salesman for yourself.

Don't get the idea that we claim to have something that sells itself. Even our new plan calls for both the highest degree of salesmanship and a thorough knowledge of our proposition, which it takes two or three days to acquire. We are spending in the development end of our business better than a quater of a million dollars in conjunction with this new sales plan, and we want 25 more men in the field quick to produce prospects to take advantage of this expenditure. We prefer men who have made $10,000 a year or better, and you must have made $5,000 and expenses or better to qualify. Above everything else, we require men who recognize an opportunity when they see it, and who are ready to grasp it, men who can appreciate a proposition and can talk it fearlessly, convincingly and positively when they know it, men of the red-blooded, go-getter, self-starting, hammer and tongs type. We are not interested in any one who is not of this type, and who is not in dead earnest.

From the way this caliber of men take to our proposition, we believe we would have no difficulty in securing their services on half the commission we pay, but we want to develop the livest and strongest organization in this country, and we are offering the remuneration we do in order to do it quick.

When you call you will find we occupy four floors of a good sized building in the loop, which bears our name. A commercial agency report shows that we have assets of more than four million dollars.

If you think that you can qualify to become a part of an aggregation of live wires, are ready to tear in as soon as you are shown, and ready to show us as we are willing to show you, address, with an outline of your experience and earnings (otherwise no attention will be paid to your letter), or call between 9 and 11 a. m. or 2 and 3:30 p. m., Suite 301, 109 N. Dearborn-st.

PROPHETIC.
You will do well to cut this out and put it where it will not be overlooked.

For many years we have been prophesying that the careful, discriminating, homeseeking residents of Cook county would see the great advantages of the North Lake Shore as the choice residential district of the county for all time, and the tremendous movement in that way from all parts of the county at the present time is sufficient proof that we were right.

The fact that we have but one steam line, the Chicago & N. W. R. R., traversing that district, insures us freedom from large manufacturing plants with the accompanying soot, cinders, and unpleasant odors; and also the paralyzing effect on local community interests of "strikes" and "lockouts," which are constantly recurring in all heavy manufacturing districts. This one argument alone, aside from the advantage of the lake frontage and the abundant native forest shade trees, sufficiently explains the great present popularity of this Lake Shore country.

We make a specialty of high grade homes and vacant, including lake frontage with riparian rights, both at our Evanston office and at 40 N. Dearborn-st. We have at this time 200 feet of very choice lake frontage at Wilmette, which can be bought for several thousand dollars less than its real value. Also choice homes at $11,000, $16,000, and $20,000.

You will do well to get particulars of these. Our local representative, H. G. Drury, 622 Central-av., phone 41 Wilmette, will be pleased to show you these properties on appointment.

40 N. Dearborn-st. Cent. 227.

DAVIDSON DISTRICT,
SASK., CANADA.

Thrashing is in full swing now. Another good crop maintains our record of 16 years without failure. Parties going now are seeing better crops per acre on our $30 to $60 per acre land than have been raised this year on land down here worth nearly ten times as much. Further argument is unnecessary. The time to ponder is past. Now is the time to act if you don't want to lose the opportunity to get land in the last new country where land is still cheap and can be bought on easy 6% terms. You know what values have done here. Activity is commencing in earnest at Davidson now. Farms often pay for themselves in one and two crops. Living conditions absolutely modern in every way.

Excursion rates every Tuesday. Write for particulars and literature.

It is a passing opportunity if you delay.

Irrigated Land Opportunities
In Famous Arkansas Valley of Colorado.

A good irrigated farm with perpetual water rights established is waiting for you in Colorado at a very low price.

Reservoir now under construction and expected to be completed by next spring will water 20,000 acres of exceptionally rich and deep soil near Fowler, Colo., in the famous Rocky Ford neighborhood.

Corn, wheat, alfalfa, beans, milo maize, kaffir corn, sorghum are grown now by irrigation. Splendid cantaloupes and watermelons, also big yields of sugar beets can be grown.

Water rights under mutual control of land owners—essentially a farmers' organization—but company itself has no land to sell. Farmers will sell some present holdings cheap to better handle intensive farming under increased irrigation available with new reservoir.

There is very little low priced irrigated land left. Write at once if you would like to know about some of it.

ANOTHER LETTER

LAST SUNDAY we published a letter from a successful dairyman and here is another letter from a settler in the Swigart Tract who is a successful poultry man. These letters, telling what the settlers are actually accomplishing TODAY in the Swigart Tract should be much more convincing to the land seeker than many pages of statements as to what might be accomplished at some future time. Mr. Frost's letter follows:

Free Soil, Mich.,
July 3, 1919.

Swigart Land Co.,
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:

IT HAS been quite a while since I have written to you in regard to my success on the land I purchased from you. You will remember three years ago I started here considerably in debt, but with your help I now have a stock of 1,000 chickens, the eggs from which bring me a nice income. I still ship most of my eggs to Chicago, where I get the top price, as my eggs are fine. I am proud to say I have started a nice bank account, and about three weeks ago I paid the balance of my indebtedness.

I HAVE had much better success here in Michigan than on the high priced land in Indiana, which was my former home. My garden produces fine tomatoes, beets, radishes, onions, carrots, potatoes, beans, watermelons, muskmelons, sweet corn, peas, and this year I experimented and raised some excellent tobacco. We seldom have to buy anything for the table except coffee, sugar, salt, pepper, etc.

WHEN I settled here my health was very poor, and people said I would not live long; but I must say at the present time I would keep a good healthy man fairly busy in a wrestling match. Mrs. Frost and myself are enjoying perfect health.

AT FIRST my nearest neighbor was one mile away, but now I have three neighbors within 40 to 80 rods, and within a mile I have six neighbors. They are all doing well and are satisfied.

I BELIEVE this is one of the best places for poultry of any section of the country. My flock is healthy and happy, and lays fine.

I THANK YOU very much for past favors, and I will always have a good word to say for the Swigart Land Company.

Yours very truly,
[Signed] J. E. FROST.

Mr. Frost started in poor health and in debt, but after only three years he has regained his health, is independent, and has started a nice bank account. This is a good start for most any one, and he accomplished it mainly because he bought his land from the Swigart Land Company, which company renders real service to its land buyers, and has been following this policy for years.

We are offering you the same chance now. We have several thousand acres of hardwood land in Michigan's best counties, for $15 to $30 per acre, on very easy terms if desired. You may have any size tract you want, from 10 to 160 acres, or more, for stock raising. No swamps or stones, and pure water everywhere—numerous beautiful lakes and swift running streams full of fish.

Grow big crops of clover, oats, corn, alfalfa, wheat, potatoes, beans, rye and all kinds of fruits and vegetables. Our lands are located near good markets, schools, churches, railroads, also telephones and rural mail delivery. We employ expert farm advisers to help you plant the right crops in the right way. We loan you money to help you build and to buy live stock. A Michigan law exempts you from taxes for five years while clearing your land, and this company gives free insurance to settlers while they are paying for the land, protecting them in case of death.

Take hold of this proposition in earnest and at once. Help yourself along. How much better off will you be in three years if you don't make a start of this kind now?

Take the first step in the direction of your own farm home by writing today for our big free booklet telling you all about this country. Join one of our excursions to the lands. You will meet many fine people on the same errand. Ask for dates and rates.

REALITY

LIFE MEANS FIGHT. In this fight the fittest will survive and become ancestors of a still fitter generation. True men and women love life, want to live and do not shirk this fight: struggle, pain, sorrow, misfortune on one side and peace, pleasure, happiness, good fortune on the other. As life is, so are all things connected therewith—some good—some bad. Whether city life or country life, the same rule govens; still, there is possibly something in favor of the latter with its fewer excitements and less unhappiness. It is in the city you find the maelstrom of grinding extreme contrasts; unleashed happiness and black despair. However, true men and women never shirk their duties nor fear realities. A full understanding of Life's problems gives them courage to face all things. Therefore, lay your future plans on the foundation of facts. Avoid dreams and do not trust pictures.

WHEN YOU READ THESE COLUMNS IN SEARCH OF A HOME, REMEMBER EACH AD IS A PICTURE. THE PICTURE MAY BE TRUE, BUT DO NOT BUY ON THE BASIS OF A PICTURE ALONE. GET FACTS. PLACE YOURSELF FACE TO FACE WITH REALITY; INVESTIGATE IN A COLD BLOODED, DELIBERATE WAY. A TRUE PICTURE IS A RARE THING. REMEMBER THE STORY OF THE PAINTER WHO PAINTED A FRUIT-BEARING GRAPE VINE ON HIS CANVAS SO WELL THAT THE BIRDS WERE DECEIVED, FLEW AGAINST IT, AND FELL TO THE GROUND DEAD FROM THE SHOCK. REALITY IN THIS CASE WOULD POSSIBLY NOT HAVE LOOKED AS ALLURING, BUT IT WOULD NOT HAVE KILLED THE BIRDS, AND REALITY WILL NOT KILL YOU UNTIL NATURE CALLS.

We Could Here Promise

you a "Picture Farm" and disappoint you. We could draw a word picture that would set you dreaming of balmy breezes, beautiful trees, winding roads, pretty houses, lowing cattle, cackling chickens, and growing fields. It would be possible to write about sunny skies, singing birds, flowers, milk, butter, eggs, fruits, honey, health, happiness, hammocks, and leisure, and everything else that makes a man or woman think of peace and happiness, but we prefer to call your attention to REALITY. All the good things mentioned may be yours finally if you come to the cutover lands of Northern Wisconsin, but it will take a struggle, it will take good, hard work, it will take the best that is in you the same way as in all walks of life it will take the best that is in all of us to make success.

The Proposition We Offer

will yield you a living to begin with, comfort as you progress, and security in the end. We do not advertise, nor do we sell counterfeit farms. We sell rich, productive cutover lands which are worthy of your best efforts and which will not disappoint you if you will work and stick.

Our Illustrated Folder, which you may have for the asking, paints a picture as true to nature as it is possible to paint it, but we want you to investigate it carefully. Be sure you face REALITY before you decide and before you act. No matter where you go, consult the State Agriculture Departments. The counterfeit farm of Northern Wisconsin would soon cease to be if a little precaution is taken.

OUR LANDS

are located in the Oconto River Valley, Forest and Oconto Counties, Wis. They are close to railroad towns, schools, roads, etc. Our prices range from $20 to $30 per acre for agricultural land. Stony land is sold at much lower prices as grazing land. Sandy and swampy land unfit for agriculture we do not offer for sale.

Sales Plans Nos. 1 and 2.

1. WE BUILD YOU A HOUSE AND BARN. FURNISH COW, CALF, PIGS, SHEEP, CHICKENS, FRUIT TREES, TOOLS. WE ALSO FURNISH DYNAMITE ON CREDIT FOR BLASTING STUMPS AND RENT YOU CLEARING AND FARMING MACHINERY. ON THIS PLAN WE REQUIRE $500 DOWN, WITH NO FURTHER PAYMENT FOR FIVE YEARS.

2. LAND WITHOUT IMPROVEMENTS: $25 DOWN, $10 TO $15 PER MONTH, OR ANNUAL PAYMENTS OF $100 DOWN AND $120 PER YEAR ON 40 ACRES. WHEN $500 IS PAID WE GIVE YOU THE BENEFITS OF CREDIT PLAN IN SALES PLAN NO. 1.

"BEAUTY DAN" FOR SALE

SMARTEST CAR ON THE BOULEVARDS

My "Beauty Dan"—a Daniels "8"—is the center of attraction wherever he goes. A six passenger sport model with a racy custom built body. Finished in Napoleon blue with classy khaki top, Rudge-Whitworth Wire Wheels, seat covers.

Driven 9,000 miles, mostly on boulevards. Has 6 wheels and six 33x5 Goodyear Cord Tires. Four have run 3,000 miles, two extras never used.

Looks like new. Not a scratch or a dent. With equipment now on cost, $4,800.

For business reasons I bought another car. Can't use both. So I'm going to let "Beauty Dan" go at a price that's shamefully low; $2,800 cash takes him on the spot.

If you want a wonderful car at a wonderful price see "Beauty Dan." Demonstration by appointment. Phone Monticello [illegible] Sunday or Majestic 8534 Monday.
